NEW PASTOR WAS INDUCTED

At St. Andrew's Church, Received, This Week

The ordination into the ministry of the Gospel of the Rev. E. J. Wolland, B.D., and his induction into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in this village, took place Wednesday afternoon.

The service, which was of a most impressive and fitting character, was opened at 2.30 The Rev. George I. Craw of Springville, read the Scripture lesson from the third Chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, and afterwards from the 6th verse of the same chapter, preached an appropriate and able discourse.

Following this, the Rev. Hugh Brown of Warsaw, Moderator of the Presbytery, took charge, and called upon the Rev. D. A. Thomson, interim Moderator, to narrate the steps in connection with the call. The Moderator then proceeded to ask the usual questions, which, being answered satisfactorily, Mr. Wolland was thereupon ordained with the laying on of the hands of the members of the Presbytery present, into the holy ministry, and inducted into the pastorate of the Church.

Rev. R. Pogue of Peterborough then addressed the newly inducted minister, and the Rev. H. J. Keith of Peterborough addressed the people, in very appropriate terms.

Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D., pastor of the Methodist Church, was present, and on behalf of his people, extended a hearty welcome to the newly inducted brother minister.

During the service Mrs. N. C. Porter sang a beautiful solo.

At the close of the proceedings the Rev. D. A. Thomson and Mr. Richard Nicoll, elder, accompanied Mr. Wolland to the doorway of the Church, where he was introduced to the people as they retired.

A reception, with refreshments served, was held in the school-room immediately afterwards to which the congregation and friends were cordially welcomed.

WEAR "SCHILLER COLLAR."

Berlin Youths and Men Adopt Unconventional Garb.

BERLIN, July 18.—American tourists his summer are getting some amusement from the prevailing craze among youths and men here for going about the streets wearing white linen or flannel shirts, worn wide-open at the neck with flaring wide-brimmed sailor collars. The fashion is known as the Schiller collar, because it reproduces the neckdress made familiar to Germans by the most popular picture of the poet.

German papers in commenting on the fashion express the hope that it will be confined to the tennis court, the seaside, or the athletic field, where it is in place.

Decollette men, nevertheless, are seen in Berlin everywhere, at all hours of the day and night. They promenade Unter-den-Linden, visit cafes and the race courses, and even go to the theatre.

A young German, who was accosted in front of the Adlon the other day by a New Yorker, who smiled at his Schiller collar, retorted that it was probably just as ridiculous in American eyes as this year's American sugar-loaf straw hat seemed to Germans.

ACCOUNT OF AN OLD-TIME PRIZE FIGHT

...struggle had been lasted over ... hours. The Limerick lad soon ... to come gamely to the scratch, ... unable to ... his opponent. ... time in the stopping ... started bowed in a stream ... his temper, which was so ... flattened as to be indistinguishable. He had spit out his front ... and his lips were so battered ... he could only mumble and ... his head when the backer, Sir ... asked if he had had enough and refused to forfeit the stakes. ... case was hardly fought ... fair. ... lamp opens up that he ... still see, but, with ... ... was unable to strike a ... blow. In the sixty-seventh ... the Piper caught the ... around the neck, and ... him with a cross-buttock, ... him so heavily that he was ... completely senseless, and, ... it was not until several hours ... that he showed any sign of ... under the ministrations of his ...."

That is an account of a prize fight ... fought in England more than ... years ago. Is it any wonder that the old prize ring produced ... bulldogs instead of men?

In these days prize fighting was ... as illegal as it is to-day. Prize ... fought in secret, with few ... on, with bare fists and also to a finish. It was a brutal sport, ... the fighting spirit in men must ... some outlet, and prize fighting ... through hundreds of years. ... last great prize fight on record ... that between John L. Sullivan ... Jake Kilrain in Mississippi, 25 ... ago this month, July 8, 1889. ... Sullivan won in 75 rounds. A sound, ... London prize ring rules, terminated when either man was down, ... a fight ended only when one ... unable to "come to the scratch" ... a minute's rest.

Sullivan was finishing his ... as a boxing champion, box... with gloves was coming into ... popularity. The rules were changing. ... Marquis of Queensbury rules ... eliminated the gouging, biting, chancery, cross-buttocking, bare knuckle fighting. Padded gloves were used ... three-minute rounds and ten ... rest after a knockdown. This ... rest was much more merci... A man would have to be terribly beaten to be rendered unable to ... to the scratch" in a full minute. But the ordinary glove blow ... stuns or makes a boxer helpless ... ten seconds is not likely to do any ... harm. In nine cases out of ten a ... knock-out boxer is on his feet and ... anxious to continue a few seconds after the end of the count.

Grows in Popularity.

In the past few years glove contests have become immensely popular ... over the world. ... America, ... England, France, Australia, Belgium, ... Italy, Russia, Switzerland, Germany, ... some of the South American countries have boxing ... ... their ... cities.

With the growing popularity of ... each country has made laws ... the sport until now a ... contest is entirely unlike the ... ring battles of former days.

The greatest change is in the character of the men who take part in ... contests. Years ago a prize-fighter was a professional brute, ... and shunned by respectable people. To-day a ring champion is ... upon as a successful athlete, ... received in any company. This ... particularly true in Australia, where the professional boxer is classed with the greatest amateur cricketers and tennis and football players, and respected accordingly.

During the past few years boxing has been one of the most lucrative professions. And that has drawn a far more intelligent class of young men into the boxing ranks. The psychology of the boxer has changed entirely. In the old days fighters were lawbreakers, furtively meeting in out of the way places, always in fear of arrest and imprisonment. They were surrounded by other lawbreakers, thugs and pickpockets and crooks of various kinds. They fought like beasts and they were beasts when their fighting was over. The professional prize fighter's ambition was to win a stake and blow it in on a boisterous boozing spree with his cronies. The place to find a champion then was in the common groggeries and low resorts of the cities.

No Brutality In It.

To-day when one wishes to find a visiting champion he goes to the best hotel. And instead of a roaring, blustering ruffian he finds a neatly dressed ... ... low-voiced young fellow who looks like a well groomed and prosperous business man, and who differs from many business men in that the strongest liquid refreshment he will take is a glass of water.

Boxing has become a legitimate profession, with great rewards for the successful. Its brutal features have been eliminated, but it is still the most strenuous form of personal conflict. It is no molly-coddle sport. A perfect body and a keen mind are absolutely necessary. No boxer can go far without them. And the public has been educated to the point where the boxer who dissipates is merely despised and looked down upon as a fool. The idea of glorifying the fellow who gets drunk and throws his money into the gutter, or scatters it at a race track, died out long ago. In the old days any one could name a score of temporarily famous fighters who were notorious for their carousals. To-day there isn't one.

Clean living and hard work make champions. Success goes only with clean living; the competition is too keen for anything else. This is the same idea that is urged by the promoters of schoolboy athletics, who are doing a wonderful work for the improvement of the race in this country.

The old style, reckless fighters have all disappeared, or are fast going and nearly forgotten. Their places have been taken by men like McFarland, Welsh, Ritchie, Gunboat Smith, Cross, Mandot, Williams, McGroorty, Jeff Smith, Chip, Carpentier, Gibbons, Jeanette, McAllister, Robideau, Shugrue, Wells, Ledour, Clabby, Tommy Murphy, Dundee, Kilbane, Reich—splendid fellows, every one of them; clean living, decent and intelligent. The thick-necked, prognathous, reckless crowd is gone because it has been whipped out of existence by men who live like Greek athletes, the greatest men in the history of the world. The ancient Greeks had the highest athletic ideals. Athletic competition with them was almost a religious ceremony. A competitor in the Olympic championships held at Olympus had to go before the authorities a year before the games and take an oath that he would not in any way break training during the whole year. From that time on he trained under supervision of the state, and to break his oath of training meant disgrace and banishment from Greece.

The improvement in "class" of our fighting men is an indication that some time our ideals may be as high as those of the Greeks themselves.

Fourth Annual Tournament

The fourth annual tournament of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association will be staged on the grounds of the Peterborough Club, commencing Monday, August 3rd, at 9:30 a.m.

Invitations are being sent out to bowling clubs of Central Ontario, and it is expected a large number of travellers will be on hand.

The Peterborough Club will endeavor to defend the Sergison trophy, won last year, as two consecutive wins lands the silverware for keeps. Along with this trophy goes four thermos sets, and second prize is four cut-glass water pitchers and a half a dozen glasses. This is the premier event, and stiff competition is assured. All games except the final of 21 ends, will be 12 ends.

The consolation prizes are: First, four thermos bottles; second, four cut-glass berry bowls; third, four pairs of brass candlesticks. The following gentlemen have been asked to act as umpires, to decide all questions or disputes:

A. Lambert, Oshawa; J. Deyman, Bowmanville; Dr. Aldrich, Port Hope; D. Moore, Peterborough; E. W. Hargraft, Cobourg; R. Kerr, Toronto; Dr. McWilliams, Toronto; J. C. Kells, Millbrook.

W. Allan, of Cobourg, is President of the Association, and R. P. Soden, of Peterborough, is Secretary-Treasurer.

BASEBALL

The Brewerstown ball field was the scene of wild disorder, when eight 12, or thirteen organized ball players joined the Federal ranks. The game in which the Brewerstown Wonders were defeated for the first time in history by the Drawbridgetown, was the cause of the rebellion, when the gate receipts were too small to meet the demands of the Wonders. So on Saturday next the Brewerstown Federals will meet the Brewerstown organized men, under Lefty Louie McDonald. The Federal line-up will be: Mgr. M. Frost 1st., Beaumard 2nd, Thomson s.s., Skuse 3rd, Bartley p., A. Frost c., S. Hopkins r.f., Theobald m., Jackson l.f. Admission 50c. Children accompanied by parents free. Water boy wanted. Apply to Mgr. Frost or the Brewerstown directors.

Cold Cherry Pudding.

For cherry time try this old-fashioned pudding for a delicious dessert. Stone a pint of cherries, chop very fine, add half a cup of powdered sugar and let stand one hour. Put a pint of milk in the double boiler, add eight ounces of sugar, stir until the sugar is dissolved; when cold, add one pint of cream and two drops of cochineal. Turn the mixture into a freezer and freeze until stiff, allowing it to stand one and a half or two hours. At serving time stir in the cherries and serve in glasses at once.

She Loved The Lake

"Bathing suits!" cried the girl in the orange coloured coat, "And you bring that one?"

"I'm so glad you came along!" declared the girl in the panama hat. "I can't decide between this one with the cute ruffles and that with the draped skirt".

"One will get just as wet as the other," suggested the young woman in the orange coat. "I thought you said you'd never go to Whizzard lake again, that it was tiresome and stupid."

"My dear," said the purchaser of the bathing suit in shocked protest. "I am sure you have misunderstood me! Dear old Whizzard lake! Why, when I look back it seems to me that all the good times I ever had centre there! We know every one and it's just like one big family! I—"

"That's what you said," persisted her friend. "When you came back last fall you said you never saw such a nest of busybodies in your life and that you wouldn't be caught dead there again! What happened!

"I don't know what you are talking about, I am sure!" said the girl in the panama hat. "It's such a healthful, restful place! And such a nice class of people go there!"

"Who's the man?"

"Adeline," said the young woman in the panama hat, "sometimes I am provoked at you! You always attribute some dark, dreadful motive. And I am attached to the place! It is so pretty—"

"You'd better come along with the Graves and our family to the mountains as you had practically promised three months ago," said her friend. "You thought then that it would be lovely and your mother was willing to go, and there were three cottages right in a row that we were to rent. And now this will upset it all! What on earth—"

"You know," said the girl in the panama hat, a trifle pettishly, "I don't believe that I quite—in the world mind that high altitude! My heart isn't especially strong and I don't want to do anything rash!"

"My goodness!" cried her friend, "I never heard about your heart before!"

"Oh, it isn't exactly anything dangerous," explained the girl in the panama hat. "Only you know the high altitudes affect some people! And when it came actually to giving up a whole summer at dear old Whizzard I just couldn't do it! We always had such larks fishing in the early morning and then sailing! I'll never forget the good times in the Burling's sailboat!

"Why, the Burlings haven't been going to Whizzard lake the last two years—since their son has been studying abroad, have they?" asked her friend, "You said—"

"Well, two years aren't anything. It takes more than that to break up friendships at Whizzard!" protested the girl in the panama hat. "And we four Burlings and I always had such beautiful times together! They used to call us the twins because we were continually with each other. Why, I've never would look at another girl when I was around, really! It was almost embarrassing. Of course, I was just a boy and girl affair; still, Arthur did ask—"

"Why, you never told me!" cried the girl in the panama hat. "And for ever so long!"

The girl in the panama hat tried to smile patiently. "I don't tell all my affairs to the public," she said sweetly. "And, anyhow, ... nothing to do with it! ... people besides the Burlings go to Whizzard Lake and it is the ... of the whole place that makes me! Of course, I shall be nice to Arthur this summer. He is through his ... work this year, and I hear that they will open up the old place again—"

"Well, I don't see how," announced the girl in the orange coat. "My uncle is a real estate man and he told me yesterday that the Burlings have just sold their Whizzard Lake property and are going to the mountains after this—"

"What mountains?" gasped the girl in the panama hat, letting the bathing suit drop.

"I'm not so crazy about Whizzard Lake that I want to upset all your plans, dear! Come on home with me and talk mother into taking a cottage in the mountains with your folks."

ANNIE LOUISE CARY

And Her Favourite "Robin Adair"

The indisputable queen of song in her day was Annie Louise Cary. She was one of the world's famous contraltos when she retired from the operatic stage at the very height of her career in opera. She retained the sweet, wholesome characteristics of the American girl all during her musical triumphs. She made her debut in Copenhagen, although she studied in Milan. For three years she delighted European audiences before making her appearance in America. For over twelve years, with the exception of a brief European tour, she delighted American audiences with the charms of her voice and personality. But to hear her sing "Robin Adair," that simple old song, and the masterpiece of Arthur Sullivan's "The Last Chord," and Longfellow's "The Day is Done," with the rich tones of the happy, good-natured personality that always charmed, she always left the audience breathless and spellbound.

"Robin Adair," "The Last Chord," and many other favourites of Cary, are to be found in "Heart Songs," now being distributed to the readers of this paper. See Coupon elsewhere in this issue for terms.

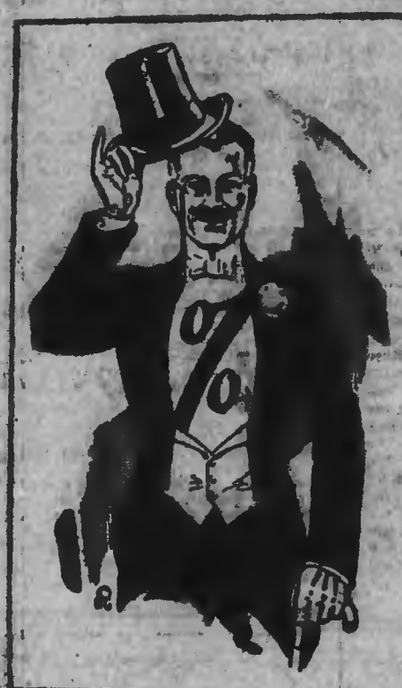
There was such a demand for the Heart Songs that we had to discontinue inserting the coupon. We have now on hand a further supply, and the coupon will run for two weeks. If you desire a copy, save the coupons and together with 25c. you will get a $3.00 book.

GET BUSY, LIBERALS!

(Brantford Expositor)

However, with the certain knowledge that a federal election will be held next year, Liberals through the country should get their candidates into the field immediately and plans be completed for a first-class organization. The recent election in Ontario demonstrated once again that contests cannot be won by candidates placed in the field at the eleventh hour. In those constituencies, such as the Brants, for example, where the Liberals nominees were early chosen, victories were won and profit should be taken for this lesson. There will be the issues to fight for next election ... Liberals have every reason to face the contest with a buoyant spirit, but let the organization be completed.

"Count Discount" Is a Sign Of Twenty-Five Per Cent Reductions



"The Count" is a scion of the House of Percé N. T.

ONE of our Competitors has said that this "Count Discount" idea was crazy. We will admit that "Count Discount" is off—25 per cent off in the way of reductions on this very heavy stock. But "Count Discount" isn't raving—he is saving—dollars for you. Savings is the way it should be spelled here. If you ever had a chance to save dollars on good wearing apparel it is right here now. You not only save on the actual dollars you spend, but you also save on the extra clothes service that such good qualities as we offer are bound to give you. You better take advantage of the saving this crazy idea offers to you. You know everyone that ever startled the world was first considered crazy. Galileo who said the world was round was considered crazy. So was Columbus who proved it. We must have started something in new bargain offerings and we will finish it, too, until this stock is cleared out. Get the benefits of 25 per cent—and more.

SAYS PETES WANTED A BIG LEAGUE PRICE FOR PITCHER LOUIE SCHETTLER

Manager Shaughnessy Tells Ottawa Papers That the Price Asked Was Too High—$1,000 For Sterling

WANTED CRESSWELL TOO

Ottawa Journal—Manager Shaughnessy is still on the hunt for twirlers, and announces that he has a couple now in view. Both are experienced men and are twirling in a Class C league at the present time.

The big manager attempted to make a dicker with the Peterborough club for Schettler, but could not do business with them. The Petes also backed out of any other deals for a twirler. Shaw had a couple of deals nearly completed when the Lift Lock management shied and side-stepped the proposition.

"They wanted major league prices for any of their pitchers," Shag remarked, "and, after I agreed to take one twirler, they turned around and decided that if I needed him, they did too. Then they backed out of the agreement. For the price they wanted for Schettler I could go out and buy some experienced men in the National or American league."

Ottawa Free Press—Though it rained heavily this morning and during a portion of the night, the Ottawas will play the first game of the series against Toronto this afternoon providing the wet stuff "lays off" this afternoon. The Senators returned home this morning after taking two out of three from Peterborough. Manager Shaughnessy is limping around with a badly wrenched ankle received sliding into the plate on Monday. He will be on the bench, but not in uniform this afternoon. Petie Powers is taking his place in centre.

Shag offered to buy a pitcher from Peterborough, and like other clubs of the Canadian League, they immediately thought the manager was trying to put one over. They agreed on a price for Lifty Cresawell, although he would not be of much use to the champions then when the deal was about to go through, they reneged. They offered Sterling for $1,000. It's a cinch the whole Peterborough club would be purchased at the end of the season for twice that amount.

Ed. Rogers' arm appears to have come back and he stated to-day it felt better than at any time this season. If he can take his turn on the rubber, a pitcher can be dispensed with for a while.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Ottawa Free Press—If Ottawa ever overtakes London, it will have to be during the month of August when the Cockneys have fourteen games on the road in addition to three or four postponed games. Ottawa has no less than twenty games at home during August and these two conditions should work out a pretty close finish between the two clubs around by September 1st. London's great success in the past three weeks has been her ability to take three straight series on the road, one from Brantford, another from Hamilton and a third from St. Thomas. Had any of those three teams performed up to the standard, the Cockneys would by no means be so far in front.

President McCaffery is congratulating himself right and left these days on account of the fine work of the Beavers, and though the club will not make any money for him, he figures that he will develop enough good players to cover up any losses that he may sustain in keeping the Canadian Leaguers going. He believes that Auld, Graham, Trout, Killilea, Hunt and perhaps one or two others will be fit for higher company next year. Mr. McCarthy has already received some good offers for Trout and Auld, but it is not his intention to part with this pair. Trout now leads the Canadian League in batting, with the mighty average of .375. Auld is the real leader among the pitchers. Hunt, the High School outfielder, also looks like a promising prospect.

Hamilton Spectator:

The Hamilton Baseball Club directors and Manager White are confronted with another bit of trouble, with player Gilhooley again causing the rumpus. Gilhooley is the player who was suspended some time ago for indifferent playing. At that time it was felt by some of the fans and by the press that there was room for reasonable doubt in his case, and finally, at the command of Secretary Farrell, of the National Association, to whom Gilhooley carried his troubles, Gilhooley was finally reinstated. An effort was made to trade him, but his services were in demand, and when Cunningham and Broadbent met with their accidents he was used in the game, playing regularly until early in the first game yesterday, when Manager White yanked him for loafing.

White's action was justified, and there is now no room for any argument as to what punishment the player deserves. Manager White thinks that Gilhooley loafs on the play and the people in attendance at the game are of the same opinion. They gave him a rather bad reception as he returned to the payers' bench at the end of the inning, and indicated only too plainly that he has lost all friends he ever had in this City. Gilhooley's actions yesterday were very bad, and indefinite suspension is mild treatment for him. That the directors of the club will likely carry the matter to Secretary Farrell is only too evident.

For the benefit of those who were not in attendance at the game it might be said that in the sixth inning of the first game with one man on base and two out, Gygi, the Erie manager, hit a liner to right field. Gilhooley let the ball get past him and it rolled to the fence, with the player trotting leisurely after it, making no attempt to field the ball in any kind of snappy fashion, with the result that Gygli was able to complete the circuit and score. No fault was found with Gilhooley for the error in letting the ball get away from him, such things happen to the best of players. He had, however, no chance for any alibi for the manner in which he jogged after the ball. He was being paid to field his position, not to take any vacation. If it is rest that he is after, the club should give him an opportunity to enjoy it at ease.

ENGLAND WILL MAKE BIG EFFORT IN EVENTS AT THE 1916 OLYMPIAD

NEW YORK, July 22.—"Watch England in the next Olympic games," is the warning issued by Mr. Jas. E. Sullivan, the A.A.U. official. The guiding spirit of amateur track and field sport in this country looks for the Britons to take an unexpected hitch in their belt before the next Olympic series at Berlin in 1916, and believes they will cause no little concern for the men of the United States. Despite the fact that four other European nations have engaged some of the best trainers here to prepare their Olympic candidates, Mr. Sullivan does not think they will cause us much trouble. The British, he says, have awakened, and will leave no stone unturned in their desire to defeat the United States, for once, in the Olympic games.

Great work was done by the American representatives at Lyons and Paris, according to Mr. Sullivan. For the first time in the history of the international competition a standard set of rules will govern track and field athletics throughout the world after Jan. 1. Through the efforts of America's delegates this universal code was adopted by the International Federation, and later ratified by the Olympic Congress at Paris.

Penalties will be allotted for false starts in Olympic competition. In the past several instances have been noted where the gun was beaten in Olympic sprints, in which the result might have been different had a fair start been made.

After Jan. 1 the discus, shot and fifty-six pound weight will be universally uniform, and unless bearing the signature of James E. Sullivan will not be regarded as official. Because of this fact the A.A.U. Secretary-Treasurer came in for considerable joshing while in Europe. He could not smoke a cigar or carry a walking stick unless some one inquired, "Does it carry the official signature, Jim?"

No leeway will be allowed shot-putters in the future. Unless they stay in the ring while making their toss they will be disqualified.

Mr. Sullivan expects that about 100 of Europe's best athletic performers will come here next year to compete in the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Many have already given their entries to him.

Applegarth, the wonderful sprinter of England, intimated that he would come here in September for the National championships at Baltimore. Mr. Sullivan saw the British crack run 220 yards in 21 1-5 seconds, around two turns, in the English championship, and says it was the best piece of running he had seen in a long time. He believed Applegarth will have a chance with the best in the world at Berlin.

Because of the ruling which allows only twelve men to be entered from each country in each Olympic event, and limits the starters to six, only eight men for the different contests will be taken over to Berlin. The final tryouts for the Olympic games will be held in 1916 in this city. The usual preliminary trials will take place throughout the country.

At last the definition of an amateur has been cleared up. An amateur will have to be an amateur in every sense of the word in order to compete in Olympic games in coming years. His name cannot be used for advertising purposes, nor can he hope to derive monetary consideration from anything in which his athletic ability may figure. The Europeans have been skeptical for a long time about some of America's amateurs, and decided to make the definition just as strong as possible.

SCHETTLER IS STRIKE-OUT KING

Leads the Canadian League Twirlers in Whiffing Batters

Peterborough has a leader in one department of the game at least. Louie Schettler leading all the League pitchers in strike outs. Up to July 18th Schettler had fanned 111 batsmen. There is no reason to suppose that he is falling down either, as since that date he has fanned 17 in two games. He wiffed eight Senators on Wednesday, and last Saturday caused nine of the Red Sox to carve holes in the air. Schettler has also been one of the stingiest pitchers in the League in bases handing out only 24 passes in 126 1-3 innings. The Ottawa Free Press heading on the report of Wednesday's game reads: "Couldn't Hit the Best Pitcher in the League."

Petes Idle Yesterday

Only Two Games Were Played in the Canadian League

Rain interfered with the Canadian League games yesterday and the Petes were idle at Hamilton. Ottawa beat Toronto at the Capital 5 to 3, with Shocker pitching against Roberts. Dad Stewart had three hits in four times up. With Dorbeck pitching Erie handed London an 9 to 8 beating, hammering Hammond hard. It is likely that double headers will be played at Hamilton and St. Thomas to-day.

GOLF

Sixteen or seventeen enthusiasts braved the elements yesterday and journeyed to Oshawa to play a return match with the Oshawa Golf Club. The game was played in the rain and mist, but despite these drawbacks the players enjoyed themselves as they always do when they go to Oshawa. The result was a defeat for Peterborough, as the appended scores will show:

How They Fight Fire in Turkey.

This is the method of fighting fire in Turkey. In the center of Constantinople a high watchtower has been erected. When the man in the tower sees a blaze the alarm is sounded and the firemen are called to their posts. If they have horses they proceed very leisurely to hitch them to the engines or carts and trot to the fire, but in most cases they have no horses, and the men drag the engines through the streets at a walk. They do not hurry to attach the hose to the hydrant. The captain first finds the owner of the building that is in danger of destruction and finds out how much he will pay to have the fire put out. If the blaze is beyond control the captain approaches the owners of surrounding property and bargains with them for their protection, and of course they pay him liberally.—New York Post.

Poets' Licenses.

The poet was sick at heart. He just had submitted one of his very best productions to an unfeeling editor, who had rebuffed him in these gentle words:

"I wish there was a law about poets' licenses like the dog license law. If I had my way a poet would have to take out a license every year and those who didn't would be killed."—New York Press.

Her Little Composition.

A class was reciting in a school.

"Who can give me," said the teacher, "a sentence in which the words 'bitter end' are used?"

Up jumped a little girl excitedly. "I can, teacher. 'The cat ran under the bureau and the dog ran after her and bit her end.'"

Method in His Generosity.

My husband is awfully good natured. I gave him a beautiful box of cigars for his birthday, and he only smoked one himself and gave all the rest away to his friends.—London Opinion.

His Literary Treasures.

"Jones took me to his rooms to see a collection of rare and curious manuscripts."

"What were they?"

"Receipted tailors' bills."—Cleveland Leader.

A Little Knowledge.

She was the smallest and youngest of the daily parade of those who take Baby out for an airing on Washington Heights, a novice among perambulator propellers. The pram itself was a fair give-away, unpecked by use, newer even than Baby. A first airing, beyond a doubt.

She stooped and marched around in front of the pram, the better to get a view of Him or Her. It was asleep. You could tell it by the mother's smile. But a cloud of worriment chased the smile from her face and worriment grew. It was the misery of doubt and inexperience. Presently she struggled with tears.

There was Baby lying, asleep, mouth wide open like an O, sucking in the breezes from the river. The motherly and experienced one came by just as the mother's anguish welled over.

"Oh," she exclaimed in tears. "I'm dreadfully afraid of germs! And"—pointing to the open mouth—"oughtn't I to close it?"

National Anthem Naturally.

The organist was not lacking in patriotism, yet rebelled when asked to play "The Star-Spangled Banner" at a wedding.

"It is not appropriate," he said.

"Ain't it?" said the bride's father. "Cut all the rest of the programme, if you want to, but stick to that. After me having the hardest kind of a fight to keep Belle's mother from marrying her off to a foreigner! Between Belle and me we won out for an American, and if this ain't the time for the 'Star Spangled Banner,' I'd like to know when that time is."

An Equal Test.

It is an interesting fact that the two studies of arithmetic and geography often seem to be opposed to each other in the affections of school children. Pupils who are particularly proficient in the one are apt to be backward in the other.

A story is told of a youngster who was slow in arithmetic and whose apparent stupidity in this field was a great source of grief to his father, a clever mathematician.

One day when the father and boy were walking out they passed a place where a "learned pig" was on exhibition, and the father took the boy in to see the prodigies that the animal could perform.

"Just look at that!" said the father. "Why, there's a pig that can count and add up numbers! Don't you wish you were as smart as he?"

"Ha!" answered the boy. "Just let me ask him a few questions in geography! I reckon I could beat him at that!"

Told by Sydney Smith.

The late Lord Dudley was a most absentminded man. "One day," says Sydney Smith, "he met me in the street and invited me to meet myself 'Dine with me today; dine with me and I will get Sydney Smith to meet you.' I admitted the temptation held out to me, but said he was engaged to meet me elsewhere. Another time in meeting me he put his arm through mine, muttering, 'I don't mind walking with him a little way; I'll walk with him as far as the end of the street.' He very nearly overset my gravity once in the pulpit. He was sitting immediately under me, apparently very attentive, when suddenly he took up his stick as if he had been in the house of commons and, tapping the ground with it, cried out in a low but very audible whisper, 'Hear, hear!'"

Strong Evidence.

"What makes you think he had been to a drinking party?"

"He came home," sobbed the young wife, "wearing a phonograph horn for a hat."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Stock Markets

A. E. Stratton & Co., Brokers, report the following:

The C.P.R. longs were pinched today when a new low level of 180½ was made. Weakness characterized the whole board with very few exceptions and there were no immediate signs of strength apparent.

C.P.R. again took a dip in the stock market, making another new low record to 180 1-8. Almost all the stocks on the list sustained losses today.

NEW YORK, July 24 — The Stock Market again turned very weak with some stocks selling at new low prices for this move. I advised you to stay short. In fact as already stated, last week, I am absolutely certain and we never say so unless we are, that the "worst is still to come". RK, whose sale I advised, declined to 82 to-day. I expect it go below 50, and the common below 10. KX declined from 30 to 29 1-2, and remains a sale above 30, and the common around 12. LV of which you should be short around 130, sold down to 123 5-8, and it is still a sale around 130 1-2 for a big drop. BG, which you should be short around 168, got down to 161 1-4. It remains a sale around 163. ACP got down to 69 and is still a sale at 69 1-2. Ex-div. UG remains a big sale at 61, CA near 182. You have fair profit if you sold SR at 22; it is still a sale above 21, and SJ 76, CO 44, BO 89, TXO 137, PA 111, Erie 28, NP 109 1-2, or any other active stock that rallies over a point.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Latest reports indicate a continuation of the liquidating readjustment and a raiding market, well bought on reactions. Although there is no bidding, important scale buying is noted in Union Pac., S.P. and Steel. Erie, N.Y.C. S.R., B.O. are all adversely affected by their connections with Morgan interests, who are said to have lost prestige since the New Haven disclosures. Wheat rust reports cause professionals to sell the Northwestern rails. More liquidation is reported pending in B.O., C.A., L.V. and M. O.P., but it may be held for rallies. Miscellaneous gossip refers to the lifting of S.R. to New Haven as a reason for its heaviness, and says C.O. directors are not likely to declare the usual dividend next month. R.I. is reported as having a larger shortage. Talk of support around 60 in Steel is heard.

Grains.—The rust reports are taken advantage of to sell.—New York Financial Bulletin.

For Dry Hair.

It is impossible to arrange the hair attractively if it is dry and split the ends. There is no reason for dry hair if you will practice the following treatment.

Several times a week rub on your scalp a little castor oil. If you wish to make the odour of the oil more pleasant, have the druggist add oil of lavender to it. Do not fail to massage the scalp and brush the hair daily if you wish to restore it to a healthy condition.

Does the freshness of your food mean anything to you?

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

Father and son do not have enough of each other's society. So patent is the fact that Mayor Baker, of Cleveland, has issued a proclamation asking for an increased intimacy and closing with these words:

"If we can begin the new year with the resolve that our sons shall be more our companions and our fathers more our comrades it will add both to the sweetness of our private life and to the value of our citizenship."

Mayor Baker is the first of the 500 mayors of American cities to join officially in the "Father and Son" movement started in Cleveland, and which has now gone east as far as Bangor, Me., and west as far as Denver.

The average father and son are pretty good comrades up to the time that the boy becomes of High School age. They play together and work together. One sees them taking long walks on Sunday and going fishing on holidays. The boy can have a better time with his "dad" than with any of his playmates, and as for "dad," he would rather lose a finger than disappoint the "kid." So they continue cronies and pals up to the very time that the boy needs father most, and father needs the boy; then they separate. In the next five years the Y.M.C.A. secretary or the athletic coach can tell the father more about his son than he knows himself.

When the boy goes away to school and forms new associations the distance between the two increases. A surprising number of the letters from fathers to sons in college take the form of hastily scribbled checks. At the end of school days father and son feel an ill defined uneasiness in each other's presence. They have nothing in common. The father fears that the son may think him old fashioned, and the son fences, expecting some moment some solemnly delivered "good advice."

It is unfortunate that it is so, but the fact may as well be faced. There are exceptions and these constitute a peculiarly happy contrast.

What is finer, indeed, than the sight of a youth admitted into the circle of his father's friends? The boy that is a companion of "dad" all the way may not know more than the boy that had drifted from his father, but he has less to unlearn.

* * *

Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The hour may be cheerless and sombre with clouds, but it will be no better to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine and not the clouds that makes the flowers. The sky is blue twice where it is black once. You have troubles—to have others. None are free from them. That would be a dull sea and the sailors would never get adrift were there nothing to disturb its surface. There is more virtue in a sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of cloud and gloom.

* * *

Let us make it our duty and pleasure from this time forth to spread such an influence around us that whoever we may come in contact with will be made better and happier by having known us, so that our golden rule will be: "Never drop a speech that could carry sorrow to any heart wherever our words might reach." It has been beautifully said that "woman is the crown of creation." God grant that each of us shall add a precious jewel to this glorious crown that shall shine through endless ages.

* * *

Time has demonstrated that there is no joy, no comfort, no sweetness, no pleasure in the world like that of a good wife. She is the same in health and in sickness, the husband's eye, his hand, his bosom friend, his partner at all times, his other self, not to be separated by any calamity, but ready to share all sorrow and discontent, to live and die with him; nay, fore, to die for him.

* * *

Parents should never consider their obligations to their children discharged when they have fed and clothed and housed and otherwise cared for the little bodies. They should provide food for their minds, and ever keep the little lives clothed in the beautiful white robes of purity, and sheltered by th strong, true love of the parents' heart.

* * *

Teach your children to pursue some honourable employment and a thousand temptations depart; give them pure and wholesome recreations and pernicious ones lose their flavour; infuse into their hearts a love of home, of family and friends, and they will no longer love the illusions which separate them from them.

* * *

We can gain more glorious victory over another, when an injury is begun on their part, that kindness should begin on our part.

It is said that the two best things the Creator allowed to escape from Heaven to gladden and beautify earth were women and flowers.

100th Anniversary of Battle of Lundy's Lane

On the twenty-fifth of July, 1814, there was fought near Niagara Falls what is known in history as the "battle of Lundy's Lane," and the centenary of the conflict will be duly commemorated on the battleground by a programme inclusive of both Canada and the United States. The occasion will be in some ways unique, and those who find themselves able to participate in the function may well regard themselves as fortunate. The speakers, who have been chosen from both countries, will no doubt make clear the century-old situation in detail and on the very site of the heroic struggle; all that need be attempted here is to call attention to the international significance of the batle and its centennial commemoration.

That significance cannot clearly be discerned without taking account of the course of events leading up to it. The war of 1812-15 was declared by the United States against the United Kingdom in June, 1812, on several grounds: the impressment of British seamen who had gone into the American naval service, the assertion by Great Britain of the right to search American war vessels to find such deserters, the blockades of European ports with the consequent interference with American commerce, and the alleged efforts of Great Britain to stir up the Western Indians to attack the United States. The war dragged on wearily and ineffectively, partly because the American people were divided in opinion as to the justification for it on grounds of either principle or expediency, partly because Great Britain was very much preoccupied by her share in the Napoleonic wars, and partly because the Canadian people put up an unexpectedly effective and successful defence against the invasions of their territory. Into the details of the military and naval struggle during the two years and three campaigns it is not necessary or practicable to go; it must suffice to say that owing to the course of calculated events and the chapter of undesigned accidents the final battle of the final campaign was fought at Lundy's Lane almost precisely two years from the declaration of war.

The physical features of the boundarys between the two countries brought the Niagara Peninsula into prominence during the whole of the war. The first invasion of Canadian territory took place at Detroit, but the first fighting was done at Niagara. General Brock was the hero of both occasions, for he captured Detroit in August and was killed while repelling the invasion at Queenston in October. After a long series of detached conflicts by sea and land, and many fluctuations in the general movement of attack on the one side and defence on the other, the American Government made preparations for a supreme attempt at the heart of Canada by one more invasion of the Niagara Peninsula. A large and well-equipped force crossed from Buffalo to Fort Erie under three able and experienced Generals: Brown, Scott and Ripley. Opposed to this army was a less numerous one made up very largly of Canadian volunteers under the command of General Riall. Fort Erie was taken without delay on the second of July, and on the fifth General Riall was defeated at Chippewa and forced to retire on his entrenchments there. After a few days he found himself constrained to move towards Queenston to save his communications to the rear, but on his way he met General Drummond with a contingent of British Peninsular veterans, and the two armies met at Lundy's Lane. To the fortunate fact that Wellington's last victory, won at Toulouse on the tenth of April, had released his troops for service in Canada, may be attributed the repulse of the invaders, whose final retirement from Canadian territory took place on the fifth of November.

The Battle of Lundy's Lane—the last fight of the last campaign of the last war between the United States and the United Kingdom—stands out in history with a facitious prominence that can never be discounted or impaired; but it is interesting for another reason; it is one of the few critical battles in history in which both armies were victorious and both were defeated. For a hundred years it has been a matter of persistent disputation which side really won; Canadians will probably be content with the qualified admission of ex-President Roosevelt that his countrymen were defeated because they retired from the field without any attempt to renew the conflict; but on the other hand they retired in good order and were not closely pursued. It is easy to say now that it is better so, because it enables Canadians and Americans to co-operate in the commemoration proceedings without any embarrassment due either to a sense of humiliation or to a suspicion of condescension. Each side found a worthy foe and each has proved a good loser.

Parisian Sage not only saves the hair but beautifies it. Thin, dull, stringy hair is made soft, abundant and radiant with life.

This delightful and refreshing hair tonic can be had at any drug or toilet counter in 50 cent bottles only. The Warne Drug Co. always sells Parisian Sage with agreement to refund the money if you are not satisfied.

Army Worms To Return

But Next Outbreak Will Probably Not Be For Twenty Years

TORONTO, July 24.—"I should expect that the army worms will be pretty well in hand in another week," said Dr. A. Cosens, President of the Toronto branch of the Ontario Entomological Society, when interviewed concerning the plague that is at present threatening many Ontario crops.

Under scientific directions, Dr. Cosens said, an attempt is being made to exterminate, or at least to check the spread of the worm. Trenches are dug along the path of the worm's march, usually shallow—a plowed furrow, for example—and holes are made in them. The worm cannot crawl out of the trench, so it crawls along it until it drops into one or other of the holes. Every little while these holes are filled, and the worms are pounded down and buried.

If, therefore, the farmer is willing to sacrifice everything in one field, he can check the spread of the pest on his farm. Besides the above method, spraying with Paris green is tried in some places, but for fear of poisoning the cattle this plan is not much resorted to. In places, also, a patch where the army worm is known to exist is covered with straw, which is then ignited; but the blaze only kills the top layer and is therefore not very effeacious.

"You cannot, however," said Dr. Cosens, "kill the army worm off. It's prevalence depends on the scarcity of certain parasites which check its growth usually. Once in a decade the parasite becomes scarce, and then we have an outbreak. Of course the worm is not new to this country; it has been here a long time, but the last time it became a menace was 20 years ago. Nothing more will probably be heard of it for another 20 years or so.

The army worm is really the larva, or caterpillar stage of a moth, which is very much like the common species, measuring about one inch from wing to wing.

SOME THINGS AND A FEW OTHERS

The politicians are hitting the trail. Looks like doings.

Just when the boys had learned to pronounce Huerta along comes Caillaux.

New apples are in but not in the boarding houses yet. The sauce makers arrive a little later and somewhat cheaper.

The city's failure to arrange to teach swimming has been little short of criminal.

Judging by the price it was some of the market gardeners who put the "raw" in raspberries.

The army worm parasites may be scarce in the country but the city variety are eating three squares daily and trying to stretch two weeks on the farm beyond the limit.

If the members of the Council were only paid they might be held responsible for their bungling. As it is the people imagine they are getting something cheap, and while they remain in that frame of mind things will continue in the same old way.

We might smile at the Lindsay robberies if our memory did not call up the circus week stunts in our own midst.

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson is a sensible dame. She is going about London in an Assyrian garb and wearing sandals without stockings.

The farmer who has army worms in his barley fields and hook worms in the hired man really deserves some sympathy.

All the vaudeville performers in the Keith circuit have been forbidden to sing "Who Paid the Rent for Mrs. Rip Van Winkle?"

A barrel of tar or a week in jail would be soft treatment for some of the song (?) writers you meet between 29th and 47th streets.

Some folks imagine that if they spot a farmer a couple of meals during he winter, they should get a couple of weeks' summer holidaying with the cows and chickens.

There are too many entries in the filly class on Friday nights.

Victoria Park is centrally located, but that is the best can be said about its use for band concerts, when lawyers might be available.

In moments of gloom one is lead to believe that some of the ball players have signs as much "armish" as an eight-day clock.

The railway booklet's work is done
To lake resorts the people hie,
But in the country there are some
Awaxing fat on friendship pie.

Maybe the farmers won't wail about the army worm? Every new trouble adds fuel to the countryman's fire, to hear him tell it.

Some days the ball team looks like a bunch of Merriwells, and the next day you decide they're a collection of Lady Gothards.

A soak with 20 kegs of beer
Two whole weeks and last year's duds
Down the river seeks his cheer
Swimming in the sparkling suds.

Youthful swain you'll find around
The populous Kawartha Park
Where in the evenings before dark
A million maidens fair abound.

To Keep Skin White, Velvety, Wrinkle-Free

G. M. W. says: "I perspire so excessively that powder underarm lasts simply three days and creams make it greasy and shiny. What can I do?" Try the treatment recommended to "Anise."

A. F. G. writes: "My skin peels so badly and wrinkles in hot weather. What will help it?" Use a wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This is extraordinary effective in any wrinkled or flabby condition. Use daily for nights and results will astonish you.

Anise: A simple way to have your skin smooth, soft and white is to apply cold cream moistened with water before retiring, washing it off in the morning. This keeps the face free from the particles of dirt and cuticle which constantly appear. The wax absorbs these worn-out particles, so that younger, fresher, healthier cells is always in view. An ounce of mercolized wax may be had at small cost at any drug store. Use like cold cream.—Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.

PREDATORY WEALTH.

(New York World)

The trouble with this country today is not in the policies of the administration. It is in the practices of men of wealth, education, and understanding who hesitate at nothing to gain power and profit. Prosperity is excellent in itself, but there are better things than prosperity. Honesty is better. Justice is better. Liberty is better. There could be neither honesty nor justice nor liberty in a country that submitted to the dictation of such a corrupt plutocracy as that which has defied law, debauched government, polluted public opinion, defrauded the weak and helpless and plundered a great prosperity in a conspiracy to enthrone monopoly.

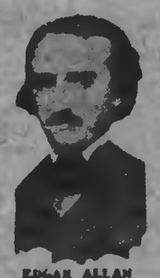
THE FALL OF THE HOUSE OF USHER

By Edgar Allan Poe



EDGAR ALLAN

GOUVERNEUR

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Gouverneur Morris was "The Fall of the House of Usher," by Edgar Allan Poe, who won world renown as a short story writer.

PART I.

DURING the whole of a dull dark and soundless day in the autumn of the year, when the clouds hung oppressively low in the heaven, I had been passing alone on horseback through a singularly dreary tract of country, and at length found myself, as the shades of evening grew on, within view of the melancholy House of Usher. I know not how it was, but, with the first glimpse of the building, a sense of insufferable gloom pervaded my spirit. I looked upon the scene before me—upon the mere house and the simple landscape features of the domain, upon the bleak walls, upon the vacant eyelike windows, upon a few rank sedges and upon a few white trunks of decayed trees, with an utter depression of soul which I can compare to no earthly sensation more properly than to the after dream of the reveler upon opium, the bitter lapse into every day life, the hideous dropping of the veil. There was an iciness, a sinking, a sickening of the heart, an unredeemed dreariness of thought which no goading of the imagination could torture into aught of the sublime. I reined my horse to the precipitous brink of a black and lurid tarn that lay in unruffled lustre by the dwelling and gazed down, but with a shudder even more thrilling than before, upon the remodeled and inverted images of the gray sedge and the ghastly tree stems and the vacant and eyelike windows.

Nevertheless in this mansion of gloom I now proposed to myself a sojourn of some weeks. Its proprietor, Roderick Usher, had been one of my boon companions in boyhood, but many years had elapsed since our last meeting. A letter, however, had lately reached me in a distant part of the country—a letter from him—which, in its wildly importunate nature, had admitted of no other than a personal reply. The manuscript gave evidence of nervous agitation. The writer spoke of acute bodily illness, of a mental disorder which oppressed him and of an earnest desire to see me as his best and, indeed, his only personal friend, with a view of attempting by the cheerfulness of my society some alleviation of his malady.

Although as boys we had been even intimate associates, yet I really knew little of my friend. His reserve had been always excessive and habitual. I was aware, however, that his very ancient family had been noted, time out of mind, for a peculiar sensibility of temperament, displaying itself through long ages in many works of exalted art and manifested of late in repeated deeds of munificent yet unobtrusive charity as well as in a passionate devotion to the intricacies, perhaps even more than to the orthodox and easily recognizable beauties, of musical science. I had learned, too, the very remarkable fact that the stem of the Usher race, all time honored as it was, had put forth at no period any enduring branch—in other words, that the entire family lay in the direct line of descent and had always, with very trifling and very temporary variation, so lain. It was this deficiency, perhaps, of collateral issue and the consequent undeviating transmission from sire to son of the patrimony with the name which had at length so identified the two as to merge the original title of the estate in the quaint and equivocal appellation of the "House of Usher"—an appellation which seemed to include in the minds of the peasantry who used it both the family and the mansion.

When I again uplifted my eyes to the house itself from its image in the pool there grew in my mind a strange fancy. I had so worked upon my imagination as really to believe that about the whole mansion and domain there hung an atmosphere peculiar to themselves and their immediate vicinity—an atmosphere which had no affinity with the air of heaven, but which had reeked up from the decayed trees and the gray wall and the silent tarn—a pestilent and mystic vapor, dull, sluggish, faintly discernible and leaden hued.

Shaking off from my spirit what must have been a dream, I scanned more narrowly the real aspect of the building. Its principal feature seemed to be that of an excessive antiquity. The discoloration of ages had been great. Minute fungi overspread the whole exterior, hanging in a fine tangled webwork from the eaves. Yet all this was apart from any extraordinary dilapidation. Perhaps the eye of a scrutinizing observer might have discovered a barely perceptible fissure which, extending from the roof of the building in front, made its way down the wall in a zigzag direction until it became lost in the sullen waters of the tarn.

Noticing these things, I rode over a short causeway to the house. A servant in waiting took my horse, and I entered the Gothic archway of the hall. A valet of stealthy step thence conducted me in silence through many dark and intricate passages in my progress to the studio of his master.

On a staircase I met the physician of the family. His countenance, I thought, wore a mingled expression of low cunning and perplexity. He accosted me with trepidation and passed on. The valet now threw open a door and ushered me into the presence of his master.

The room in which I found myself was very large and lofty. The windows were long, narrow and pointed and at so vast a distance from the black oaken floor as to be altogether inaccessible from within. Feeble gleams of encrimsoned light made their way through the trellised panes and served to render sufficiently distinct the more prominent objects around. I felt that I breathed an atmosphere of sorrow. An air of stern deep and irredeemable gloom hung over and pervaded all.

Upon my entrance Usher arose from a sofa on which he had been lying at full length and greeted me with a vivacious warmth which had much in it, I at first thought, of an overdone cordiality—of the constrained effort of the ennuye man of the world. A glance, however, at his countenance convinced me of his perfect sincerity. We sat down, and for some moments, while he spoke not, I gazed upon him with a feeling half of pity, half of awe. Surely man had never before so terribly altered in so brief a period as had Roderick Usher. It was with

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

difficulty that I could bring myself to admit the identity of the one being before me with the companion of my early boyhood. Yet the character of his face had been at all times remarkable. A cadaverousness of complexion; an eye large, liquid and luminous beyond comparison; lips somewhat thin and very pallid, but of a surpassingly beautiful curve; a nose of a delicate Hebrew model, but with a breadth of nostril unusual in similar formations; a finely molded chin, speaking in its want of prominence, of a want of moral energy; hair of a more than weblike softness and tenuity—these features, with an inordinate expansion above the regions of the temple, made up altogether a countenance not easily to be forgotten. The now ghastly pallor of the skin and the now miraculous luster of the eye, above all things, startled and even awed me. The silken hair, too, had been suffered to grow all unheeded, and as, in its wild gossamer texture, it floated rather than fell about the face I could not, even with effort, connect its Arabesque expression with any idea of simple humanity.

In the manner of my friend I was at once struck with an incoherence—an inconsistency, and I soon found this to arise from a series of feeble and futile struggles to overcome an habitual trepidancy—an excessive nervous agitation.

His action was alternately vivacious and sullen. His voice varied rapidly from a tremulous indecision (when the animal spirits seemed utterly in abeyance) to that species of energetic decision—that abrupt, weighty, unhurried and hollow sounding enunciation; that leaden, self balanced and perfectly modulated guttural utterance, which may be observed in the last drunkard or the irreclaimable eater of opium during the periods of his most intense excitement.

It was thus that he spoke of the object of my visit, of his earnest desire to see me and of the solace he expected me to afford him. He entered at some length into what he conceived to be the nature of his malady. It displayed itself in a host of unnatural sensations. He suffered much from a morbid acuteness of the senses; the most insipid food was alone endurable; he could wear only garments of certain texture; the odors of all flowers were oppressive; his eyes were tortured by even a faint light, and there were but peculiar sounds and these from stringed instruments which did not inspire him with horror.

To an anomalous species of terror I found him a bounden slave. "I shall perish," said he. "I must perish in this deplorable folly. Thus, thus, and not otherwise, shall I be lost. I dread the events of the future, not in themselves, but in their results. I shudder at the thought of any, even the most trivial incident, which may operate upon this intolerable agitation of soul. I have indeed no abhorrence of danger except in its absolute effect—in terror. In this unnerved, in this pitiable condition, I feel that the period will sooner or later arrive when I must abandon life and reason together in some struggle with the grim phantasm—fear."

I learned, moreover, at intervals and through broken and equivocal hints, that he was enchained by certain superstitious impressions in regard to the dwelling which he tenanted and whence, for many years, he had never ventured forth.

He admitted, however, although with hesitation, that much of the peculiar gloom which thus afflicted him could be traced to a more natural and far more palpable origin, to the severe and long continued illness—indeed, to the evidently approaching dissolution of a tenderly beloved sister, his sole companion for long years, his last and only relative on earth. "Her decease," he said with a bitterness which I can never forget, "would leave him—him the hopeless and the frail—the last of the ancient race of the Ushers." While he spoke the Lady Madeline—for so she was called, passed slowly through a remote portion of the apartment, and without having noticed my presence, disappeared. I regarded her with an utter astonishment not unmingled with dread, and yet I found it impossible to account for such feelings. A sense-

HOW SHE CUT BILLS 60 PER CENT.

"For fourteen years I have been a housewife and during that time my family has increased from two to seven—and the family income has increased just twenty-seven per cent," says a writer in Leslie's. "The cost of foodstuffs has increased rather more than twenty-seven per cent. in the same period, I believe. When I was first married my husband's salary enabled me to 'live well.' That in the accepted sense of the phrase in our circle, meant that we are able to live to eat.

"Like most young wives, I took a great interest in my household duties, and was especially proud of my ability as a cook. My mother has been sensible enough to teach me the principles of practical kitchen lore, and when I went into a home of my own I did the cooking myself. Nothing gave me more pleasure than to prepare a good meal, and see my husband and guests, when we had any, enjoy it. Most of my leisure was spent with cook books and women's magazines that gave much space to recipes. I learned to select the choice cuts of meat, became an expert in putting up rich preserves, and my pickles were the talk of the neighborsood. I ransacked the markets of our little city for the choicest viands and even drew on the dealers of the metropolis for delicacies that our local grocers did not carry.

"Little by little the expenses of our table mounted up as our tastes grew more exacting and the prices of foodstuffs increased. As is always the case, the growth of our expenses was so gradual as to be unnoticed until the breaking point came. With us the breaking point was when we could not meet the semi-anual payment of our home. I shall never forget the evening when my husband told me that he was forced to ask for an extension of time on that payment.

"'I can't understand what is the matter, Martha,' he said, 'but lately it has been pretty hard scratching to get that five hundrer dollars together twice a year. Now, I'm floored. I'm two hundred short. If —— will wait a couple of months I can raise it, but what are we going to do when the next payment day comes around?'

"I cried myself to sleep that night. We loved our home. We had three children then. There was no hope of an increase in our income. We had thought that we were careful managers, and yet we had failed to keep our family budget within the limits of our revenue. It was plain that we must either reduce our expenses our eventually lose our home.

"Crying myself to sleep did not help any, so the next morning I determined to do something more practicable. I got a pencil and paper and the bills for the past six months and did a little auditing. That amount we spent for the maintenance of the table appalled me. That night, after dinner, I put some figures before the head of the house.

"'Here, my dear,' I said, 'is the what is the matter with our finaces. We have been living to eat in the past; from now on we are going to eat to live.'

"Again I turned to my cook books and magazines, this time in the search for hints of economy.

"It was not easy to make the change. As I look back upon it, I am convinced that the thing that hurt most was the thought that I should lose the reputation of being the best cook in our neighborhood. But the love of our dear little home was much stronger than personal vanity, and I set about the reform with a valiant heart.

"Extravagance in table furnishing leds by association of ideas to extravagance in catering, and so I retired the most elaborate of our china and glass and silver. I laid my table plainly. I restored cereals to our breakfast menu from which they had long been expelled, and cut out the steaks. Grape fruit was replaced by apples, baked or raw, and the humble prune took the place of hot house strawberries. I searched the market for the cheaper cuts of meats that were rich in nutrition. I resurrected rice from our culinary discard. I cultivated the art of frying corn mush so that it was more delicious than lobster patties. In short I went back to simple living, such as our grandparents thrived upon, but—and here lies the only secret of success—I took care that everything should be as carefuly cooked as if I had been preparing the most delicious dishes.

Simplicity of living does not mean either bad cooking or motonony. Each housewife must work out the problem for herself, with due regard to the prejudices and tastes of the members of her family, and she can do as I have done—cut the bill for foodstuffs sixty per cent., and that without losing her reputation as a good cook—if she has ever had one.

"It is now more than seven years since my family began to eat to live and I can say positively that we have had better health than we had before when we lived to eat, and our guests, of whom we still have many, seem to enjoy our table as much as they formerly did. I am not sure but that the members of the family enjoy it more. I should not to be compelled to live on the limited allowance that some people must but I have no desire to go back to the old customs of extravagance. If our family income were to be doubled to-morrow I am sure that we should not change our simple, wholesome menus for anything more elaborate and expensive. 'Enough is as good as a feast,' says the proverb. Sometimes, I think it is better."

FOR THE SUMMER INVALID

Chicken Jelly.

Cut a chicken up and put to boil in two quarts of water. Cook until the flesh falls from the bones. Take from the fire, pour the liquor through through a colander, return to the pot, and boil down to a half pint. Skim carefully, salt to taste, and put in a cool place to solidify. This is excellent for a typhoid convalescent.

Egg Souffle.

This is one of the most delicate ways in which to prepare an egg for an invalid. Beat the yolk and white separately until extremely light, add a pinch of salt, pour into a china cup and set in a pan of hot water. Stir slowly but constantly until the egg is scalded, but not cooked at high temperature.

The egg should only thicken slightly, but puff up until the cup is almost filled with the creamy custard. Set in the oven a moment and serve at once.

Toast Meringue.

Dip a slice of delicately browned toast into boiling water, slightly salted. Lay in a deep plate and pour over it a cream made of half a cup of scalding milk, a teaspoonful of butter and a stiffly beaten white of egg, added just before removing from the fire. Place in a hot oven five minutes until delicately browned, and serve as quickly as possible.

Oatmeal Cream Gruel.

Procure coarse oatmeal, have it pounded fine, cover with cold water, stir well and then allow it to settle and pour off the water. Repeat this three times. Boil the water thus obtained ten or fifteen minutes, season, strain and mix with a cup of hot cream. Serve with crisp bits of toast or zweiback.

Orange souffle.

Boil one cupful of water with one-half cupful of sugar, the grated rind of one orange and the pulp and juice of two oranges for five minutes, and pour over the well-beaten yolks of four eggs. Return to the fire with one teaspoonful of powdered gelatine dissolved in one-fourth cupful of boiling water, and cook until the spoon is coated. Strain, add a tiny pinch of salt, beat until cold, add the stiffly-beaten whites of the eggs, turn into small paper cases, then cover and pack and freeze. Serve in the paper cases, with small pieces of canned pineapple and some whipped and sweetened cream on the top.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

L.S.: Every woman wants to be slender nowadays, so I don't blame you, and since this reliable and inexpensive home-remedy, parsotin, was discovered, we may all make our figures to suit the latest mode. Parsotin allows you to reduce flesh without danger or discomfort, and it leaves the skin firm and unwrinkled. Simply get four ounces of parsotin from your druggist, dissolve it in 1 1-2 pints hot water and strain. Take a tablespoonful three times a day. Avoid cereals. They are too starchy. This remedy is cheap and harmless and rapid in effect.

Ada. S.: Your eyes are probably overtired and overworked. Rest the nerves, brighten the color and clear the lids of inflammation by this method: Dissolve one ounce of argotes in a pint of soft water. Drops 2 drops daily in each eye. This is a simple, economical tonic. If troubled with dark rings or flabbiness under your eyes try saturating a cloth in the solution and laying it over the eyes while lying down. It rests the nerves and starts circulation. Both are necessary to beauty of eye.

Helen O.: You are one of many who ask me about egg shampoos, and I gladly quote an eminent London beauty specialist: "The slimy egg cannot dissolve the scalp impurities, but adds to them so that the pores are completely closed, the subcutaneous matter decomposes, causing the hair to assume a dead, dull colour. I condone every word. Avoid eggs (and soap, too) on your hair. Try the fine preparation made by stirring a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup of hot water. It will bring out new beauty possibilities in your hair, will cure and prevent dandruff and promote growth and fluffiness. It removes scurf at once.

Lillah G.: I don't believe your skin is seriously affected, and I am sure it can be easily helped. There is a preparation I am always glad to recommend because it is so reliable and cheap and easily made. And it is a splendid substitute for ordinary face powder which is at the bottom of many complexion troubles. Mix 4 ounces of spurmax, dissolve it in half a pint hot water, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, stir thoroughly and let the mixture cool. There you have a real "beautifier"—all your complexion needs. The shiny sallowness is instantly relieved, and the effect is lasting.

Mattie L.: You are evidently not old enough to worry about wrinkles or losing your good looks, but you are wise in taking every precaution against the loss of your complexion, and the coming of premature wrinkles. Keep the skin firm and the complexion clear with a nightly massage, using this simple, inexpensive preparation: Mix together an ounce of almesotin, two teaspoonfuls glycerine and 1-2 pint cold water. Stir and let stand a few hours. This will give a healthy resistance to the tissues and prevent the large pores which come from a flabby, oily condition of skin. Try this faithfully for a while and note how it encourages the natural contour without false flesh. Many have found is it a reserve of skin health.

Beatrice B.: From what you write of your frequent 'blues' and nervous spells I am quite sure you are run down and need a good tonic, something to sharpen your appetite and regulate your whole system. Iron is an excellent blood purifier that clears up the body generally. Dissolve half a cup of sugar and one ounce barbone in half a pint alcohol (not whiskey.) Add enough hot water to make a full quart of the mixture. Take a tablespoonful before each meal. You will find benefited right away, the whole world will look brighter and it will improve your color, too.

D. B. V.: I am not surprised that your hair is falling out when you confess that you 'have tried everything on the market.' Scientists agree on the wonderful merits of quinine preparation, but they must always be made fresh. This you can do with little cost, at home. Simply dissolve one ounce of quinesin (get it at any drug store) in 1-2 pint alcohol, and mix with 1-2 pint water and you have a delightful home-made tonic, that will keep the scalp healthy and give you back your 'crowning glory.' Use twice a week. I know nothing better to prevent baldness.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

Cold boiled potatoes cut lengthwise and broiled are delicious, if served piping hot, with plenty of seasoning and butter.

A hot iron held just above the white spot on a polished table will remove it. Polish the place with a little sweet oil.

If a cake tin is greased lightly and flour sifted over it, all surplus flour removed by a sharp tap of the tin, the result will be quite as good as using a paper lining and is more easily and quickly done.

Fold a piece of emery paper in the centre and draw the knife rapidly back and forth several times, turning it from side to side. This is an excellent sharpener for paring knives.

VIRTUES OF BUTTERMILK

During the hot weather the question of what one should drink is often a problem. Water is not often the ideal beverage, for one can never be quite sure that it is perfectly pure, and when water is very hard, containing a large percentage of mineral salts and calcareous matter, it forms deposits in the system, clogging the arteries and impairing the general bodily functions, says a writer extolling the virtues of buttermilk as a beverage.

The habit of drinking large quantities of iced water is one which leads to digestive trouble. The system, however, undoubtedly calls for cooling drinks during hot weather. Perspiration is much more active, and the body throws off the secretions at a rapid rate. Consequently thirst is engendered. Iced water at a time when the body is greatly heated is injurious because it is generally drunk with avidity, and in large quantities, causing shock to the intestinal system. On the other hand, ice given in very small quantities, and slowly sucked, will often allay gastric irritability and help to lower gradually a too high temperature. For this reason it is often given to invalids.

Of late years doctors have been widely recommending buttermilk as the ideal summer beverage. It is certainly one of the safest summer drinks that can possibly be taken, and has certain valuable therapeutic qualities which seem to have been recognized by physicians a century or two ago. Its use afterwards fell greatly into abeyance. Just as message—an ancient remedy for many ailments of the body—has during the last few decades been accepted as a therapeutic agent by the modern medical faculty, so has buttermilk, another old-time "cure," again come into its own as a refreshing, cooling and nutritive drink, with many properties which make it exceedingly valuable for children, elderly people, and those suffering from gastric ailments.

The "re-discovery" of buttermilk seems to be due to Germany. Dr. Niemeyer, a German physician, who prescribed it in cases of gastric catarrh, said: "When the patient is hungry, let him eat buttermilk. When he is thirsty, let him drink buttermilk." Buttermilk can be digested when ordinary milk cannot be taken. Fresh milk is subsequently apt to curdle on the stomach and form into large lumps, whereas, in buttermilk, the casein is already curdled, but finely divided. Buttermilk is the fluid which is left after the fat has been removed from cream by churning. Its somewhat sour taste is due to the presence of lactic acid. The ease with which it may be digested is largely due to the absence of fat and the casein being present in a finely flocculent form. For this reason it has been recommended as a food for delicate infants, and its nutritive value is also great, an ordinary tumblerful yielding about as much nourishment to have especially cooling properties, as two ounces of bread. It also warms and is therefore a great drink, not only for persons in good health, but for those who are delicate and feverish.

Buttermilk has only one very important characteristic which makes it the remedial agent in all ailments which arise from the sluggish excretion of waste matter, such as gout, rheumatism, and obesity. The lactic acid contained in it attacks and dissolves every kind of earthy deposit in the blood vessels. Thus it keeps the veins and arteries so supple and free that they cannot get clogged, eliminating deposits of irritating calcareous matter around the joints and poisonous waste in the muscles. Those who drink buttermilk freely seldom suffer from liver or kidney disorders. The taste for buttermilk, if it has not previously existed, is very soon acquired, and as it forms a refreshing beverage, while possessing no harmful qualities, it should become popular as a summer drink.

WOMEN'S MEALS

Among the illusions in which girls and women indulge is that, as they care very little about their food, so the lack of it cannot have much effect on them. They rather respise men for being careful to have regular meals, whether business presses or not, and are inclined to vaunt their own superiority in such respects. But if this disregard of the natural instincts of hunger leads us to be humiliated by hypersensiveness in love affairs, how pre-eminently does male commonsense stand out in the matter! Women are notoriously careless about their own food. One could wish that those who neglect their duty of properly and efficiently nourishing their own bodies would study the statistics of insanity and its increase among us. The old Latin proverb tells us that our aim should be to keep a sound mind in a sound body. We often exalt our weakness into something to be proud of. And if we go without our luncheon one day, an avenging headache swoops down and makes us irritable. Surely that is nothing to be proud of! Or, if the men of the family are dining out, the women have tea and toast and scrambled eggs, and next morning wonder why they feel so limp, and as if everything to be done were dreadfully troublesome and impossible.

THE BEST HUMOR OF THE WEEK

Father and Son.

A certain business man is the father of a youth of a most literal tendency. Last spring, when the father left for Europe, where he was to spend the entire summer, he promised the lad that, if he were to attain a certain mark in his studies, his reward would be a continental trip with his father.

The prospect of such a trip stimulated the lad to such a degree that he attained a mark even higher than that set him by his parent. He cabled his father the one word, "Yes."

It would seem, however, that the pater had forgotten his offer, for, after thinking over the message, he cabled back: "Yes, what?"

Then, in turn, the son was perplexed. Finally, after due reflection, he cabled to his father: "Yes, sir."

Provided for Now.

Bobby had been taught to remember all his relatives when he said his prayers. One night, as he knelt at his mother's knee, he did not mention the name of a favorite aunt.

"Why, Bobby," said the mother, "you didn't say 'God bless Aunt Beatrice and make her happy.'"

"Well, mother," replied the little boy, "I don't have to say that any more. Aunt Beatrice's engaged."

Not Quite Satisfactory.

Maud: Would you recommend the lawyer who got you your last divorce?

Beatrix: Well, his charges are reasonable, but I've enjoyed more notoriety with others.

The Difference.

"Papa, what is a Mexican peon?"

"Why, my son, he is very much like a resident of one of our slums, except that he lives more in the country and is more likely to be buried in a trench than in a pauper's grave."

One Never Knows, Does One?

Ike: Don't you think we would better go back thru England again on the way home?

Mike: But we did England.

"I know it. But since we were there think of all the lovely new ruins the suffragettes have made."

Poor Jack.

Flora—So it's all off between you and Jack?

Flora—Yes, I had to give him up, poor fellow! I'm awfully fond of him, too; but you know he never could afford to pay me the alimony I've been accustomed to getting.

Proof Positive.

Stranger—Why is Jones conceded to be the leading lawyer in this vicinity?

Local resident—Why, mister, Jones can holler "I object!" louder than any other man in these parts.

Progressive Penelope.

Lady—I understand you to say Ulysses and Penelope are estranged?

Lamb—Yes.

Larry—But I saw her buying a hammock today.

Lamb—Little schemer! I'll just wager she is planning a get-together meeting!

Modesty.

Doctor—Well, young lady, and what do you want to see me about? Patient (in the slashed skirt)—Oh—er—doctor—I—er—that is—I don't know what's the matter—Oh! it's dreadful to have to say it—but—I want you to look at my leg!

Next to Nothing.

One of the buds in a somewhat staid and conservative community, without consulting her mother, or any one else for that matter, had gone and had made for herself a perfect duck of a new party gown. It was fashioned after the newest French models that have caused comment.

On the first occasion that offered for its exhibition, she came down for inspection before going out. When her mother sufficiently recovered, she ordered:

"You go right back and take that thing off!"

But daughter is equally as determined as her parent.

"I'll wear this gown or nothing!" she declared firmly.

"Well," said her mother resignedly, "it comes to about the same thing."

In the Same Boat.

The house doctor of a Cincinnati theatre sometimes tires of his office. Hence the following:

One evening an excited usher rushed to the doctor's seat and whispered a brief message. The occupant rose at once, and both men left the orchestra hastily and made for the dressing-rooms.

"It's the leading lady!" wailed one of the actresses, meeting them. "Come this way."

"Have you poured water on her head?" inquired the doctor solemnly.

"Yes, from the fire bucket."

"The fire bucket! What a fearful blunder! Here," and he scribbled a line on a card, "take this to the drug store and get it filled."

When the leading lady found herself alone with the doctor, she opened her eyes. "Doctor," she gasped, "you're a good fellow, aren't you? I know you are aware that there's nothing the matter with me. I want a day off, and I don't want to go on in this act. Can you fix it?"

"You bet I can," said the doctor, wringing her hand sympathetically. "I ain't no doctor. I came in on his ticket."

All for Johnny.

Mrs. Briggs is so good-looking that Mr. Briggs seldom finds it in his heart to be angry with her, but he was really cross when she returned from Florida.

"I understand," he said, "that you passed yourself off as a widow while you were away. How about it?"

She admitted it.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself," said Briggs. "But I suppose you are not."

"Of course I am not," said Mrs. Briggs serenely. "I only did it on Johnny's account. I wanted him to have a good time, and he had it. You have no idea how kind all the gentlemen were to him."

On the Pump Handle.

Harry Lauder was being dined by friends at the Lambs' Club, New York, one evening recently, and, of course, reciprocated by entertaining his hosts. The Scotch comedian had an endless fund of stories.

"A Dundee farmer, who lived not far from my old home in bonnie Scotland," Lauder told his friends, "employed a Highland naig to help him. "'Hoo, Sandy,' said one day, 'gang doon and gie the coos a cabbage each; but min' ye gie the biggest cabbage to the coo that gies the maist milk.'

"Sandy departed to do his master's bidding. Upon his return the old farmer asked him if he had done as he was told and had divided out the cabbages according to merit.

"'Aye, master,' replied the laddie; 'I gied 'em a cabbage a head and hung th' biggest on the pump handle.'"

The Honeymoon.

"I suppose you feel your responsibilities rather keenly, Mr. Newlywed?"

"Why—er—yes; I feel as if I had the weight of heaven on my shoulders."

Putting One Over.

Mrs Henpeckkeep—I never did anything really clever in your life! Henpeckkeep—You seem to forget, my dear, that I married you.

Will Be Disappointed.

Willie: "I suppose that your son has been graduated. I suppose he doesn't attract much more attention than any other mortal."

Gillis: "He doesn't, eh? Say, he has been home only four weeks and there have been three big league scouts, four reps, two waitresses and their lawyers, and a whole army of bill collectors at the house looking for him already."

The Return.

The enemy returned our fire.

"Implying," however, no lack of merit!" they shouted over at us.

From which circumstances we gathered that they were the famous regiment of magazine editors of whom all the world was just then talking.

When you get ready to settle down, marry a good girl; then devote the rest of her life to serving you.

Small Boy (in awed tones): "Pa, do you know I looked into the parlor just now, and what do you think I saw?"

Father: "Can't guess, my boy."

Small Boy: "Why, sister Polly was sitting on the piano-stool, and her young man was kneeling in front of her, holding her hand like glue."

Father: "Ah! sensible young fellow that. He was holding her hands to prevent her playing the piano."

"Patrick, you were on a bad spree yesterday," said a friend, reproachfully.

"Yis, sor. I was that," replied Patrick. "Bless me, if I wasn't laying in the gutter wid a pig. Father Dunn come along an' looked at me, an' he says, says he:—

"'One is known by the company he kapes.'"

"And did you get up, Patrick?"

"Oi did not, but the pig did."

When Father Spoke.

"Claribel," called out the gentleman in a loud, rasping, and emphatic voice from the head of the staircase at 11.30 p.m., "you tell that long-haired sallow-faced, spider-legged feller in the parlor there to take his hat and walk off; and if ever he comes here again I'll kick him right thru his neckties!"

"Alfred," murmured the young woman, pensively, "something seems to tell me we'd better part."

Pokes Him in Nose.

"Why, Willie," said the teacher, in a pained voice, "have you been fighting again? Didn't you learn that when you are struck on one cheek you ought to turn the other one to the striker?"

"Yes'm," agreed Willie, "but he hit me on the nose, and I've only got one."

Voice from Above (to individuals entering house with burglarious intent). "I say, you'd better come again after a while, we aren't all in bed yet."

A Fable Revised.

The grasshopper knocked humbly at the door of the ant's prosperous looking home.

"What do you want?" said the ant, in a thin, hard voice.

"A little food and shelter from the cold winds," replied the grasshopper. "I can feel the icy hand of winter clutching at my throat."

"And may I ask," said the unsympathetic ant, "how comes it that you have wasted the summer?"

"The sun shone bright. Everything was gay and I did naught but dance from morn till night."

"Why didn't you tell me that before?" said the ant, smiling her sweetest smile. "Come right in and make yourself at home. I've been too busy to learn the new dances, and, if you'll teach me, you can name your own price."

She Named Her Teddy.

Miss Six-year-old had been given a large Teddy bear as a birthday present. It was a very fine bear, but had a pronounced squint.

The owner was hard put to it to find a name sufficiently descriptive for her new toy. At last she solved the difficulty to her own satisfaction—and christened the animal "Gladly."

Questioned as to the reason for such an extraordinary name for a bear, she quoted as her authority the line in a well-known hymn, which she rendered thus, "Gladly, my cross-eye bear!"

She Had An Excuse.

An exceptionally voluble golfer was vainly endeavoring to move a ball with his driver. Pausing in his efforts, he espied, watching him, a small girl, holding by the hand a still smaller boy. Immediately visions of flying golf balls flashed across his mind.

"You ought not to bring your little brother here," he cautioned the girl.

"Oh, it's all right, sir," came the reply. "He's stone deaf."

Awful and Lawful.

A deaf man was being married, and the parson asked the usual question, "Do you take this woman for your lawful wife?"

"Eh?" said the deaf man.

"Do you take this woman for your lawful wife?"

This time a bit louder.

The groom seemed to get angry.

"Oh, I don't know," he said. "She ain't so awful. I've seen wuss than her that didn't have as much money."

At the Zoo.

Stout Lady: "That seems to me to be a very small piece of meat for the lion."

Attendant: "It may seem a small piece to you, mum, but it's heaps for the lion!"

Literal.

An English minister, who guarded his morning study hour very carefully, told the new maid that under no circumstances were callers to be admitted—except, of course, he added—in case of life and death. Half an hour later the maid knocked at his door.

"A gentleman to see you, sir."

"Why, I thought I told you——"

"Yes, I told him," she replied, "but he says it is a question of life and death."

So he went downstairs and found an insurance agent.

Did He Know?

"But I don't know you, madame," the bank cashier said to the woman who had presented a check.

The woman, however, instead of saying haughtily, "I do not wish your acquaintance, sir," merely replied, with an engaging smile:

"Oh, yes you do, I think. I'm the 'red-headed old virago' next door to you, whose scoundrelly little boys are always reaching thru the fence and picking your flowers. When you started for town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to eat this evening you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't keep this house on plain water and sixpence a day.'"

He Wanted to Know.

An American who desired to go to Mexico as a soldier was rejected on account of his poor teeth.

"What's the idea?" he said to the recruiting officer. "Have we got to eat the greasers after we kill 'em?"

Using Persuasion.

"Here, what's all this row about?" asked the copper, breathlessly.

"Why, this woman is collecting money for the peace society, and when I refused to contribute she knocked me down," explained the meek-looking man.

At the Zoo.

Stout Lady: "That seems to me to be a very small piece of meat for the lion."

Attendant: "It may seem a small piece to you, mum, but it's heaps for the lion!"

He's Right.

The tailor's sign in a little inland town was an apple—simply an apple. The people were amazed at it. They came in crowds to the tailor, asking him what on earth the meaning of the sign was.

The tailor, with a complacent smile, replied:—

Ignorance and Bliss.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ONE AUGUST NIGHT.

She Was Told the Story of the Lady of Shalott.

By VIRGINIA LEILA WENTZ.
[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

It had been an unusually oppressive day even for August. Every one seemed sleepy or sleeping. Cobblers slept with half mended boots in their laps; Italian women slept at their fruit stands with sleeping babies at their breasts; horses trotted conscientiously along in front of sleeping drivers.

In the department store where Antona Wheaton worked the day had been difficult, especially behind the stuffy corner where she measured out ribbons. And, oh, what a godsend the loud sounding bell at 6 had been! Most of the girls in the store were city bred and they accepted the conditions of August philosophically, but Antona Wheaton had come from a fresh little country town in the west, and as she leaned from her boarding house window—the third floor hall room, back—a few minutes before going down to dinner it seemed to her that she was locked in a place of torment from which no escape was possible.

They dined at 7 in Mrs. Brown's boarding house. In the half hour that Antona had been home she had taken a sponge bath, brushed her silky, flaxen hair and changed her black alpaca dress for a simple white muslin. As she leaned out of the window from the open space beside the storage house in the rear she could see the dust carts roll down the streets. The whisking of their big rotary brooms reminded the country bred girl of large turkey gobblers sweeping the earth with disdainful, proud wings. The open space faced the west, and, resting her little oval cheeks in her hands, Antona could see that the sun was doing its best to set with some sort of rightful beauty, even in this homely downtown section.

"Where the quiet colored end of evening smiles"—

Antona was speaking to herself in a reprehensible fashion that was growing on her, trying to recall some verses which Francis Logan had quoted to her one sunset time down on the Battery. She had fancied she could remember them, they were so simple and lovely.

Just then Mrs. Brown's cracked dinner bell rang.

Across the long, narrow table Francis Logan glanced at Antona with something like a lump born of a big protective instinct rising in his throat. Every vestige of fresh country rose bloom had fled from the girl's sweet face, and in the intervals when she fancied she was not observed the young fellow's alert eye noticed that black lashes rested heavily against her cheek as would those of one who is overweary.

Antona's weariness struck home perhaps because of contrast. Francis himself was more than usually happy that night.

The big importing house where he was employed had that very morning sent a note to his desk informing him that his salary had been increased some $10 a month. His dear mother, over in Devonshire, had just written him that a relative had left her an unexpected little legacy. Altogether the world was going well with Francis Logan.

"You look pleased, Mr. Logan," observed Mrs. Brown from her accustomed seat at the head of the table "Ah, I remember—this is your favorite soup!"

For five years now young Logan had been an inmate of Mrs. Brown's establishment without having ever changed his seat at table or his room. Naturally Mrs. Brown sought to ingratiate herself with him.

"Why, my dear," she had exclaimed once to Antona in a burst of enthusiasm, "he knows all the poets by heart. He sees only the best plays, even though it may be from gallery seats. He knows all the finest pictures up in the Metropolitan. He has what they call an 'artistic' taste too. My lands, you should hear him notice the sunset at the end of a narrow city street or a tiny flower out in the park or"—

"Yes, I know," said Antona impulsively, for once coming out of her reserve. "He's pure gold—that's what he is!"

"Huh! 'Gold?'" Mrs. Brown had retorted disdainfully. "None o' your pretty, soft yellow stuff for him. He's good, solid, practical steel, if any one asked me. Don't you forget it, Miss Wheaton. And if you could be fortunate enough to tip up to him"—

Mrs. Brown had broken off abruptly at a flash from Miss Wheaton's eye. One dared not presume too far with Miss Wheaton, in spite of the silky, flaxen hair and the childish dimples, as many of the young men in the department store had found out.

"If only they could be a little more like Mr. Logan!" Antona had more than once found herself commenting as she pinned up her colored bolts. "He is the soul of honor, and I—I don't know what I'd do without him!"

"Had a stroke of luck today, little girl," Logan waylaid Antona as she was going upstairs after the scanty saucer of raspberries, made purple with milk, had been eaten. "I want you to come out tonight and help me celebrate—if you'll do me the honor."

A little later, from the basement dining room window, Mrs. Brown, who was arranging her cloth for the next morning's breakfast, watched them go up the street together. Antona, in her simple white muslin, wore a sudden spray of pink roses at her waist. At duty walked toward the west the young fellow's eyes were fastened adoringly upon her.

"Guess they'll hit it off all right," commented Mrs. Brown as she went on refilling the porcelain saltcellars.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Francis as they walked toward the cars. "We'll go out to Riverside drive and sit there for awhile till the night gets cooler; then we'll go to some big uptown restaurant and order some ice cold chicken salad."

"Oh," broke in Antona in economic defense, "I'd just as lief go in a drug store and have some nice soda."

"Now, don't you bother about the expense, little one," said Francis gayly. "As I said, I've had a rare stroke of luck today, and when we get out on one of those cool benches on the drive I'm going to tell you about it." Also he determined resolutely to himself he would tell her something else. She needed to be petted and taken care of.

The car ride to the river was long. The sun glow had faded entirely out of the west and the gray veil that spread between the night and day was already beginning to be pricked by the city's innumerable lights when finally they reached the drive and leaned over the stone wall that edged it. The Palisades on the opposite shore cast huge black shadows upon the water. Near by a yacht or two were at anchor. Silently, mysteriously, their lights came up, one by one. Over on the Jersey shore a big building which by day showed itself to be an unsightly factory now took on the majesty of a mediaeval castle.

"See the turrets and spires," said Francis, calling Antona's attention to it. "Do you know the story of the Lady of Shalott?" he added. "She lived in a grand castle—we'll pretend that's it," he nodded toward the factory—"and from the highest window she watched her lover, Sir Launcelot, going by, and she drifted down the river to find him. We'll pretend this is the river, and—dear little Lady of Shalott, will you let me be your Sir Launcelot? I love you and want you to marry me and let me take care of you. Surely, little one, you are so fragile and sweet you need to be taken care of. Will you?"

The girl's eyes as he spoke were distant. All the yellow lights on the yachts seemed to be swinging themselves together.

* * * * * * *

"Just look at my hair, Francis," Antona was saying twenty minutes later, with a shy note of laughter.

"I'm looking at it, dear," said Francis oddly, with something like a catch in his rich young voice. "And just to think I'm going to have it to look at all my life!"

World's Greatest Short Stories

Out of stupor oppressed me, as my eyes followed her retreating steps.

The disease of the Lady Madeline had long baffled the skill of her physicians. A settled apathy, a gradual wasting away of the person and frequent although transient affections of a partially cataleptical character, were the unusual diagnoses. Hitherto she had steadily borne up against the pressure of her malady, and had not betaken herself finally to bed; but, on the closing in of the evening of my arrival at the house, she succumbed (as her brother told me at night with inexpressible agitation) to the prostrating power of the destroyer, and I learned that the glimpse I had obtained of her person would thus probably be the last I should obtain—that the lady, at least while living, would be seen by me no more.

For several days ensuing her name was unmentioned by either Usher or myself, and during this period I was busied in earnest endeavors to alleviate the melancholy of my friend. We painted and read together, or I listened as if in a dream to the wild improvisations of his spanking guitar.

I shall ever bear about me a memory of the many solemn hours I thus spent alone with the master of the house of Usher. Yet I should fail in any attempt to convey an idea of the exact character of the studies or of the occupations in which he involved me or led me the way. An excited and highly distempered ideality threw a sulphurous lustre over all.

One of the phantasmagoric conceptions of my friend, partaking not so rigidly of the spirit of abstraction, may be shadowed forth, although feebly, in words. A small picture presented the interior of an immeasurably long and rectangular vault or tunnel, with low walls, smooth, white and without interruption or device. Certain accessory points of the design served well to convey the idea that this excavation lay at an exceeding depth below the surface of the earth. No outlet was observed in any portion of its vast extent, and no torch or other artificial source of light was discernible. Yet a flood of intense rays rolled throughout and bathed the whole in a ghastly and inappropriate splendor.

The words of his wild fantasias (for he not infrequently accompanied himself on the guitar with improvisations) were the result of that intense collectedness and concentration to which I have previously alluded as observable only in particular moments of the highest artificial excitement. The words of one of these rhapsodies I have easily remembered. I was perhaps the more forcibly impressed with it as he gave it, because I in the under or mystic current of its meaning I fancied that I perceived, and for the first time, a full consciousness on the part of Usher of the tottering of his lofty reason upon her throne. The verses, which were entitled "The Haunted Palace," ran very nearly if not accurately thus:

I.
In the greenest of our valleys
By good angels tenanted
Once a fair and stately palace—
Radiant palace—reared its head.
In the monarch Thought's dominion
It stood there.
Never seraph spread a pinion
Over fabric half so fair.

II.
Banners yellow, glorious, golden
On its roof did float and flow
(This, all this, was in the olden
Time long ago),
And every gentle air that dallied
In that sweet day
Along the ramparts plumed and pallid
A winged odor went away.

III.
Wanderers in that happy valley
Through two luminous windows saw
Spirits moving musically
To a lute's well tuned law
Round about a throne, where sitting (Porphyrogene!)

In state his glory well befitting,
The ruler of the realm was seen.

IV.
And all with pearl and ruby glowing
Was the fair palace door,
Through which came flowing, flowing, flowing
And sparkling evermore
A troop of Echoes, whose sweet duty
Was but to sing
In voices of surpassing beauty
The wit and wisdom of their king.

V.
But evil things in robes of sorrow
Assailed the monarch's high estate
(Ah, let us mourn, for never morrow Shall dawn upon him, desolate!),
And round about his home the glory
That blushed and bloomed
Is but a dim remembered story
Of the old time entombed.

VI.
And travelers now within that valley
Through the red litten windows see
Vast forms that move fantastically
To a discordant melody,
While, like a rapid ghastly river,
Through the pale door
A hideous throng rush out forever
And laugh, but smile no more.

I well remember that suggestions arising from this ballad led us into a train of thought wherein there became manifest an opinion of Usher's, which I mention not so much on account of its novelty (for other men have thought thus) as on account of the pertinacity with which he maintained it. This opinion, in its general form, was that of the sentience of all vegetable things. But the belief, however, was connected (as I have previously hinted) with the gray stones of the home of his forefathers. The conditions of the sentience had been here, he imagined, fulfilled in the method of collocation of these stones. Its evidence—the evidence of the sentience—was to be seen, he said (and I here started as he spoke), in the gradual yet certain condensation of an atmosphere of their own about the waters and the walls. The result was discoverable, he added, in that silent yet importunate and terrible influence which for centuries had moulded the destinies of his family and which made him what I now saw him—what he was. Such opinions need no comment, and I will make none.

Was Never Free From Diarrhoea

Many Times a Month at a Time Suffered Greatly, Did

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY CURED HIM

Mr. P. Vinter, Peterborough, Ont., writes: "I would be very much surprised if I could find a person who has suffered greater from diarrhoea and sickness than I have, never being free from it for more than a month at a time. Many a time I have contemplated taking my life. Several visits from leading physicians failed to do me any good. A friend of mine, who knew how I suffered, visited me one day, bringing with him some of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which after I had taken a few doses, gave me great relief. I sincerely hope this will catch the eye of those who suffer with the same complaint as I did."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for close on to seventy years, and has been so universally used, from one end of Canada to the other, that many firms have undertaken to produce a substitute for it, and even going so far as to claim that their preparation is "The Same" or "Just as Good."

Do not accept their word for this, as these no-name, no-reputation imitations may be dangerous to your health.

Ask for "Dr. Fowler's" and insist on being given what you ask for.

"Nicknackitorian."

London shopkeepers' slang is a dialect in itself and one that is always changing. What, then, is a "nicknackitorian?" We know not the word today; but, looking recently through some old law cases dating about a hundred years back, I was puzzled to find it applied in all good faith to describe a plaintiff in the sheriff's court. On further search it turned out to be a piece of forgotten cockney slang for a dealer in bric-a-brac.

The evidence showed that this plaintiff kept a sort of old curiosity shop, in which he dispensed "mummies," poisoned arrows, the head of King Arthur's spear and a genuine manuscript of the "first play acted by Thespis and his company in a wagon!" The defendant, a woman, had actually bought and paid for some of these rarities, but she died after having commissioned the embalming of an orang outang to add to her collection, and for this her executors refused to pay. Counsel for the defense poured contempt on the mummy of the orang outang and called it a "stuffed monkey."

But the "nicknackitorian" won his case. His profession was more taking than his name.—Manchester Guardian.

Organized Labor Grows.

The third annual report on labor organization in Canada, covering the year 1913, has been issued by the Department of Labor. At the close of 1913 the strength of organized labor in Canada stood approximately at 176,000, an increase of nearly 16,000 over the figures at the close of 1912. The estimated membership for each of the three years during which reports on organized labor in Canada have been issued, has been as follows: 1911, 133,132; 1912, 160,120; 1913, 175,799.

Of the total numerical strength of organized labor for 1913, the membership owing allegiance to international organizations reached the large proportions of 149,577, leaving for all other organized bodies a membership of 26,222.

Toronto leads with 121 unions and a membership of 20,953. Montreal is second, with 121 unions and 18,556 members.

Indigestion And Headaches

Arising from Constipation, Cured and Regular Habits Established by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

In the western Provinces, where so many thousands live far from doctors and drug stores, very many rely on Dr. Chase's medicines to cure disease and maintain health and strength. This letter gives some idea of what perfect control Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills exert over the most common ills of life.

Mrs. H. K. Hewer, farmer's wife, Eastburg, Alta., writes: "For about ten years I suffered from constipation, indigestion, headache and languid feelings. Treatment from two or three doctors afforded only temporary relief, so I turned to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and with most satisfactory results. Headaches have disappeared, regular habits established and general health very much better. Both my husband and I can speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills, as we have both been greatly benefited by them." Combining an Opponent.

Dr. Alexander Mackay, well-known in Toronto Conservative circles and a prominent member of the Board of Education of that city, is not much of a debater. He is seldom heard at board meetings or at party gatherings, but when he does speak he is listened to, and when he enters into a debate he hits home and hits hard.

All this is apropos of a little incident at a Board of Education meeting when Dr. Mackay took issue with another member on some matter of policy. His opponent had made a threatening speech, full of bravado and bluster. It was all sound and fury and suffered from lack of logic.

Dr. Mackay saw this and made the most of it by telling a little anecdote about a man who had been out one night, celebrating not wisely but too well. When the rather befuddled fellow started home a storm was threatening. Before he had fared far on his way the storm broke in all its fury. The man fell on his knees and prayed the Lord to make the storm cease. But his prayers availed nothing. The tempest continued to rage. The poor chap staggered unsteadily on. The thunders rolled and the lightning played about him. It was pitch dark. He could hardly see his hand before him, and it was only the occasional flash of lightning that showed him his path. Realizing his plight, he dropped to his knees again.

"Then," said Dr. Mackay, glancing at his opponent in debate, "he prayed: 'Oh Lord, if we must have this storm, let us have less of the noise and more of the light'."

AN EASY WAY TO GET FAT AND BE STRONG

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "flesh creams," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to the remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine into simple form the very elements needed by the digestive organs to help them convert food into rich, fat-laden blood. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol and has been termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its re-generative, reconstructive powers to coax the stomach and intestines to literally soak up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood, where they are carried to every starved, broken-down cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transformation does take place and you notice how your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on from 10 to 25 pounds of solid, healthy flesh. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Your druggist has it and will refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.

ADVICE AS TO HOW TO EFFECTUALLY FIGHT ARMY WORMS' ATTACK

Department of Agriculture Tells Farmers How to Deal With the Pest That is Causing So Much Damage.

SHOULD ACT PROMPTLY

The Department of Entomology of the Ontario Agricultural College, has issued the following bulletin in regard to the army worm:

The army worm is a stout, smooth-bodied caterpillar, blackish or brownish in colour, with two yellowish stripes, tinged with red along each side. When full grown it is about 1½ inches long. The adult is a moth, which lays her eggs chiefly on grass in low lands. The caterpillars themselves never lay eggs or produce living young. The favourite food plants are grasses, timothy, oats, corn and millet. When food becomes scarce the young move in enormous numbers in search of new feeding grounds.

As the pest is being reported from numerous counties every farmer ought to examine his fields from time to time to see if they are being attacked. If the insects have become distributed all over the field before being noticed the wisest course will be to cut the crop at once if it is timothy or grain and cure for hay, but if it is corn, scatter lightly through the field a poison mixture, made of 1 lb. of Paris green mixed thoroughly in 25 lbs. of bran, and then moisten with water, sweetened with molasses. Make the mixture just moist enough to fall through the fingers like sawdust—not sloppy.

If the crop is threatened or attacked only in part dig a trench immediately in front of where the worms are. In the case where the crop is partly attacked it will be found advisable to cut a swath through the grain and rake this off before the trench is dug. The trench is often unsatisfactory, especially in clay soil, if it is not properly made. It should be at least 18 inches deep, in clay soil, with a straight clean side towards the crop to be protected. Post holes at least a foot in depth must be sunk every 15 feet in the bottom of the trench. In sandy soil the trench works excellently, but in clay soil it is often advisable as an extra precaution to heap up the loose earth on the crop side right along the trench. The small particles of earth loosen and cause the climbing worms to drop. Hence in clay or muck soil it may be advisable to scratch the face of the wall lightly with a garden rake. Do this also after rain. When the worms are unable to climb the wall they will pass lengthwise through the trench and collect in the post holes where they may be killed by crushing or other means. In digging the trench ploughs may be used but the balance of the work should be done with spades to insure a clean deep trench.

Wherever the worms are found prompt action is very important.

GRASSHOPPERS ARE SWARMING ON FARMS

Appear in Clouds, Particularly in Dry Meadows—Continued Drought Has Enabled Them to Flourish

DO SOME DAMAGE

There is some slight ground for the statement that this seems to be a summer of pests. While the farmers of this county are few who have seen the army worm and its work, they all speak of the number of grasshoppers which have flourished during the warm dry weather. In low lands which have become parched by the drought grasshoppers are found literally in clouds. The dried out meadows find them in greatest numbers, but they are almost as numerous in the other fields. It is many years since the 'hoppers' have been nearly as numerous as they are now. Some farmers report that they are damaging their grain, but complaints have not been loud. However, almost any farmer will tell you that the country is alive with the hopping visitors. Between Peterborough and Toronto they are seen in swarms, and one traveller who wondered at the sight, asked a conductor if they were cinders. He did not thing that grasshoppers could appear in such dense swarms.

SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR CHILDREN'S CAMP RECEIVED

The committee in charge of the Children's Camp at Jackson Park gratefully acknowledge the following additional subscriptions.

It is hoped that this work will appeal to a much larger number of friends. The expense up to the present hour has been three times the amount of the receipts, and as there are no funds, apart from the voluntary subscriptions, this enterprise, which is so much appreciated by the needy, will have to be abandoned.

Surely there are scores who intend to subscribe but have been delayed by the pressure of other duties.

He gives twice who gives promptly.

Has Army Worm Reached the City?

Mr. Reg H. Turner, Gilmour street, thinks he has discovered a new source of alarm for Peterborough residents. Something is destroying the foliage on plants in his garden, and he is afraid it is the army worm. He was putting forth herculean ecorts last evening in an endeavour to head off the cause of the damage.

NORWOOD, July 25.—Mr. McRea, district representative, stated last night that reports of army worm attacks had come to him only from Otonabee, although it might be in other sections without the farmers recognizing it, or even discovering it. He strongly urged that poison be used in battling it.

The New "Empire" Theatre

With a fine air of distinction the new "Empire" theatre, Charlotte Street, opened to a bumper house last night. The audience was a select and appreciative one, and the representation and dramatic productions of a strikingly realistic character. The music was spirited and well received.

FARMERS' WIVES WERE DISMISSED

Two of Them Were Charged at Police Court This Morning With Offences Against Market By-law

DID NOT SHOW NAMES

The case against two farmers' wives for breaking the market by-law No. 1965, was dismissed by Police Magistrate Dumble this morning as this was their first offence. The section 2 of the by-law reads: Every person selling or offering or exposing for sale any article in the second flat of the market building shall display his or her name and address in some conspicuous place on or near the articles he or she may have, offer, or expose for sale. This they neglected to do.

Small Boys Made Targets of Two Launches Tied Up

An example of the refined amusement which delights the modern youth was presented along the waterfront north of the foot of Dalhousie Street. Two launches were moored above the boat-house and four well-dressed boys first explored them thoroughly, sounded the automobile horns about a hundred times, and then, standing on the railway tracks, tried to see how many stones they could put in the boats. The canvas was held at the top and bottom and naturally resisted most of the rocks, but many of them found a way through the openings and rattled on the floor. If the canvas was not torn in parts it must be cut from a strong fabric.

C. P. R. TAKES ANOTHER DROP

Holders of C. P. R. stock received a shock again this morning when they were advised that the stock had fallen again in price to 177 1-2, almost $3 a share over night. It looks like a good investment at these figures, but you never can tell.

Just read the first chapter, you will want the rest.

DUEL BETWEEN TWO JUSTICES

One Judge in the Caillaux Murder Trial Challenges Another to Mortal Combat

MAY BE OTHERS

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, July 25—A duel between Judge Albanel, President of the Court Assizes, and one of his associates, was in prospect to-day as the latest sensation in the trial of Mme. Joseph Caillaux, for the murder of Figaro, the editor. Judge Albanel sent his seconds to First Associate Judge Dagoury, because of the remark of the latter concerning letters while on the bench in the progress of the trial. The challenge to-day may be one of a series.

Madame Caillaux collapsed in a faint in court when letters of the former premier to her were read. She was carried out insensible and the court was delayed.

FIRST MASS AT T. A. S. CAMP

The first mass at the T. A. S. camp will be celebrated at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning. There is now a large number at the Park and accommodation has been provided at the Mass for visiting canoeists and campers.

NEW POTATOES 45 cts. A PECK

Tubers Have Dropped 15c. Since Last Week and There Was a Plentiful Supply This Morning

TO-DAY'S MARKET

There were many changes in he market prices this morning, the most notable being the drop in potatoes from 60c to 45c a peck. Raspberries are still 15c a box, but will probably go higher shortly, while black currants have already risen to 20c a box. The fruit is small owing to the dry weather. First arrivals in early apples realized 10c a gallon.

Beets, onions, radishes, lettuce and cucumbers are all 5c, and string beans 5c a quart.

A somewhat meagre offering of butter sold early at 28c a pound an increase of several cents over last week. Eggs are still plentiful at 21c to 22c a dozen and spring chicken, $1 to $1.50 per pair, ordinarily $1.25 per pair.

Presented Watch To Harvey Girl Who Made Best Standing

A delightful social was held last night on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison, of Harvey township, about 2½ miles from Buckhorn on the Lakehurst road. It was in aid of the Methodist church, and being graced with fine weather was largely attended. The Indian band from Chemong contributed largely to the pleasure of the evening. A baseball match between the Lakefield and 16th line of Smith teams also provided entertainment.

During the evening Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., presented a gold wrist watch to Miss Edith Hiscott, who obtained the highest marks among the Harvey pupils who tried the recent entrance examinations. The daughter of Mr. David Weir was a close second and deserved honourable mention. Mr. Burnham stated that he found the winners of these watches to be mostly younger girls, little tots of 12 years for the most part, who made better showings than their elder companions.

FAILURE OF HOME RULE CONFERENCE HAS CAUSED BAD CRISIS

One Paper Says Ireland Has Become a Powder Magazine and a Single Breach of Peace May Cause Serious Consequences.

SITUATION SERIOUS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 25.—One report said to-day that the failure of the Home Rule conference has resulted in the paradox of relieving tension of all parties. According to another Ireland has now become a powder magazine, and a match may be laid at any instant as the result of the failure. The Telegraph's correspondent says a single breach of peace trivial in itself may now lead to the most disastrous consequences. With a hundred thousand men in possession of arms and ready for any contingency, the leaders on both sides have successfully kept them in check up to the present time, but fears of disturbances are more serious to-day than at any time since the introduction of the bill. The Nationalist party is said to express open satisfaction at the outcome of the conference, while the Unionists believe the general election is now inevitable. The failure of the conference therefore has caused a grave crisis.

The Times says the Government will pass the bill and put upon the Unionists the onus of accepting or rejecting the original offer of amending the bill plus the abolition of the time limit.

GETS MONTH IN GAOL ON THEFT CHARGE

John Doig Convicted by Magistrate Dumble of Stealing Iron Bolts From Hydraulic Co'y

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT

The case against Wm. Bell for non-support, which was enlarged from last Saturday, was finished this morning. Mrs. Bell appeared in court and said that her husband had been working steadily ever since, and that he had been good to her, and had stopped drinking, so the charge against him was withdrawn.

John Doig was charged with stealing, in November, 1913, a quantity of iron bolts to the value of $10 from the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. He elected to be tried by Magistrate Dumble, and pleaded not guilty.

Mr. W. H. Denham, manager of the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. stated that about a year ago they tore down the old London St. Bridge, and sold the iron bolts on the west side to Mr. Lowe, the junk dealer. About the 6th of July, 1914, Mr. Denham sold the bolts on the east side to Mr. Lowe, and told him to get them, but Mr. Lowe was unable to find them. Mr. Denham went to Lowe's yard and saw some of the stolen bolts. Asked where he got them Lowe said he bought them from Johnny Doig.

Mr. Lowe, the junk dealer, informed the court that Doig told him that he got he bolts at the London St. Bridge. Doig brought the bolts in in different lots, and they were the same as those Lowe bought from Mr. Denham the first time.

Johnny Doig swore that he bought between 700 and 800 lbs. of bolts and scrap iron from the Cavendish Lumber Co. and then bought some more bolts and iron from a mill in Lakefield that had been burnt down, and got some more from the old bridge at Hiawatha. Doig denied telling Lowe that he got the bolts at the London St. Bridge.

Magistrate Dumble found the prisoner guilty and sentenced him to one month in jail.

Citizen Calls It "Wild Cat" Proposal

Editor of The Examiner,—I was amused at the wild cat proposal made by Mr. J. H. Burnham to celebrate the opening of the Trent Valley Canal this fall as contained in your yesterday's issue, when the project will not be completed before a year or two at the earliest, if indeed it becomes a pre-millenial fact. The celebration could just as well have taken place before Mr. Burnham was born, for the project was started ninety-three years ago.

It seems strange that the project was started at all if it is only now that Mr. Burnham has found out its importance and seeks to impress the same upon the benighted citizens. It took him also a long time to find out that it will place Peterborough among the lake ports and that he deems it wise to enlighten others that they may know it as well. At best it will only be a lake port in a restricted sense accommodating small craft such as barges, tugs, river steam boats and other light draught boats which run on our river but never will the ordinary lake boats be able to ply on the waters of the canal.

Mr. Burnham's density in matters pertaining to the importance of the canal will never be a light unto others who have a due appreciation of the importance of the project.

What irony to say that Alderman Johnston and others members of the Council were beginning to work on the details of the celebration when it was this same Council which gave away our valuable river front to the C.P.R. Company, and thereby shut us out from access to our prospective lake port, which they propose to celebrate! The heated term may have something to do with it. By all means celebrate—when the proper time comes.

Cabbage Worm in Monaghan

Acres of Cabbage Destroyed by Troublesome Insects

In discussing the state of agricultural affairs with farmers, on the Market this morning, it was learned that in Monaghan, though they are not troubled with the army worm, the cabbage worm is working havoc in that vicinity. They are very difficult to exterminate and already many acres of cabbages have been destroyed.

BONNER-WORTH EMPLOYEES' OUTING

Enjoyable Day Spent at Stoney Lake Yesterday

The Bonner-Worth Co. held an excursion to Stoney Lake, going up over the Canal to Lakefield and around the Lakes, on the Steamer Stoney Lake. About one hundred and fifty took in the outing and altogether a very enjoyable time was spent. A stop was made at McCracken's Landing for dinner, after which a delightful sail around the Lake took place. The excursionists returned home early in the evening, after a most successful, as well as pleasant, day.

Killed Boy Who Eloped With Daughter

HAVERSTRAW, N.Y., July 24.—Eugene Newman, a 19-year-old youth, who last Saturday eloped with Anna Cleary, daughter of Wm. C. Cleary, town clerk of Haverstraw, and prominent in Rockland County Democratic politics, was shot and killed in Cleary's office here. Cleary walked to the office of a local newspaper and there surrendered himself to the justice of the peace, who committed him to the Rockland County gaol in New City on a charge of murder.

No one witnessed the shooting and it was not known to-night whether Cleary and Newman quarreled. The boy came from New York City, it was understood, to discuss with his wife's father the elopement, which culminated in marriage, a Baptist clergyman in Weehawken, N.J., performing the ceremony.

Newman is a son of Frederick Newman, one of the proprietors of the Rockland County Messenger, a weekly paper published here.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

SATURDAY, JULY 25, 1914

A DANGER SPOT.

The river in the vicinity of Crawford's Grove is a very dangerous bathing place, by reason of several deep holes that are death traps to bathers inexpert in swimming. In wading outward from shore the bather is in danger of sinking into a deep hole with disastrous results as happened only a few days ago, and as has frequently happened every year almost for years past. This is nevertheless a favourite bathing place and dozens of lads every day in the season are to be found there. The authorities should protect these bathers by either conspicuously posting printed warnings as to the dangerous character of the river bottom or the river in the vicinity should be charted and the danger spots indicated by strong stakes or some similar device. In the sweltering weather of summer the water is simply irresistible to the boy, and she should be encouraged to use the water, so that he will learn the life-saving art of swimming. We have got over our little splurge for providing bathing facilities in different parts of the town; and when boys and young men have to go out of the city to find bathing places for themselves, the authorities could well afford to make conditions as safe as possible. It would be an awful reflection for someone in authority to think, that the next drowning accident, at Crawford's Grove, the next life lost, might be laid at the door of his failure to protect human life.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

What has become of the "City beautiful" cry that was raised at a big banquet at the Oriental Hotel last spring? Has it, like the wife's furs, been packed away in moth balls. Or it is like the god Baal—"either it is talking or it is pursuing or, peradventure, he sleepeth and must be awaked." The idea of the city beautiful, if not dead; it is dormant, and must be awaked." The Examiner would grow weary in the work of calling attention to and arousing interest in city beautification if it had not frequent evidence that an interest is being excited amongst the people at large. Many of our citizens are taking on the right idea, and are only waiting to give their cooperation to the authorities, civic and otherwise, that are the natural leaders of such a movement. The people are becoming every day more and more impressed with the natural possibilities of Peterborough in the way of becoming, that it of being made the most beautiful city in the Province or Dominion. The beauty of the situation is that to accomplish this will cost comparatively little money. The chief thing wanted is leadership and expert direction. Obviously, the first step is to create a body that will take general oversight of the work of beautification of the city, by way of tree planting, and tree care, boulevard erection and care, care of parks, etc. This need not involve much expense. Surely we could find in Peterborough public-spirited men to compose a Park Commission, or whatever name may be preferred, to serve the city without salary. Men with public spirit enough, with sufficient aesthetic instinct and cultured taste to qualify them for such a service, would find ample reward in the results of their labour. We know the citizens at large would cooperate and we could then count upon something being done in a systematic and consequently, satisfactory way. For Heaven's sake let us wake up; let us ship our tiller, and cease drifting aimlessly in the way of realizing our possibilities in the matter of making Peterborough the city beautiful.

"LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE."

About three years ago the partisans of the Conservative party were ringing the changes on all the keys on the slogan "let well enough alone." The deluded electors, who heeded this cry have found out that they did not, as they thought, "leave well enough alone." We had things pretty comfortable at that time. We had plentiful employment, good business conditions, general prosperity, and general contentment with conditions that made the battle of life something of a joy, with adequate reward. These conditions came to us under a Liberal government; and we have only to read in Conservative journals, harrowing tales of unemployment to see the contrast. Seven or eight, or fewer years ago the job sought the man and the job had to behave pretty decently if it got the man. Now the man seeks the job and, in thousands of cases, in vain. We have a falling revenue, due to impaird purchasing power of the people. A few years ago the United States papers were bewailing the exodus of their farmers to Canada. Now we have to shut the doors in the faces of those who seek a home here and ship out others for whom in this land of plenty we can't find living employment. A few years ago we met immigrants with open hands; now we meet them with the boot. We have got all this by not "leaving well enough alone." But we are told that the Laurier Government deserved no credit. The good times, the national thrift, the prosperity that attended nearly every year of the fifteen years of Liberal rule, from 1896 to 1911, were only due to "Laurier's luck". What then? Isen't a lucky statesman, whose reign is fortunate, and carries prosperity with it, better than a statesman whose reign inaugurated almost the first and certainly the worst hard times the country has had in nearly twenty years. Isn't a mascot better than a hoodoo? In the face of a falling revenue the Borden Government has "dashed away and spent the money" with the object, no doubt, in part, of giving employment and developing prosperity. The result has been disappointment; for employment is hard to find; thousands suffer or face enforced idleness and hunger in the coming months in a land of plenty, in a country, rightly governed, with the greatest natural food resources in the world. Why is it so? While we may wait in vain for a satisfactory answer, we have the fact that when the Laurier Government went out good times went out with it, and that when the Borden Government came in bad times came with it and are staying with it—and us.

IT MADE A BIG DIFFERENCE.

Sir Robert Borden in passing through Toronto yesterday en route to Muskoka, where he is to take the rest cure, and a few rounds of wrestle with Muskoka mosquities, told a newspaper reporter that the result of the practical defeat of the Roblin Government in Manitoba hadn't "made much difference to the Dominion Government." Sir Robert is too modest. Let us see if it hasn't made considerable "difference to the Dominion Government." The constituencies represented by three members of Mr. Borden's cabinet practically lost their Conservative complexion and the conditions promise "hard going" when their members enter the running at the next general election.

Hon. Robert Rogers sits in the Commons as he member for the City of Winnipeg. In the recent Manitoba elections four out of the six provincial constituencies included in that city, went Liberal.

Hon. J. W. Roche, another member of Sir Robert's cabinet, sits for Marquette. In the recent election the Liberals not only redeemed one of the provincial constituencies included on provincial constituencies included in the federal district of Marquette, but polled a tidy majority in the federal district as a whole.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, who made such a hit as special pleader for the Government's sins in the Opera House here recently, was elected by acclamation for Portage La Prairie in 1911. In the Manitoba elections the provincial riding of Portage La Prairie was won by the Liberals from Hon. Hugh Armstrong, a member of the Roblin Government. Gladstone, another of the provincial ridings in the federal district of Portage La Prairie was carried by the Liberals by upwards of 400, and in another riding the Conservative was elected by only 18. In the Dominion constituencies as a whole the Liberals outpolled the Conservatives.

The result in the provincial elections was not only a Conservative defeat, but a mighty strong condemnation of three of Mr. Borden's Ministers. The electors who sent two of these ministers to Ottawa in 1911 by acclamation—Messrs. Rogers and Meighen—and elected Hon. Dr. Roche by 1,088 majority, have now declared against them.

One would think that Sir Robert would not feel justified in thinking that a general elector that condemned three of the members of his cabinet would not make much "difference to the Dominion Government." Perhaps the Premier will get another little eye-opener or two when he strikes Manitoba in his coming speaking tour, especially when his vision is assisted by recollections of recent developments in New Brunswick, where the Conservative cause has been pretty severely log-rolled.

Wonderful Scope And Wonderful System of Lloyd George Insurance

LONDON, JULY 24 — Whatever place Lloyd George may occupy in history, no one who has made a study of the workings of the Insurance Act will deny him credit for the development of a marvellous administrative system.

The Act's machinery is built to deal with millions of persons, millions in money—dollars as well as pounds—and millions of cards. In Wellington House, for instance, a huge block of buildings in Westminster, now known as the home of national health insurance, thinking imperially is inevitable. The clients number nearly 14,000,000. The amount of money dealt with annually reaches £20,000,000 ($100,000,000), while cards of insured persons pour into the branch office at Maida Vale in avalanches of 10,000,000.

For besides Wellington House there is the Maida Vale establishment—once an immense skating rink. And then there is the office in Leonard Street, where an actuarial staff undertakes the responsibility of crediting the reserve values to the approved societies, a task involving the examination and proving of some 11,000,000 claims. Thus, it is seen that the insurance commission must think literally in millions.

The daily tide of correspondence at Wellington House flows into a large room on the ground floor, where, after the envelopes have been removed, it is diverted into the main channels of the department, the sections relating to approved societies, insurance committees, collections of contributions and accounting.

Many are Illiterate.

A considerable proportion of those affected by the Insurance Act are illiterate and unaccustomed to writing or receiving letters. This fact serves to increase the difficulties of the commission. Their correspondence frequently arrives without any indication of the writer's address or without sufficient indication to secure a reply. So there must be an outdoor staff to reach the insured persons who don't know how to pen or receive letters intelligently.

Moreover the daily mailbag covers a wide field of inquiry, and many of the questions raised concern matters of principle and inquiry which cannot be settled off-hand. The correspondence is probably the most varied and curious received by any department of State.

Here, for instance, is a letter from some one interested in a licensed woman hawker, "far advanced in consumption," who "has disappeared." What can Wellington do to assist? The next is from a physician who was sent for by a woman who had not her current medical card. The third is an application for refund of contribution from some one "insured in error."

And here is a sailor's wife asking if she will get 5s. ($1.25) a week and 30s. ($7.50) maternity benefit, and whether she is entitled "to anything from the navy."

Large "Army" is Employed.

The staff at Wellington House comprises a whole "army," necessarily. In all, there are between 450 and 500 persons. For the purposes of the outdoor staff, which is the eyes and ears of the commission, the country is divided into nine sections, in charge of ten divisional inspectors, who act under the immediate instructions of the chief inspector at headquarters. Each division is divided into districts, arranged, so far as is geographically convenient, on a basis of equality of population.

Now picture a hall 480 feet long, and 100 feet wide, covered by a glass roof. Divide it up with temporary partitions, line it with corridors of card filing frames, people it with hundreds of workers and you will have some idea of the scene at Maida Vale.

Here is a girl engaged in telling the cards. Piled before her are packets of contribution cards sent in by one or another of the approved societies and in front is a wooden case, in thirteen divisions, one for each week in the quarter. She has to place every card from her pile into one or another of these divisions, according to the number or value of stamps it bears, a task complicated by the fact that number less cards bear stamps of varying denominations or value.

The cards come from the societies in bundles and after their receipt is acknowledged they are stacked away until the telling section is ready for them. The telling sheet anaylsis is sent to the examiing branch to be compared with the society's own return. If the two statements do not tally the differences must be investigated.

All Claims Must Tally.

If the society's return agrees with the "teling" sheet analysis the society is advised of the sum placed to its credit. That sum is not the exact amount of the value of the stamps on the cards but that amount less reductions for reserve value, about four cents in the case of men and about three cents in the case of women. If it is borne in mind that more than 10,000,000 cards are being dealt with, some idea may be gained of the task involved in making all these adjustments and the labour devolving on the examining department. After advices of credit have been issued to the societies the returns and cards ar stacked away, 50,000,000 being so filed at Maida Vale that any one card can be turned up in a few minutes.

But perhaps the more interesting side of the work is that relating to the deposit contributor. Of 216,000, whose cards were received in January 200,000 have received insurance books, the remaining 15,000 consisting of new entrants into insurance, and of persons who so far have not furnished the necessary information on which they can be established as deposit contributors, such as their age and whether they are British subjects.

When one recalls all the criticism of the Insurance Act, it seems wonderful that out of 10,000,000 insured persons only a little more than 200,000 were not members of approved societies on January 11th last, and of these fewer than 10,000 had neglected or declined to take formal steps to establish their status of insurance.

The deposit contributors' contribution cards are forwarded to Maida Vale and are sent at once to the ledger branch. All cards received without books or without a ledger number are traced in a colossal deposit contributors' index and either connected with ledger accounts or specially dealt with so that an account may be opened. This index is divided into eighty sections and contains a record of all known addresses of deposit contributors, the prolific family of Smiths, of whom there are more than 10,000 males, having a section to itself.

And there is a home for lost cards, cards of those who have died or emigrated, or cards returned undelivered by the post-office. There they stand in their silent, serried, closely stacked thousands, each the brief record of a life, for the most part humble and suggestive records, leaving much to the imagination to fill in a room of ghosts.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

CHAPTER I.
THE AWAKENING.

Dimly like the daybreak glimmer of a sky long wrapped in fogs, a sign of consciousness began to dawn in the face of the tranced girl.

Once more the breath of life began to stir in that full bosom, to which again a vital warmth had on this day of days crept slowly back.

And as she lay there, prone upon the dusty floor, her beautiful face buried and shielded in the hollow of her arm, a sigh welled from her lips.

Life—life was flowing back again! The miracle of miracles was growing to reality.

Faintly now she breathed; vaguely her heart began to throb once more. She stirred. She moaned, still for the moment powerless to cast off wholly the enshrouding incubus of that tremendous, dreamless sleep.

Then her hands closed. The finely tapered fingers tangled themselves in the masses of thick, luxuriant hair which lay outspread all over and about her. The eyelids trembled.

And, a moment later, Beatrice Kendrick was sitting up, dazed and utterly uncomprehending, peering about her at the strangest vision which since the world began had ever been the lot of any human creature to behold—the vision of a place transformed beyond all power of the intellect to understand.

For of the room which she remembered, which had been her last sight when (so long, so very long ago) her eyes had closed with that sudden and unconquerable drowsiness, of that room, I say, remained only walls, ceiling, floor of rust-red steel and crumbling cement.

Quite gone was all the plaster

On the Advice of His Doctor

He Used Dr. Chase's Ointment for Protruding Piles With Splendid Results.

Too often a doctor can only think of an operation when asked for a treatment for piles. Some are sufficiently broad-minded to use the most effective treatment available, which is undoubtedly Dr. Chase's Ointment as was proved in the case referred to in this letter.

Mr. Simon E. Jones, Railway street Inverness, N. S., writes; "I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable for protruding piles. For three years I suffered from piles, and was advised by a local physician to try Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had tried many treatments in vain, and therefore know which is the best. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment, and you are at liberty to use this statement."

The record of cures of every form of piles which stands behind Dr. Chase's Ointment is the strongest guarantee you can have that it will promptly relieve and cure this ailment, even in the most agravated form. 60c a box, all dealers.

no by magic. Here on them a heap of whitish dust betrayed where some of its detritus still lay.

Gone was every picture, chart, and map—which— but an hour since, it seemed to her—had decked this office of Allan Stern, consulting engineer, this aerie up in the forty-eighth story of the Metropolitan Tower.

Furniture, there was none. Over the still-intact glass of the windows cobwebs were draped so thickly as almost to exclude the light of day—a strange, fly-infested curtain where once neat green shade-rollers had hung.

Even as the bewildered girl sat here, lips parted, eyes wide with amaze, a spider seized his buzzing prey and scampered back into a hole in the wall.

A huge, leathery bat, suspended upside down in the far corner, cheeped with dry, crepitant sounds of irritation.

Beatrice rubbed her eyes.

"What?" she said, quite slowly. "Dreaming? How singular! I only wish I could remember this when I wake up. Of all the dreams I've ever had, this one's certainly the strangest. So real, so vivid! Why, I could swear I was awake — and yet—"

All at once a sudden doubt flashed into her mind. An uneasy expression dawned across her face. Her eyes grew wild with a great fear; the fear of utter and absolute incomprehension.

Something about this room, this weird awakening, bore in upon her consciousness the dread tidings that was not a dream!

Something drove home to her the fact that it was real, objective, positive! And with a gasp of fright she struggled up amid the litter and the rubbish of that uncanny room.

"Oh!" she cried in terror, as a huge scorpion, malevolent, and with its tail raised to strike, scuttled away and vanished through a gaping void where once the corridor-door had swung. "Oh, oh! Where am I? What—what has—happened?"

Horrified beyond all words, pale and staring, both hands clutched to her breast, whereupon her very clothing now had torn and crumbled, she faced about.

To her it seemed as though some monstrous evil thing were lurking in the dim corner at her back. She tried to scream, but could utter no sound, save a choked gasp.

Then she started toward the doorway. Even as she took the first few steps her gown — a mere tattered mockery of raiment—fell away from her.

And, confronted by a new problem, she stopped short. About her she peered in vain for something to protect her disarray. There was nothing!

"Why—where's—where's my chair? My desk?" she exclaimed thickly, darting toward the place by the window where they should have been, and were not. Her shapely feet fell soundlessly in that strange and impalpable dust which thickly coated everything.

"My typewriter? Is—can that be my typewriter Great Heavens! What's the matter here, with everything? Am I mad?"

There before her lay a somewhat larger pile of dust mixed with soft and punky splinters of rotten wood. Amid all this decay she saw some bits of rust, a corroded type-bar or two, even a few rubber key-caps, still recognisable, though with the letters quite obliterated.

All about her, veiling her completely in a mantle of wondrous gloss and beauty, her lustrous hair fell, as she stopped to see this strange, incomprehensible phenomenon. She tried to pick up one of the rubber caps. At her merest touch it crumbled in to an impalpable white powder.

Back with a shuddering cry the girl sprang, terrified.

"Merciful Heavens!" she supplicated. "What — what does all this mean?"

For a moment she stood there, her every power of thought, of motion, numbed. Breathing not, she only stared in a wild kind of cringing amazement, as perhaps you might do if you should see a dead man move.

Then to the door she ran. Out into the hall she peered, this way and that, down the dismantled corridor, up the wreckage of the stairs all cumbered, like the office itself, with dust and vermin.

Aloud she hailed: "Oh! Help, help, help!" No answer. Even the echoes flung back only dull, vacuous sounds that deepened her sense of awful and incredible isolation.

What? No noise of human life anywhere to be heard? None! No familiar hum of the metropolis now rose from what, when she had fallen asleep, had been swarming streets and miles of habitations.

Instead, a blank, unbroken leaden silence, that seemed part of the musty, choking atmosphere — a silence that weighed down on Beatrice like funeral-palls.

Dumfounded by all this, and by the universal crumbling of every perishable thing, the girl ran, shuddering, back into the office. There in the dust her foot struck something hard.

She stooped; she caught it up and stared at it.

"My glass ink-well! What? Only such things remain?

No dream, then, but reality! She knew at length, that some catastrophe, incredibly vast, some disaster cosmic in the tragedy of its sweep had desolated the world.

"Oh, my mother!" cried she. "My mother— dead? Dead, now, how long?"

She did not weep, but just stood cowering, a chill of anguished horror racking her. All at once her teeth began to chatter, her body to shake as with an ague.

Thus for a moment dazed and stunned she remained there, knowing not which way to turn nor what to do. Then her terror-stricken gaze fell on the doorway leading from her outer office to the inner one, the one where Stern had had his laboratory and his consultation-room.

This door now hung, a few worm-eaten planks and splintered bits of wood, barely supported by the rusty hinges.

Toward it she staggered. About her she drew the sheltered masses of her hair, like a Godiva of another age; and to her eyes, womanlike, the hot tears mounted. As she went, she cried in a voice of horror.

"Mr. Stern! Oh—Mr. Stern! Are—are you dead, too? You can't be—it's too frightful!"

She reached the door. The mere touch of her outstretched hand disintegrated it. Down in a crumbling mass it fell. Thick dust, billed up in a cloud, through which a single sun-ray that entered the cobwebbed pane shot a radiant arrow.

Peering, hesitant, fearful of even greater terrors in that other room, Beatrice peered through this dust-haze. A sick foreboding of evil possessed her at thought of what she might find there—yet more afraid was she of what she knew lay behind her.

An instant she stood within the ruined doorway, her left hand resting on the mouldy jam. Then, with a cry, she started forward—a cry in which terror had given place to joy, despair to hope.

Forgotten now the fact that, save for the shrouding of her massy hair, she stood naked. Forgotten the wreck, the desolation everywhere.

"Oh—thank Heaven!" gasped she.

There, in that inner office, half-rising from the wrack of many things that had been and were now no more, her startled eyes beheld the figure of a man—of Allan Stern!

He lived!

At her he peered with eyes that saw not, yet; toward her he groped a vague, unsteady hand.

He lived!

Not quite alone in this world-ruin, not all alone was she!

CHAPTER II.
REALIZATION.

The joy in Beatrice's eyes gave way to poignant wonder as she gazed on him. Could this be he?

Yes, well she knew it was. She recognized him even through the grotesquery of his slinging rags, even behind the mask of a long, red, dusty beard and formidable mustache, even despite the wild and staring incoherence of his whole expression.

Yet how incredible the metamorphosis! To her flashed a memory of this man, her other-time employer — keen and smooth-shaven, alert, well-dressed, self-centred, dominant, the master of a hundred complex problems, the directing mind of engineering works innumerable.

Faltering and uncertain now he stood there. Then, at the sound of the girl's voice, he staggered toward her with outflung hands. He stopped, and for a moment stared at her.

For he had had no time as yet to correlate his thoughts, to pull himself together.

And while ones' heart might throb ten times, Beatrice saw terror in his blinking, bloodshot eyes.

But almost at once the engineer mastered himself. Even as Beatrice watched him, breathlessly, from the door, she saw his fear die out, she saw his courage well up fresh and strong.

It was almost as though something tangible were limning the man's soul upon his face. She thrilled at sight of him.

And though for a long moment no word was spoken, while the man and woman stood looking at each other like two children in some dread and unfamiliar attic, an understanding leaped between them.

Then, womanlike, instinctively as she breathed, the girl ran to him. Forgetful of every convention and of her disarray, she seized his hand. And in a voice that trembled till it broke she cried:

"What is it? What does all this mean? Tell me!"

To him she clung.

"Tell me the truth—and save me! Is it real?"

Stern looked at her wonderingly. He smiled a strange, wan, mirthless smile.

All about him he looked. Then his lips moved, but for the moment no sound came.

He made another effort, this time successful.

"There, there," said he huskily, as though the dust and dryness of the innumerable years had got into his very voice. "There, now, don't be afraid!

"Something seems to have taken place here while—we've been asleep. What? What is it? I don't know yet. I'll find out. There's nothing to be alarmed about, at any rate."

"But—look!" She pointed at the hideous desolation.

"Yes, I see. But no matter. You're alive. I'm alive. That's two of us, anyhow. Maybe there are a lot more. We'll soon see. Whatever it may be, we'll wag."

He turned and, trailing rags and streamers of rotten cloth that once had been a business suit, he waded through the confusion of wreckage on the floor to the window.

If you have seen a weather-beaten scarecrow flapping in the wind, you rave some notion of his outward guise. No tramp you ever laid eyes on could have offered so preposterous an appearance.

Down over his shoulders fell the matted, dusty hair His tangled beard reached far below his waist. Even his eyebrows, naturally rather light, had grown to a heavy thatch above his eyes.

Save that he was not grey or bent, and that he still seemed to have the resilent force of vigorous manhood, you might have thought him some incredibly ancient Rip Van Winkle come to life upon that singular stage, there in the tower.

But little time gave he to introspection or the matter of his own appearance. With one quick gesture he swept away the shrouding tangle of webs, spiders, and dead flies that obscured the window. Out he peered.

"Good Heavens!" cried he, and started back a pace.

She ran to him.

"What is it?" she breathlessly exclaimed,

"Why, I don't know—yet. But this is something big! Something universal! It's—it's—no, no, you'd better not look out—not just yet."

"I must know everything. Let me see!"

Now she was at his side, and, like him, staring out into the clear sunshine, out over the vast expanses of the city.

A moment's utter silence fell. Quite clearly hummed the protest of an imprisoned fly in a web at the top of the window. The breathing of the man and woman sounded quick and loud.

"All wrecked?" cried Beatrice. "But then—"

"Wrecked? It looks that way," the engineer made answer, with a strong effort holding his emotions in control. "Why not be frank about this? You'd better make up your mind at once to accept the very worst. I see no signs of anything else."

"The worst? You mean—"

"I mean just what we see out there. You can interpret it as well as I."

Again the silence while they looked, with emotions that could find no voicing in words. Instinctively the engineer passed an arm about the frightened girl and drew her close to him.

THE HOME RULE CONFERENCE FAILS

Ulsterites and Nationalists Cannot Bridge Differences --Bill May Now Go Through---Premier Asquith is Expected to Offer Original Amending Act to the Lords as a Peace Measure and if it is Refused He Will Put Home Rule into Force---Ulster Volunteers Warned.

LONDON, July 25.—Formal announcement that the Buckingham Palace conferences on Home Rule could not bridge the narrow differences which separate the Ulsterites and Nationalists on the Home Rule question was made to King George yesterday by the Speaker of the House of Commons, the Rt. Hon. Jas. Lowther, and the House itself by Premier Asquith.

While the failure of the King's attempt to bring about a compromise was well-known Wednesday, the fact that the party leaders continued to discuss the question at issue kindled the faint hopes throughout the country that the deadlock might yet be dissolved. The definite fall of the curtain on the monarch's successful plan to bring face to face across the table, the men who are most responsible for the present sensational crisis a British history leaves the country in a mental frame of deepest pessimism.

No one sees any possibility of a settlement of the dispute unless it be by the Government appealing to a verdict of the country through a general election and such a step would be considered generally not a compromise but a surrender by Premier Asquith's Cabinet.

The shortness of the conference indicates how firm the deadlock was. Notwithstanding the usual official secrecy, some of the participants felt bound to tell their nearest supporters what had occurred, and the secrets have been disseminated through a widening circle.

Apparently Sir Edward Carson and Captain Craig insisted on their constantly proclaimed "clean cut" of the whole of Ulster from the proposed Dublin Government. The Nationalists, represented by John Redmond and John Dillon, were willing, it is believed, to concede the exclusion of Ulster's counties by popular vote, provided any of the counties excluded were given the opportunity of voting for inclusion at a later date. Tyrone has been the bone of contention which neither side was willing to surrender.

The House of Lords' amending bill, which embodied the concessions the Government is prepared to offer, will come before the House of Commons on Tuesday. The members of the Cabinet have not yet disclosed their plans to the Liberal members, but the talk in the lobby of the House last night was that the Premier will say next Tuesday that the Government is prepared to proceed with the amending bill in its original form, if he believes the House of Lords is prepared to receive it as a peace measure. If not, he will withdraw it and the Home Rule bill unamended will become law and be presented to the King for his signature.

The Premier may then advise the King to dissolve Parliament and a general election would follow.

The passage of the Home Rule bill without amendments excluding any part of Ulster from its provisions would be the signal for Ulster to start its provisional government.

The Liberal newspapers continue to attack King George for the part he took in the conference. The Nation says:

"We do not quarrel with the King's idea of calling on both parties to find a remedy, but in his summoning of the chief rebels to the palace, and in his flattering speech about them is so much endorsement of a certain kind of treason which the higher powers seem to approve that we wonder where British sovereignty and British constitutionalism are being lead."

ULTIMATUM TO SERVIA

Peace of Europe Depends Upon Action of Russia and Servia

Special Cable to The Examiner.

LONDON, July 24.—Upon the action of Russia and Servia as a result of the ultimatum served upon the Belgrade Government rests the peace of Europe. The Austro-Hungarian minister at Belgrade is instructed to leave Servia with his entire staff, unless he is notified by six o'clock tonight that the terms of the ultimatum will be complied with. This was the opinion in the diplomatic and military circles in all the capitals. Special ministerial council was called by the Czar to-day, when Russia will act in behalf of Servia. The first step will be in the form of a request for the extension of the time limit which, if refused, it is reported, will be answered by an ultimatum to Austria by the Russian Government. London and all European stock markets are extremely weak to-day because of the danger of war. C.P.R. fell over three points at the opening. Russia will have the support of England and France. All members of the British cabinet have cancelled the week-end engagements, remaining in London. Orders for prompt mobilization of the Russian army is anticipated. A grave view is taken in all capitals.

Later—It is reported Servia asked Austria more time until parliament could meet, when the demands which would not hurt Servia's national prestige would be granted.

Tomato Jelly.

Either fresh or canned tomatoes may be used for tomato jelly. Let one quart of tomatoes simmer down to about half that quantity, with a bay leaf and a small onion. Strain and season with salt and paprika or cayenne. Dissolve a third of a box of gelatine in a cup of cold water and stir it into the tomatoes. Wet a mould or bowl with cold water, pour in the jelly and set away in a cool place to harden. Small ramekins or after-dinner coffee cups may be used instead of one large mould. Turn out at the last minute on crisp white lettuce, and serve with mayonnaise.

Gypsies Are Chased Out Of Peterborough

The gypsies have departed from our midst, having been given their ticket of leave by Chief Thompson yesterday afternoon and told to get out of the city. It appears that one of the women gypsies is a fortune teller, and while telling your fortune gets her victims to hold some paper money in their hand, and then asks if she can hold it while the dupe wishes for something. It seems that during this operation several people lost part of their money, as the Chief had received several complaints. One man in the Oriental Cafe, yesterday afternoon, was minus $5 when the gypsy gave him his money back after holding it for him, and he had her arrested. Chief Thompson found the $5 bill in her purse and told her if she would give it back he would let her go if they immediately set out for other regions. This she did and they left for North Bay.

General Huerta Coming To Toronto

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, July 25.—That General Huerta, the recently displaced President of Mexico, is on the way to Toronto, and that General Felix Diaz is still in the city, despite official denial, is the story that come from unusually well informed source. Huerta's mission here would be to confer with Diaz. It is well known that at the time of the Niagara conference many prominent Mexicans were in Toronto. Toronto may be the headquarters for another Mexican intrigue.

Suffragette Identified.

AYR, Scotland, July 25. — "Janet Arthur," the militant suffragette, charged with attempting on July 8 to destroy Robert Burns' cottage here with a bomb, was identified yesterday by the police as Janet Parker, a relative of Field Marshal Kitchener, who took such a prominent part in the Boer war.

MME. CAILLAUX WAS PROSTRATED BY THE LETTER EVIDENCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, France, July 25.—As soon as the court open Maitre Labori began reading some of the Gueydan letters. He said when he took up the second one: "In this you will find burning love, but nothing indecent as common rumour reported." And then proceeding read how Caillaux, writing to the present Madame Caillaux before his divorce, told how happy he would feel when he could press a million kisses over her dear body. Madame Caillaux meantime kept her head down and her sobs could be heard all over the room. Presently with a sigh she fell prostrated to the floor and was carried out of the court. The session was immediately suspended.

CRISIS HURTS MARKETS.

Austro-Servian Situation Creates Sharp Break In Berlin.

BERLIN, July 25.—It was pointed out yesterday that should Russia take part against Austria, Germany was fully prepared to draw the sword on behalf her ally in accordance with the terms of the triple alliance between Germany, Austria and Italy.

Comment in the German press yesterday strongly supports Austria. Radical organs, such as The Tageblatt and The Frankfort Gazette, which are in close touch with the financial world, and are usually strongly pacific, find the terms of the Austrian note amply justified. Newspapers, such as The Zeitung-am-Mittag and The Vossiche Zeitung, which are quickly responsive to the popular sentiment, also are pro-Austrian and evidently still feel the influence of the assassination of the archduke.

The stock market broke badly under the fear of a general European complication. Solid bank stocks, like those of the Deutsche Bank, broke over points and other leading stocks from three to four points, until the banks intervened to check further demoralization of the market.

Securities in large amounts, however, had been unloaded at the declines and the breaks in Austrian and Russian specialties assumed almost a panicky form. The Orient Railway and Turkish tobacco regie stocks fell 10 points, Russian petroleums, 16 points and Russian banks from 7 to 11 points. The weakness in Russian and Austrian Government bonds, also indicated the seriousness of the situation.

It was stated yesterday that Germany had not been consulted regarding the Austrian note to Servia before its delivery, but that she thoroughly approved the step taken and was prepared for all consequences that might ensue from it.

LETTERS MUST BE READ.

Defence In Caillaux Trial May Have Claim Exploded.

PARIS, July 25.—The defence in the trial of Mme. Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, yesterday was caught in a trap innocently set by Mme. Gueydan, once the wife of the prisoner's husband. The principal argument of Maitre Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux, has been that his client was driven to her desperate act in shooting M. Calmette through fear that the two letters, of which she was aware photographic productions existed, would be published by M. Calmette, and the secrets of her inner life thereby given the public.

This argument, it is said, will be reduced to nothing by the reading of the letters, which Mme. Gueydan reluctantly gave over to Maitre Labori Thursday. Yesterday she declined to receive them back from M. Labori, and replying to a question by Labori as to what she desired done with them, the former wife of M. Caillaux said:

"I do not care what you do with them. Publish all of them if you wish to do so."

Their reading is now regarded as inevitable.

Mme. Gueydan's counsel, S. G. Archibald, said yesterday concerning the letters:

"They are innocuous. They contain several disparaging references to Mme. Gueydan, then Caillaux's wife, consider the possibilities of his obtaining a divorce. This, however, he says, would have to be after the elections. They are complete by allusion to parties of no importance whatever."

McPhail's Body Recovered.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., July 25.—The body of Jack McPhail, one of the two London men drowned at Port Stanley last Sunday by the upsetting of their canoe on Lake Erie, came to the surface yesterday and was recovered. Search is still being made for the body of young Irving Penny, who was McPhail's companion.

PRINCIPLES IN SENSATIONAL TRIAL OF MADAME CAILLAUX—The trial for the shooting of Figaro editor took a dramatic turn when her husband was denounced by his divorced wife for his "Machiavellian machinations. Counsel for the prisoner gallantly told her "I salute your grief," and succeeded in getting her consent to the production of important letters which she had hitherto refused to surrender.

KNOWING EACH OTHER.

If I knew you and you knew me,
'Tis seldom we would disagree;
But having never yet clasped hands,
Both often fail to understand
That each intends to do what's right,
And treat each other "honour bright."
How little to complain there'd be
If I knew you and you knew me.

Then let no doubting thoughts abide
Of firm good faith on either side;
Confidence to each other give,
Living ourselves, let others live;
But any time you come this way,
That you will call, we hope and pray;
Then face to face we each shall see
And I'll know you and you'll know me.

CITY SHOULD PROVIDE GRAPPLING IRONS FOR RIVER FATALITIES

It seems inevitable that drownings will occur in the Otonabee. The experience of recent years is sufficient to set up an averag number of deaths by drowning that may be expected in any year, and a certain latitude may be taken in this connection when the steadily increasing population is considered. Anticipating future fatalities, it should be the duty of the authorities to provide the necessary implements used in recovering bodies. Grappling irons, ropes, poles and hooks have been used in the past, but they have been supplied for the most part by Mr. H. B. Rye. On different occasions he has lost complete outfits, which he had willingly placed at the disposal of searchers. At times he has personally assisted in the work. It is understood that Mr. Rye's losses of materials have not been isolated cases. They have been too frequent for the citizens to permit a continuance of the past method. When he replenish his store of implements it was for purposes of protection along the water front, and when these articles are publicly used, there should at least be a public responsibility for their return.

The most satisfactory idea would assuradly be the city's provision of the paraphernalia which facilitates the recovery of bodies. That a private citizen should supply these articles and purchase new ones to replace those that are lost, should be beneath the dignity of a city of this size. Without discussing the various considerations of the situation, it is suggested that one of the Aldermen bring the matter before the Council, whereby adequate supplis may be secured and conveniently located.

A LITERARY CLUB OF THE OLDEN DAYS

Dr. Burnham has unearthed among his archives an interesting old pamphlet and has kindly placed it in the hands of The Examiner. It is the "Constitution by-laws and rules of order of "The Peterborough Literary Club instituted April, 1865." — fifty years ago. Perhaps the most interesting of its contents is the list of officers and members. Scout News

THE BOY SCOUTS AND THE MISER.

It was a clear, bracing Saturday afternoon in January, and the Crow Patrol of Scouts from Oakville was out on their weekly hike.

The Scout movement in Oakville hadn't made much progress for there was only one patrol, but this patrol helped to see a large troop grow out of it and they did.

The patrol was marching along a country road about two miles from Oakville with Tom Haden, the patrol leader at their head, when idenly they heard cries of "Help! Help!" "I've been robbed!" coming from a house lying back from the road. They dashed up to the house and found an old man weeping bitterly over an empty money chest. It appeared that the old man, having fallen asleep while reading, woke to find the window open and his money gone.

Tom Haden walked over to the window and, looking out, saw a trail in the snow leading to the woods. He turned to the Scouts and sent one home to the Village for the Constable and told the rest to follow him. He then jumped out of the window and started to follow the tracks. Tom hoped, by running fast, to overtake the thief. They ran on for half a mile when the tracks led to an old log hut. The Scouts surrounded the hut and Tom crept up to the window and looked in. He saw the thief counting. Motioning to two other Scouts to follow him, he dashed into the hut and, with their aid, soon overpowered the man and firmly tied him up. He was then made to get up and walk out of the hut and start for the old man's house. While this was going on one of the other Scouts had collected the money and tied it up in his "neckerchief."

When they reached the old man's house they found the Constable there and he quickly handcuffed the thief. The old man, who was a miser, wept for joy and offered Tom a quarter of a dollar for the service the Scouts had done for him. But Tom refused as it was only their good turn for the day.

The Scouts, however, gained by the good turn, for other boys soon joined, and the people helped the Troop funds to grow so much that the Scouts were able to go camping in the summer for two weeks.

LOS ANGELES TAXES GOING DOWN SAYS MR. R. H. BRADBURN

Mr. Rupert H. Bradburn of Los Angeles, Cal., was in Peterborough yesterday on a visit to his brother, ex-Mayor Bradburn. Together with Mrs. Bradburn and little son, they are spending the summer in the East.

Mr. Bradburn states that at the present time the City of Los Angeles is arranging to bring additional water supply to the City a distance of 250 miles, and at a cost of over $37,000,000. He says that after providing for all city conveniences, in the shape of beautifully paved streets, well kept boulevards, a water supply that cost an enormous sum of money, and that can be used on the lawns all day and all night, if desired, and in fact with having everything that could be desired, his taxes on a property worth $9,000 were only $105, in 1912, and $97 in 1914. This drop in a tax bill might well be considered wonderful.

Mr. and Mrs. Bradburn enjoy their trips to this locality nd notice considerable improvement in Peterborough's appearance on each occasion.

They will visit in Hamilton and Toronto, and retdrn to their home about August 1st.

ACTOR WITH GIRL CANED IN STREET BY HIS FATHER

NEW YORK, July 24.—Lowell Sherman, No. — West One Hundred and Twelfth street, stock company favourite and motion picture hero, was arrested at Broadway and Forty-seventh street about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after a brawl with his father and mother in which, according to Mrs. Sherman, the debonair actor struck her in the face with his fist.

A tremendous crowd which almost blocked traffic viewed the battle and saw the young man's father — John Sherman, an actor of considerable note—belabour the "movie" hero with a walking-stick. Nobody seemed to know exactly what the fight was all about, but almost everybody, recognized the participants, and the excitement ran high until Policeman Embeck struggled through the mob and made the arrest.

Later, in Night Court before Magistrate Marsh, Mrs. Sherman pleaded that her son be released. Mother like, she had decided that she could bear almost anything rather than see her boy sent to jail or fined. She was almost in tears and begged leave to withdraw the charge. Magistrate Marsh granted hr wish reluctantly.

As far as could be ascertained in the general hubub attending the fight it was noted that Sherman and a pretty woman, who is said to have been Miss Grace Canfield, daughter of Richard Canfield, the gambler, were strolling Broadway when they passed Mr. and Mrs. Sherman. It is said that Mrs. Sherman grasped her son by the sleeve and that the "movie" hero snatched his arm away.

Then, according to witnesses, the son made sundry comments and remarks which caused the father to explode. Sherman, pere, pounced upon his son and began to belabour the younger man with his walking stick. In the general furore Miss Canfield, who before her divorce was Mrs. Martin Hannan, of Providence, fled.

Martyn Returned In Hambton.

TORONTO, July 25. — Dr. J. B. Martyn, Conservative, is member in the Provincial House for East Lambton. Chief Justice Sir William Meredith, one of the election judges sitting at Osgoode Hall, gave this decision yesterday. In the recount immediately after the elections 122 ballots cast at Thedford were ruled out because the counterfoils were not denoted by the deputy returning officer, but yesterday's ruling accepts these and another ballot, beside thus giving the Conservative a majority of four over the Liberal, R. J. McCormick.

Mr. McCormick's lawyer, R. I Towers, Sarnia, has intimated that a petition will be presented for an election trial.

Plans For The North

Government Has Big Program in Hudson Bay.

TO PROTECT NAVIGATION

Hudson Strait Is Being Charted By the Steamer Acadia and Soundings of Harbors Are Under Way—Three Wireless Stations Will Be Located—Lighthouses to Be Started This Year.

OTTAWA, July 25. — The Marine and Naval Departments are engaged on a big program of work this summer trying to make Hudson Bay and Strait safe for navigation. Three wireless stations in the Strait and at the entrance to the bay are being located, so as to give a continuous line of communication from Port Nelson and Fort Churchill to the Atlantic. The actual construction of the stations, however, will not be begun until next year.

The charting of Hudson Strait is being done by the steamer Acadia, while other Government vessels are taking soundings and mapping the harbors at Port Nelson, Fort Churchill and at the mouth of the Nottaway river. The Government steamer Minto, which left Halifax Thursday for Hudson Bay, carried materials for lighthouse construction. Two lighthouses are to be commenced this year, one on each side of the entrance to Port Nelson, while another one will be built on a newly-charted shoal some miles out in the bay.

The charting being done at the mouth of the Nottaway river in preparatory to the construction of the proposed railway from there southeast to the National Transcontinental, in connection with the alternative route from Port Nelson across the northern end of James Bay and thence by rail to Montreal.

The Government plans to build the southern half of this line from the National Transcontinental to Montreal, and an appropriation of $1,000,000 was passed last session for preliminary surveys. The Clergue syndicate had originally planned to build the whole line, but according to present plans the Government itself will shoulder the cost of the portion between Montreal and the National Transcontinental.

Jamaica Not Excited.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, July 25.—Gen. Huerta had luncheon on board the Dresden with the cruiser's captain and the German consul here declined to see anyone while aboard ship.

At three o'clock yesterday afternoon, with the members of his party, the former Mexican President debarked and proceeded to a hotel. His journey there from the pier was without incident.

The arrival of Gen. Huerta here occasioned no excitement.

KILLED BY FATHER-IN-LAW.

Young Man Had Gone to Beg Forgiveness for Runaway Wedding.

HAVERSTRAW, N.Y., July 25.—Witnesses who saw Wm. V. Cleary, town clerk and political leader, kill Eugene B. Newman, his young son-in-law, in Cleary's office, Thursday testified at the coroner's inquest yesterday that Cleary fired four shots at Newman before the youth had said a word. Josiah Felter, a county supervisor, declared that young Newman entered the county clerk's office and took a seat in front of Cleary's desk. The town clerk turned around, the witness said, and remarked: "You think you've put one over on me." Then, without warning, according to Felter, Cleary drew a pistol and opened fire.

Young Newman, who is a son of one of the owners of The Rockland County Messenger, secretly married Cleary's 18-year-old daughter, Anna, on last Saturday in Weehawken, N. J. Thursday the couple confided in their respective mothers and Newman was advised to tell Cleary and ask his forgiveness.

Austria Warlike

Note to Servia Demands Satisfaction For Assassination.

BLAMES SERVIAN PEOPLE

Action Following Upon Murder of Archduke and His Wife May Plunge Nations Into War Which Would Involve the Whole of Europe — Powers Trying to Localize the Trouble.

LONDON, July 25.—European diplomacy is faced with a situation of the extremest gravity in the controversy between Austria and Servia and unless it is handled with great delicacy it is not likely that others besides these two powers will become involved in war. An Austro-Hungary ultimatum to Servia, couched in a tone of almost unprecedented severity and fastening on the Servian Government and people responsibility for the assassinations of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife at Sarajevo recently, has been presented to Belgrade. It demands satisfaction within 48 hours.

The almost universal opinion in the European capitals is that the Servian Government cannot comply with such humiliating terms as are set forth in the ultimatum, since compliance would be tantamount to an admission of Servia's guilt.

The Russian Government already is seeking to gain an extension of time for Servia.

The efforts of European diplomacy, should the powers fail to avert the threatened war, will be devoted to localizing it. Montenegro has indicated her readiness to support Servia in the event of an Austrian attack. This certainly would plunge the whole of the Balkans into war. Austria counts on the neutrality of her allies, Germany and Italy, but with the possibility of Russian intervention on behalf of Servia, Austria would run great risks of risings among her own great Slav population.

A fact much commented upon by the European newspapers is that Austria has chosen a moment for the issuing of her ultimatum when President Poincare is absent from France and two of the Balkan Premiers are abroad.

The Servian Government is withholding publication of the text of the ultimatum to Belgrade. The Austrian Minister in Belgrade has been instructed to leave there by Saturday evening if Servia fails to yield to Austria's demand.

Belgrade against the forts and Austrian gunboats on the Danube could not hold out 24 hours against a hostile force, and it is rumored in diplomatic circles here that the Servian Government is preparing to retire from Belgrade into the interior, probably to Nisch or Uskub.

According to Berlin reports Germany will not permit interference by any third party in the event of Austria-Servian war. It is reported that President Poincare of France will abandon his proposed Scandinavian tour on account of the trouble.

Minister Will Leave.

VIENNA, July 25. — Baron Vansiellingen, Austro-Hungary Minister at Belgrade, has been instructed to leave Servia with the entire legation staff at six o'clock to-night if the Servian Government has not notified him that it agrees without delay to comply with the demands of the Austrian note.

CANADA HAS SIX.

BISLEY CAMP, July 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Hendry of Dundas failed last night in the shooting off with 13 others for nine places in the final stage of the King's contest. Kingston To Deport Undesirables.

KINGSTON, July 25.—"I have the name of twenty-six undesirable immigrants whom I intend to deport," was the statement of Immigration Officer George Hunter. The immigration officer stated that he had done all in his power to get them to go to work and earn enough money to support themselves. Two immigrants have been sent back. It is the intention of Mr. Hunter to deport all immigrants who refuse to work. He is determined he will not allow immigrants to remain during the winter months and be a burden on the churches and charitable institutions.

To Develop St. Regis River.

CORNWALL, July 25.—The conservation committee has directed the chief engineer to make a survey and profile of the St. Regis River from its headwaters to its mouth at the St. Lawrence river, including such lakes and streams as are tributary to the St. Regis. He is also ordered to make preliminary plans of dams and possible water storage basins with estimate of the cost thereof together with a description of existing power developments. The water powers of the St. Regis yet undeveloped, are extensive and important.

THE MOUNTAIN FREIGHTER

Picturesque Figure Fast Disappearing From British Columbia.

The distinguishing marks of a real freighter is his inherent love of the horse, over which he holds strange dominion. He loves to tell his experiences and adventures on the trail, but he will always include the horse in his recital.

Chief among the old historic trails of British Columbia is the old Cariboo. It can be seen from the cushioned seats of the C. P. R. passenger coach as it winds along the edges of the mountains, crosses the valleys and rivers to again lose itself among the hills. It now shows the devastating hand of time in its rotted bridges and crumbling rock cuts. The lure of gold is a call with a ready response. The rough, hardy elements of mankind are ever found in the game of hazard. They are the men who take life as a gamble, who penetrate the distant unknown, and trample [illegible] the rest of their kind. They were physically strong men, endowed with imagination. They, too, have mainly gone as the old trail is going. They trod the trail in the days of the gold rush with the overmastering passion for gold, or the careless quest of adventure. But with them were the horses of the pack trail. Romance was alive; they sang of their heart's desire:

Oh slowly then I paced the deck that bore me from my home,
There were strangers all around me, and I found myself alone;
There were strangers all around me,
I knew not what to do,
But I still kept up my courage for the gold in Cariboo.

In speaking of the miner we say: "The lure of gold." In speaking of the freighter we can as truthfully say: "The lure of the trail." Many men cannot break away from the cities, while others, [illegible] pathless forest. The freighter drew a happy medium. He spent a day or two in town, but wearied [illegible] on the trail in one trip. He drank John Barleycorn in town, and fought and cursed under the influence. On the trail he lived a normal life that neutralized his brief sojourn in town. He sang from the fullness of his heart, and ate his meals in the open, under the broad canopy of heaven.

Like the ancient bards he told strange stories of prowess, but it was the prowess of his horses. He may have been a man of common intelligence, from his own view point; but his horses were uncommonly intelligent. He was a freighter.

When the Ashcroft trail was in the zenith of its glory, and thirty teams stood hitched to the big freight wagon and its trailers, was the day of the Jerk-The train; the day of the real freighter. The freighter then was no mean man of affairs. He had a fitful

Hats and the Sexes.

A woman can take a dime to the liver counter of the butcher's shop and strike a better bargain than a man could make; but a man can wear a two dollar hat till it turns green, while a woman can wear a twenty-five dollar one only till her friends know it by sight.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A PROMINENT LAWYER of this City took out a straight Life Policy of $1000.00, at age 28 in May, 1893, paying therefor an annual premium of $19.65. This he paid for 20 years, when the accumulated profits reduced the premium permanently to $10.25, subject to further yearly reductions. Thus he paid only $10.25 the twenty-first year. His annual dividend for the next year, in May last, reduced his 22nd premium to $4.30. Had he taken a Non-Par Policy he would have had to pay $17.80 annually, as long as he lived.

PETES COULD NOT SOLVE CLEMENTS' DELIVERY AND LOST TO THE HAMS

Jack White's Team Took the First Game of Series From Petes in Hamilton Yesterday by Four Runs to One.

A LOSS FOR STERLING

HAMILTON, July 24—The Hamilton baseball team showed marked improvement over its performances of the past two weks, and won to-day's game from Peterborough by a score of 4 to 1. Clements pitched for Hamilton and had the visitors at his mercy at all times. There were three errors on each side, but they were not due to any listless play, such as marked some of the games that the Hamilton team has played of late. Both pitchers had splendid control, but Clements had better support, and managed to keep the hits well scattered. Score:

IS MATTY GOING TO BEAT HIS OLD RECORD?

Christy Mathewson, in his fourteen years of pitching, has passed the .800 mark but three times as a victorious slabman. In 1904 he won 35 games and lost eight for a percentage of .814. In 1909 he won 25 games and lost six for a percentage of .806. In 1910 he worked 21 games, winning 17 and losing four for a total of .809.

So it has been four years since Matty crossed the .800 mark at the finish. Back in 1910 they figured he would never range that high again. In the last three years he only averaged about .680. Yet to-day he is well above the .800 mark with the season half gone.

Matthewson's Great Work in Fourteen Years.

	W.	L.	P.C.
1901	20	17	.541
1902	13	18	.419
1903	30	13	.697
1904	35	8	.814
1905	31	9	.774
1906	22	12	.776
1907	24	12	.667
1908	37	11	.771
1909	25	6	.806
1910	21	4	.809
1911	26	13	.667
1912	23	12	.657
1913	25	11	.694
1914	16	4	.800
Totals	352	158	.690

So far Mathewson has achieved 16 wins against four defeats for a mark of .800. It is the best pitching mark of either league for any slabman who has figured in 12 or more games.

A number of tawdry events can occur between now and October, but the fact remains that so far Matty has been pitching better ball than he has shown in a long time. In his last few starts he has been almost invincible. Part of this is due to a cool summer in the east than he has generally drawn, and the other part of it is he lays to golf. Golf has not helped develop his pitching arm nor has it added anything to the magic of his fadeaway. But it has kept him in even better condition through the winter and early spring than usual and has held him at all times fit.

Matty hasn't won over 26 games since 1908. In the last five years his run of victories has been 25, 17, 26, 23, 25. To date he has already established over half his high run since the campaign of 1908, and unless he subsides perceptibly he should range again in the 30s. And perhaps set up the best percentage mark he has ever known.

Mathewson and Plank are the two veterans of the game among those who throw a baseball for a living. There is no other regular within two years of their service still under the big tent. And when one considers that after 14 years of warfare — of the sort of warfare that finishes the average bloke within seven or eight years—they are leading their leagues, the worth of their achievement is easily understood.

Summary: Runs — Blount, Corns, Pendry, Ivers, White. Left on bases —Peterborough 9, Hamilton 7. First on errors—Peterborough 2, Hamilton 2. Stolen bases—Rooney, McGroarty, White. Two-base hits — Corns 2, Welsh. Three-base hit — Baldwin. Double play — McGroarty to Cunningham to Ivers. Sacrifice hits — Welsh, Kelly, Clements, White. Struck out—by Sterling 7, by Clements 7. Base on balls—off Sterling 4, off Clements 3. Hit by pitcher—by Clements (Fox). Passed balls, by Haeffner 2. Umpire, Freeman. Time 1.55. Attendance, 1,400.

WELSH STILL HEADING PETES

Kelly Has Climbed Back in the .300 Class—Blount and Dolan Gain

Welsh is still leading the Petes with the willow, although his percentage has dropped fourteen points since last Friday. Kelly gained a few points and is back in the .300 class. Biddy Dolan also advanced, and Blount kept up his steady climb toward the .300 class. He has now made more hits and runs and stolen more bases than any player on the club. The batting averages do not include yesterday's game. The pitchers' records are up-to date. Here are the figures:

THE PETES WILL BE HOME NEXT WEEK

The Petes will be at home all next week playing Toronto on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and Hamilton on thel ast three days of the week. After next week, the Petes will only be at Riverside Park for three days in the following three weeks. Their road trip starts in London an August 3, 4 and 5, and continues at Ottawa on August 6, 7, 8 and 9. Ottawa come here on Civic Holiday for two games, and also play on Tuesday and Wednesday, after which the Blountmen go away for nine days, playing Toronto, St. Thomas and London. They do not return to Riverside Park until August 24.

CRESSMAN'S BEAT A PICKED NINE

Last night at Riverside Park Cressman's, without the services of Germany Fluterer, their hard hitting right fielder, won their second game from the picked team representing several George street mercantile establishments. The big store boys were two runs behind until the fifth when an outfield sacrifice fly, a timely single by Raynor, a couple of passes, and a homer by Kelly, stowed the game away. Paton's pitching was again the feature, and makes his sixth successive win and one tie. The teams:

Cressman's—Paton p, Raynor 1b, Spratt 2b, Kelly ss, Panter m, Swanson c, Princow lf, H. Cressman 3b, Palmer rf.

HOME RUNS HAVE NOT BEEN PLENTIFUL

Shaughnessy, Ivers, Deneau, Dawson and Blount are the Leaders in Circuit Clouts--Bierbauer and Mullin Lead in Triples and Scott in Doubles.

A glance over the Canadian League averages fail to show many of the long-distance clouters of the Gawny Cravath, Sherwood Magee or Buck Freeman type. The home run column is not over populated and circuit clouts have been few and far between. On the Peterborough grounds, for example, there have been but two home runs this season, one by Kustus of St. Thomas, and the other by McNeal of Erie.

The hitters who have made more than one four-cushion drive are as follows:

Shaughnessy, Ottawa	3
Ivers, Hamilton	3
Deneau, Frantford	3
Dawson, Erie	4
Blount, Peterborough	3
Dudley, Brantford	3
Hadley, St. Thomas	2
Lage, Ottawa	2
Whitcraft, London	2
Rogers, Ottawa	2
Schultz, Toronto	2

The leaders in triples are as follows. Only those with five or more being given:

Bierbauer, London	10
Mullin, London	10
Trout, Toronto	8
Harris, Erie	6
Snyder, London	5
Corns, Hamilton	5

In two-base hits the following are the top-notchers:

Scott, Erie	17
Lamy, London	15
Blount, Peterborough	12
Shaughnessy, Ottawa	12
Trout, Toronto	11
Mullin, London	11
Bierbauer, London	11
Kustus, St. Thomas	11
King, Peterborough	10
Nill, Ottawa	10
Isaac, Toronto	10
Kading, St. Thomas	10
Powers, Ottawa	10
Gygli, Erie	10
Corns, Hamilton	10
Dudley, Brantford	10

The leaders in stolen bases are:

Bierbauer, London	23
Linneborn, London	22
Kopp, St. Thomas	20
Blount, Peterborough	19
Shaughnessy, Ottawa	18
Lamy, London	18
Dawson, Erie	16
Burrill, Toronto	16

In sacrifice hits the following are at the top:

Whitcraft, London	16
Byrne, Peterborough	16
Scott, Erie	16
Behan, Erie	16
Dolan, Ottawa	16
King, Peterborough	14

TWO BOOSTER DAYS FOR THE BALL CLUB

The directors of the Peterborough Ball Club have decided on two boosters' days next week, and it is hoped that the fans will rally at the call and give two grand crowds that will help in some measure to recuperate those back of the club for the losses they have already sustained. Thursday and Saturday of next week will be Booster Days, thus giving every one a chance to help the movement along. There will be no extra charge for admission to the grounds, but for the two days the admission to either grandstand will be 25c. As the home club retains all of the grandstand money, a handsome sum should be realized from the Booster Day crowds. Hamilton will be the guests of the Petes for thel ast three days of the week.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

BRANTFORD, July 24.—Manager Deneau has been dickering for an infielder named Jack Comns, who has been with the Toledo team in the Michigan State League, and who is said to have been burning up the league, and has finally secured him. This will mean Ostrich's release.

London Free Press.—In Hamilton they have solved the problem of stopping London's climb and suggest that by stealing London's bats and kidnapping Heck and Bierbauer and seven other members of the team, the feat might be accomplishd.

They have another suggestion, but it isn't to let the Grants take on all the games with London.

It is too bad that London does not play in Hamilton again. A series with the Hams would about cinch the pennant at the rate they are going just now.

No wonder Gilhooley feels a little peeved after seeing his former job at second being looked after by Cunningham. Gilhooley looked good while at the second station here, but Cunningham is still suffering from his injured foot.

Gilhooley's actions cannot be condoned for a moment, however. A ball player is said to give his best to a club, no matter where he is placed.

For campers there has been invented a gridiron with supports at either end to hold it over a fire.

ECONOMICAL LIGHT WEIGHT SIX
$1975

Studebaker SIX quality cannot be matched save by Studebaker manufacturing methods.
The assembler cannot achieve it with a lowered price—because he is an assembler, not a manufacturer.
The small manufacturer, even with a high priced car, cannot reach it because his production won't support the equipment investment.
Studebaker has all the requisites for producing the highest quality SIX—big volume, fabricateries, foundries, heat-treating plants, large shops, stamping mills, machine shops, body and upholstering plant, etc.
You'll find the evidence of Studebaker manufacturing and Studebaker quality in the way this SIX holds the road; in its vibrationless, silent motor; in its noiseless rear axle and transmission.
These qualities are present in varying degree in other cars, according to whether they are completely or semi-manufactured; or assembled; but you must have them in your "SIX".

TITLES AVAILED NOTHING.

Noble Ministers Failed To Get Audience With King.

LONDON, July 25. —Two suffragettes, belonging to the nobility, Lady Barclay and the Hon. Miss Edith Fitzgerald, were arrested yesterday at Buckingham Palace, where they made insistent attempts to present to King George a letter written to his Majesty by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

The letter demanded a personal interview with the King, and claimed that the suffragettes should be given the same right to an interview as certain militant men, namely, Sir Edward Carson, Captain Jas. Craig, John Dillon and John E. Redmond, who had, it was pointed out, been invited to Buckingham Palace by the King on his own initiative.

The two women arrived at the entrance to the palace yesterday morning, carrying a large scroll, prettily draped with purple ribbons.

Roberts Withdraws Res.

MONTREAL, July 25. — John M. Roberts has withdrawn his resignation as secretary of the Dominion Alliance on recommendation of the executive committee appointed to consider it. At the request of the committee Mr. Roberts also consented to withdraw an action for $10,000 damages against J. E. Carson, a member of the Alliance, as the result of an interview in which Mr. Carson had criticised the secretary's actions.

Mexican Treasurer Wanted.

MEXICO CITY, July 25.—As the result of the investigation ordered by Provisional President Carbajal into the finances of the country during the administration of Gen. Victoriano Huerta, it is reported that a warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Eugenio Perrion, former general treasurer of the republic. Perrion is charged in the warrant with misappropriating more than 2,000,000 pesos of Government money. He is reported to be now at Puerto Mexico.

ULSTER'S TRADE IS SUFFERING

Fear of Civil War Causing Stagnation In Business.

BELFAST, July 25. — The leaders of the Buckingham Palace conference on Home Rule met separately in Belfast last night, through telegrams from the Ulster leaders, and the official announcement published this afternoon caused no excitement here.

The leading business men, clergymen, bankers and manufacturers who had declared for an anti-Home Rule agreement were unanimous in endorsing the uncompromising attitude of Sir Edward Carson and Captain James Craig in demanding the total and permanent exclusion of Ulster from the workings of the Home Rule bill. The business community is suffering severely through stagnation in trade and tight money. There is unwillingness to order new stocks of goods with the fear of civil war hanging overhead. A large proportion of the commercial world would endorse a settlement of the controversy on a compromise basis, but, realizing that popular sentiment is against it, they dare not insist on anything less than Sir Edward Carson's original demand.

The Ulster Provisional Government awaits orders from Sir Edward and Captain Craig, who are still in London. It is believed here the next step will be a general mobilization of the volunteer force as a kind of an "armed demonstration," which may impress the Government. If the Government is still unyielding, it appears certain, according to declarations by prominent Ulster men, that a Provisional Government will be set up before the Home Rule Bill is passed.

Warning to Volunteers.

ARMAGH, Ireland, July 25.—A warning was issued yesterday to the Ulster Volunteers to be ready for instant mobilization. It is stated that of the 9,000 volunteers in Armagh County very few are without equipment, which includes maxim guns.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Mrs. Alfred Baber, an aged woman residing in the Township of Farraday, North Hastings, took her life yesterday by drinking a quantity of Paris green.

President Carbajal has ordered an investigation of the financial methods of the Huerta Government in reply to public rumors of possible wrongdoing.

Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, has left Ottawa for Rochester, Minnesota, where he will enter the Mayo Sanitarium to undergo a slight operation.

Joseph Parrott had a close call from death at the Imperial Oil Co.'s refinery in Sarnia yesterday, when he was overcome by gas fumes. Only the prompt application of a pulmotor saved his life.

Two trust deeds have been deposited by the G. T. P. with the Secretary of State in connection with the guarantees by Alberta and Saskatchewan of the bonds of the G. T. P. branch lines company.

Boarding the rear platform of the last car as the train was leaving Chatsworth Park, Cal., two masked bandits, late Thursday night, robbed passengers of a southbound Southern Pacific train of more than $2,000.

Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, Mr. Aubrey White, stated yesterday that the forest fires throughout Northern Ontario have been entirely extinguished, and there is no danger of any immediate outbreaks.

MORE TROOPS NEEDED.

Russian Government Increases Forces to Suppress Strike.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—Stern measures were taken by the authorities yesterday to suppress the strike riots which have been in progress for several days in the streets of the capital, during which a large number of casualties have occurred in the conflicts between the police and Cossacks on one side and the striking workmen on the other.

Considerable leniency was shown here during the presence of Raymond Poincare, President of the French Republic, but immediately after his departure for Stockholm Thursday night, four regiments of cavalry of the guard and two regiments of Cuirassiers, under the command of Gen. Kannakoff, arrived from Krasnoye-Selo to assist in suppressing the disorder. They brought with them a number of quick-firing machine guns.

A squadron of the newly-arrived cavalry at once came into contact with the strikers, charging and dispersing a crowd of them.

DETERMINED TO FIGHT

Austria Has Already Given Servian Minister His Passports and Has Committed Act of Warfare

EUROPEAN CONFLICT

LONDON, July 27.— Sunday's developments appear to furnish new proofs that Austria is fully determined to make war on Servia, and the possibilities of a general European war seem greater than even confronted the present generation.

The Servian reply to the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum was an acceptance of almost all the imperious demands except that Austrian officials shall not participate in the investigation and fix the responsibility for the anti-Austrian propaganda. Servia proposed an appeal to the powers at The Hague for the settlement of that feature.

Notwithstanding this humiliating surrender, which was more than Europe expected of the proud little nation, the Austrian Government yesterday gave the Servian Minister his passports, which may be construed as a virtual declaration of war.

Austria committed an act of war by arresting the chief of the Servian general staff, Gen. Putnik, near Buda Pest, but he was soon released by the Emperor's direct command.

A formal declaration of war is not expected because Servia is not a party to The Hague convention which requires this. The suspension of all Parliamentary and judicial institutions has been decreed in Austria and an iron clad censorship has drawn a cordon of secrecy around the country, so that the outside world is in complete ignorance of everything happening there except what the Government wants the world to know.

Even now the Austrian armies may be closing in upon Servia and launching a sudden blow, as Japan did when she sent her fleet against the Russian ships without warning.

While Austria announces a "partial mobilization" the Austrian ambassador at London has issued a significant notice to all Austrians liable for military service to return home. The only possibility of averting a war at the eleventh hour which Austria recognizes is that Servia shall reconsider her reply to the Austrian note and bow to all her demands. Even then Austria proposes to exact payment for all her expenses in connection with her military measure.

The question as to whether Russia will take up arms to save her Slav protege from a crushing blow is the crucial feature of the situation on which the peace of all Europe hinges. The same degree of secrecy which Austria has imposed has been established in Russia also, and, therefore, it cannot be known what military preparations are in progress there. The Russian Government has permitted messages to go forth, quoting the St. Petersburg papers, as considering intervention inevitable, and demanded by the popular sentiment.

Germany has informed the other powers that she considers that the Austro-Servian quarrel concerns these two nations alone. If any other power takes it up, she declares, serious consequences must follow.

Servian partisans abroad advance the theory that Austria has made up her mind to dispose of her neighbor, which has long been a thorn in her side, and has chosen a moment when the nations of the Triple Entente are handicapped by home troubles—Great Britain with a threatened civil war in Ulster, Russia with a great strike, and France with a political upheaval—to strike a decisive blow.

Great Britain shows no enthusiasm over becoming embroiled in a war which might prove a great calamity to her interests. As far as opinion can be gathered amid the paralysis which overcomes all British political activities over Sunday, sentiment here tends toward Austria. This is based on the belief that Servian intrigues for undermining Austria by a Pan-Slav movement have been so open that no nation could tolerate them and in the present exuberant state of Servian national pride only the sharpest and most peremptory measures could have any effect.

BRITISH TROOPS FIRE UPON THE CROWD
NATIONALIST SYMPATHIZERS SHOT DOWN

Four People Killed and Sixty Wounded When King's Own Scottish Borderers Fire Fusilade

GUN RUNNERS' EXPLOIT

DUBLIN, July 27. — Three men and one woman are dead and more than sixty persons are in the hospital wounded as the result of a battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers firing into a mob in the streets of Dublin yesterday afternoon. Seven of the wounded are expected to succumb to their injuries.

The affray was the result of a gun-running exploit of the Nationalist Volunteers, who were being aided by a mob composed largely of women and youths.

The wounded in the hospital include three women and a boy of ten.

A consignment of rifles, said to number ten thousand, was landed at noon yesterday at Howth, nine miles from Dublin. The vessel on which the arms were brought was a private yacht. The Nationalist Volunteers cut the telegraph wires and stopped travel on the Dublin roads, and, according to reports, sent away most of the rifles, together with 70,000 rounds of ammunition in motor cars.

A battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers was ordered to capture the arms yesterday afternoon, when the authorities heard that the volunteers were bringing them into the city.

The soldiers encountered a detachment of volunteers at Clonmell bridge, and an outbreak resulted. There was no shooting then, however. A great crowd soon collected and followed the troops, jeering them and cheering for John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, and Home Rule. Finally the mob began throwing bottles and stones and several of the soldiers were injured.

The battalion then replied to the attack of the mob with a scattered fusilade. In an instant the street was covered with wounded, while terrified men, women and children ran in all directions.

Jervis Street Hospital is situated only 200 yards from the scene of the affray, and the wounded were quickly taken there. Four of them died within two hours.

The soldiers and police seized a hundred rifles from the volunteers.

An excited crowd filled the streets of Dublin last night, some of the men carrying rifles. The Borderers are confined to barracks to prevent the people from attacking them. A street car in which a soldier was riding was wrecked last night, but the soldier escaped the mob. Further rioting is feared.

Among those seriously wounded in the affray is M. J. Judge, a prominent officer of the Nationalist Volunteers.

The arms were landed at noon yesterday. The yacht from which they were taken was a sailing vessel, the name of which had been painted over.

A woman, or a man in woman's clothing, some persons say, commanded the yacht.

A thousand volunteers marched openly from Dublin to receive the arms. They said, however, that they were merely making a practice march. The local police and the coast guard tried to prevent the landing of the arms, but were driven off.

When the Dublin authorities learned of the landing they sent sixty police to seize the arms. These police later were reinforced by 200 others under an assistant commander.

The police were drawn up on both sides of the road along which the volunteers were returning, with the militia in the centre of the road.

When the volunteers saw the mobilization, most of them got away with their arms, scattering through the fields. The police and soldiers tried to disarm the remainder.

In the resulting affray, several revolver shots were fired by volunteers, and a corporal and a private were wounded. The volunteers also used their rifles as clubs.

The soldiers fired and used their bayonets freely, inflicting many cuts. Then they had a running fight with the volunteers and the rapidly growing mob through the streets to their barracks.

A number of policemen have been suspended for refusing to try to disarm the volunteers.

After the troops had fired into the crowd, the angry populace, in a spirit of revenge, attacked individual soldiers and beat them brutally. Members of the Scottish Borderers, who were riding bicycles along the quays, were pulled from their machines and beaten, and the bicycles were thrown into the river.

The Lord Mayor has issued a strong letter of protest, in which he declares that the troops were ordered out without permission having been asked of the Lord Mayor of the city, and he demands that the responsibility shall be fixed for the calling out of the soldiers and for supplying them with ball cartridges. He adds:

"Dublin and Ireland look with confidence to John Redmond and his colleagues to bring to justice those responsible for this shocking outrage. There will no longer be one law for a section of the Ulster people and another law for the remainder of the Irish people."

The Nationalists are indignant over the affair, because, they say, the troops are against the Nationalist Volunteers and never interfere with the Orangemen. Five thousand Ulster Volunteers, carrying arms, paraded the Belfast streets yesterday under the eyes of Gen. Macready and other officers of the regular army, and passed the Dorset Regiment, which was on parade.

May Raise Empress.

MONTREAL, July 27. — Marine men are discussing the possibility of raising the sunken Empress of Ireland from her bed off Father Point. Interest has been revived by the ship righting herself until her masts are pointing upward. All along it has been said the vessel could be raised if she stood on her keel, as that would permit divers to patch the holes in her hull and seal her up ready for raising and towing in shore. While on her side these operations were impossible.

BAD FIRE IN BANCROFT

Entire Business Section of Village Swept by Flames—Started in Bakery

NARROW ESCAPES

BANCROFT, Ont., July 27. — The whole business area of the town of Bancroft was practically wiped out by fire last night. The destructive blaze, fanned by a strong wind, played serious havoc. Nine buildings, including the hotel and postoffice, were totally destroyed, and a loss approximating $75,000 was entailed.

The buildings and stores affected by the fire are as follows: Bancroft Hotel, Benjamine's dry goods store, Reid & Thompson's general store, and the postoffice. All the structures, with the exception of the hotel, which was built of brick, consisted entirely of wood.

Shortly after six o'clock the village baker, Mr. Willing, was preparing his first batch of bread, when fire broke out somewhere near the oven and immediately began to spread. Before the volunteer fire brigade could be brought to the scene the bakery was demolished, and the flames were reaching down Bridge street. Soon the whole of the inhabitants of the district were fighting the flames, but with little success. Salvage operations were then commenced, and much property was saved.

As usual, there were a number of exciting experiences; guests at the hotel had narrow escapes, a number were at dinner when the fire occurred and are said to have taken many chances when endeavoring to wrest their belongings from the flames.

The fire was finally controlled by the fire-fighters some two hours after its commencement. No injuries were sustained. Insurance to the extent of $50,000 is said to be held by the owners of the properties destroyed.

NORFOLK, Va., July 27. — The last session of the biennial convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians was held here Saturday, with election of officers as the principal business. As a compliment the convention adopted an amendment to the constitution making the past president a member of the national board of directors. Instead of paying the president a salary of $3,500 a year and expenses, in future he will receive no salary and will be allowed $2,700 annually for expenses. The secretary will be paid a salary of $1,500 and is allowed $2,000 a year for expenses.

PEACE CELEBRATED

Anniversary of Lundy's Lane Is the Occasion for Festivities.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 27. —Picturesque, patriotic and with the note of pathos intruding itself at intervals, was the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the battle of Lundy's Lane.

The people of Niagara Falls, Ont., did full justice to the occasion, decorating their streets and festooning their tree-sprinkled lanes with bright bunting and pennants and flags. Emblematic of the love of peace which reigned supreme over the occasion were the Union Jack and Stars and Stripes, which streamed and floated side by side on every hand. A triumphal arch fronted the entrance to the old, historic lane.

The procession, which formed at the armory, was under the command of Lieut.-Col. W. Hill. It was a brilliant sight, military contingents representing all branches of the service taking part. The 19th Regiment Band and the veterans organization of Ontario, chiefs of Six Nations and other Indians, Ontario Historical Society, the U. E. Loyalists, and the mayor committee from both sides of the line were among those who took part. His Worship Mayor O. H. Deeres and board of aldermen of Niagara Falls, Ont.; His Honor Mayor William Laughlin and the common council of Niagara Falls, N.Y.; His Honor Sir John M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario; Col. Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, were present. Alexander Fraser, provincial archivist, Ontario; Hon. Peter A. "DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

"And the last thing I remember," whispered she, "was just— just after you'd finished dictating those Taunton Bridge specifications. I suddenly felt—oh, so sleepy! Only for a minute I thought I'd closed-by eyes and rest, and then—then—"

"This?"

She nodded.

"Same here," said he. "What the deuce can have struck us? Us and everybody— and everything? Talk about your problems! Lucky I'm sane and ... and—and—"

He did not finish, but fell once more to studying the [illegible] possible prospect.

Their view was towards the east, but over the river and the reaches of what had once upon a time been Long Island City and Brooklyn, as familiar scene in the other days as could be possibly imagined. But now how altered an aspect greeted them!

"It's surely all wiped out, all gone, gone into ruins," said Stern slowly and carefully, weighing each word. "No hallucination about that." He swept the sky-line with his eyes, that now peered keenly ought from beneath those bushy brows. Instinctively he brought his hand up to his breast. He started with surprise.

"What's this?" he cried. "What, I—I've got a full yard of whiskers. My good Lord! Whiskers on me? And I used to say—"

He burst out laughing. At his beard he plucked with merriment that jangled horribly on the girl's tense nerves. Suddenly he grew serious. For the first time he seemed to take clear notice of his companion's plight.

"Why, what a time it must have been!" cried he. "Here's some calculation all cut out for me, all right. But—you can't go that way. Miss Kendrick. It — it won't do, you know. Got to have something to put on. Great Heavens, what a situation!"

He tried to peel off his remnant of a coat, but at the merest touch it tore to shreds and fell away. The girl restrained him.

"Never mind," said she, with quiet, modest dignity. "My hair protects me very well for the present. If you and I are all that's left of the people in the world, this is no time for trifles."

A moment he studied her. Then he nodded, and grew very grave.

"Forgive me," he whispered, laying a hand on her shoulder. Once more he turned to the window and looked out.

"So then, it's all gone?" he queried, speaking as to himself. "Only a skyscraper standing here and there. And the bridges and the islands—all changed."

"Not a sign of life anywhere: not a sound: the forests growing thick among the ruins? A dead world if—if all the world is like this part of it! All dead, save you and me!"

In silence they stood there, striving to realize the full import of the catastrophe. And Stern, deep down in his heart, caught some glimmering insight of the future and was glad.

CHAPTER III.

On the Tower Platform.

Suddenly the girl started, rebelling against the evidence of her own senses, striving again to force upon herself the belief that, after all, it could not be so.

"No, no, no!" she cried. "This can't be true. It mustn't be. There's a mistake somewhere. This simply must be all an illusion, a dream!

"If the whole world's dead, how does it happen we're alive? How do we know it's dead? Can we see it all from here? Why, all we see is just a little segment of things. Perhaps if we could know the truth, look farther, and know—"

He shook his head.

"I guess you'll find it's real enough," he answered, "no matter how far you look. But, just the same, it won't do any harm to extend our radius of observation.

"Come, let's go on up to the top of the tower, up to the observation-platform. The quicker we know all the available facts the better. Now, if I only had a telescope—!"

He thought hard a moment, then turned and strode over to a heap of friable disintegration that lay where once his instrument case had stood, containing his surveying tools.

Down on his ragged knees he fell; his rotten streds of clothing tore and ripped at every moment, like so much water-soaked paper.

A strange, hairy, dust-covered figure, he knelt there. Quickly he plunged his hands into the rubbish and began pawing it over and over with eager haste.

"Ah!" he cried with triumph. "Thank Heaven, brass and lenses haven't crumbled yet!"

Up he stood again. In his hand the girl saw a peculiar telescope.

"My 'level,' see?" he exclaimed, holding it up to view. "The wooden tripod's long since gone. The fixtures that held it on won't bother me much.

"Neither will the 'spirit-glass' on top. The main thing is that the telescope itself seems to be still intact. Now we'll see."

Speaking, he dusted off the eyepiece and the objective with a bit of rag from his coat-sleeve.

Beatrice noted that the brass tubes were all eaten and pitted with verdigris, but they still held firmly. And the lenses, when Stern had finished cleaning them, showed as bright and clear as ever.

"Come, now; come with me," he bade.

Out through the doorway into the hall he made his way while he girl followed. As she went she gathered her wondrous veil of hair more closely about her.

In this universal disorganization, this wreck of all the world, how little the conventions counted!

Together, picking their way up the broken stairs, where now the rust-bitten steel showed through the corroded stone and cement in a thousand places, they cautiously climbed.

Here, spider-webs thickly shrouded the way, and had to be brushed down. There, still more bats hung and chippered in protest as the intruders passed.

A fluffy little white owl blinked at them from a dark niche; and, well toward the top of the climb, they flushed up a score of mud-swallows which had ensconced themselves comfortably along a broken balustrade.

At last, however, despite all unforeseen incidents of this sort, they reached the upper platform, nearly a thousand feet above the earth.

Aut through the relics of the revolving door they crept, he leading, testing each foot of the way before the girl. They reached the narrow platform of red tiling that surrounded the tower.

Even here they saw with growing amazement that the hand of time and of this maddening mystery had laid its heavy imprint.

"Look!" he exclaimed, pointing. "What this all means we don't know yet. How long it's been we can't tell. But to judge by the appearance up here, it's even longer than I thought. See, the very tiles are cracked and crumbling.

"Tilework is usually considered highly recalcitrant—but this is gone. There's grass growing in the dust that's settled between the tiles. And—why, here's a young oak that's taken root and forced a dozen slabs out of place."

"The winds and birds have carried seeds up here, and acorns," she answered in an awed voice. "Think of the time that must have passed. Years and years.

"But tell me," and her brow wrinkled with a sudden wonder, "tell me how we've ever lived so long? I can't understand it.

"Not only have we escaped starvation, but we haven't frozen to death in all these bitter winters. How can that have happened?"

"Let it all go as suspended animation till we learn the facts, if we ever do," he replied, glancing about with wonder.

"You know, of course, how toads have been known to live embedded in rock for centuries? How fish, hard-frozen, have been brought to life again? Well—"

"But we are human beings."

"I know. Certain unknown natural forces, however, might have made no more of us than the non-mammalian and less highly organized creatures.

"Don't bother your head about these problems yet a while. On my word, we've got enough to do for the present without much careing about how or why.

"All we definitely know is that some very long, undermined period of time has passed, leaving us still alive. The rest can wait."

"How long a time do you judge it?" she anxiously inquired.

"Impossible to say at once. But it must have been something extraordinary—probably far longer than either of us suspect.

"See, for example, the attrition of everything up here exposed to the weather." He pointed at the heavy stone railing. "See how that is wrecked, for instance."

A whole segment, indeed, had fallen inward. Its debris lay in confusion, blocking all he southern side of the platform.

The bronze bars, which Stern well remembered—two at each corner, slanting downward and bracing a rail—had now wasted to mere pockmarked shells of metal.

Three had broken entirely and sagged wantonly awry with the displacement of the stone blocks, between which the vines and grasses had long been carrying on their destructive work.

"Look out!" Stern cautioned. "Don't lean against any of those stones." Firmly he held her back as she, eagerly inquisitive, started to advance toward the railing.

"Don't go anywhere near the edge. It may all be rotten and undermined, for anything we know. Keep back here, close to the wall."

Sharply he inspected it a moment.

"Facing stones are pretty well gone," said he, "but, so far so I can see, the steel frame isn't too bad. Putting everything together, I'll probably be able before long to make some sort of calculation of the date. But for now we'll have to call it 'X,' and let it go at that."

"The year X!" she whispered under her breath. "Good Heavens, am I as old as that?"

He made no answer, but only drew her to him protectingly, while all about all about them the warm summer wind swept onward to the sea, out over the sparkling expanses of the bay—alone unchanged in all that universal wreckage.

In the breeze her heavy masses of hair stirred luringly. He felt its silken caress on his half-naked shoulder, and in his ears the blood began to pound with strange insistence.

Quite gone now the daze and drowsiness of the first wakening. Stern did not even feel weak or shaken. On the contrary, never had life bounded more warmly, more fully, in his veins.

The presence of the girl set his heart throbbing heavily, but he bit his lip and restrained every untoward thought.

Only his arm tightened a little about that warmly clinging body. Beatrice did not shrink from him. She needed his protection as never since the world began had woman needed man.

To her it seemed that come what might, his strength and comfort could not fail. And, despite everything, she could not—for the moment—find unhappiness within her heart.

Quite vanished now, even in those brief minutes since their awakening, was all consciousness of their former relationship—employer and employed.

The self-contained, courteous, yet unapproachable engineer had disappeared.

Now, through all the extraneous disguise of his outer self, there lived and breathed just a man, a young man, thewed with the vigour of his plentitude. All else had been swept clean away by this great change.

The girl was different, too. Was this strong woman, eager-eyed and brave, the quiet, low-voiced stenographer he remembered, busy only with her machine, her file-boxes, and her carbon-copies? Stern dared not realize the transmutation. He ventured hardly to fringe it in his thoughts.

To divert his wonderings and to ease a situation which oppressed him, he began adjusting the "level" telescope to his eye.

With his back planted firmly against the tower, he studied a wide section of the dead and buried world so very far below them. With astonishment he cried:

"It is true, Beatrice! Everything's swept clean away. Nothing left, nothing at all—no signs of life!

"As far as I can reach with these lenses, universal ruin. We're all alone in this whole world, just you and I—and everything belongs to us!"

"Everything—all ours?"

"Everything! Even the future—the future of the human race!"

Suddenly he felt her tremble at his side. Down at her he looked, a great new tenderness possessing him. He saw that tears were forming in her eyes.

Beatrice pressed both hands to her face and bowed her head. Filled with strange emotions the man watched her for a moment.

Then in silence realizing the uselessness of any words, knowing that in this monstrous Ragarok of all humanity no ordinary relations of life could bear either cogency or meaning, he took her in his arms.

And there alone with her, far above the ruined world, high in the pure air of mid-heaven, he comported the girl with words till then unthought of and unknown to him.

That Weak Back

accompanied by pain here or there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells—or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—passing from womanhood to motherhood—or later suffering from that change into middle life which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nervine prescribed for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases of women.
DR. PIERCE'S
has successfully treated more cases in past forty years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated, tablet form as well as in the liquid. Sold by medicine dealers or trial box by mail on receipt of 50 cents in stamps.
Miss Elizabeth Lovdahl of Harlesby, Cal., in a recent letter to Dr. Pierce said: "I was completely broken down in health. I was nervous and had pains all over my body and was so nervous that I could scream if anyone talked to me, but I had the good fortune to meet a nurse who had been cured by Dr. Pierce's Prescription. I have never had an occasion to consult a physician since—am in excellent health."
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate stomach, liver and bowels—sugar-coated, tiny granules.

Dr. Chase Is No Stranger

In This Home — Receipts Book and Medicines Kept at Hand All the Time.

There is no better safeguard against disease and suffering than a good cathartic medicine. In the great majority of homes Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are constantly kept at hand, because they quickly awaken the action of liver, kidneys and bowels, and cure the most common ills of life.

Mrs. Thos. Smith, Jamestown, Ont., writes:—"Dr. Chase is no stranger in our home, for we have two of his Receipt Books in the house. My father and my husband's father each had one, and I have been familiar with it ever since I can remember. It was only natural that we should use the Kidney-Liver Pills, and we found them so satisfactory in regulating the digestive system and curing the common ills of life that we always keep them on hand. Many a time these pills have saved me much suffering and prevented serious disease. We also keep the Ointment in the house all the time."

GOD'S BLESSINGS IMPARTIAL

Ours the Wealthiest Period of History—But Faith and Godliness Are on the Decline—Great Increase of Selfishness—An Integral Part of Sin—Lesson to the Church of Christ—A Good Foundation Against the Time to Come—Changed Conditions Under the Messianic Kingdom—Removal of the Stony Heart—Substitution of a Heart of Flesh—Rich In Character-Likeness to Our Heavenly Father.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

July 26. — Reports from more than one hundred cities indicate great public appreciation of the Photo-Drama of Creation. This noble effort to turn attention back to the Word of God is having the desired effect wherever it is exhibited. No one can see it without having his heart irresistibly drawn toward the Giver of every good and perfect gift, who so loved the world as to give "His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him might not perish, but have everlasting life."

To-day Pastor Russell preached from the text, "So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."—Luke 12:21.

The Pastor began his discourse with the declaration that ours is the day of Wealth. Nothing to compare with it has ever been known in the world's history. Not merely have we discovered rich deposits of gold, silver and precious stones; not merely are these being mined in a provident and successful manner, with which nothing in the past could compare; but additionally the world is growing richer in every conceivable way.

This statement was illustrated by reference to the growth of our cities in size and beauty, in sanitary conveniences, in spacious parks, in good, paved streets and boulevards; and to our industries, which are multiplying machinery perfected within the last fifty years and turning out products of convenience and value. These add greatly to the world's comfort and material wealth, and are not merely perishable articles such as clothing and bric-a-brac, but substantial edifices, etc. Vast libraries, both public and private, are being acquired. Many former luxuries are becoming almost necessities, because of the facility with which they are produced. All these things, and many others, constitute riches, one glance at which would amaze our ancestors.

The speaker then asked a series of questions such as appeal to all thoughtful persons. Are we as a race, he inquired, growing rich toward God? Is not the very reverse true? Are not faith and godliness on the decline? Is it not true that within the last fifty years the love of money, which the Apostle declares is "a root of all evil," has intensified? Is it not true that greed has become so strong as to make necessary Pure-food Laws for the protection of the lives of the people—because life and health were in jeopardy?

Attention was then called to the fact that, although we are better housed, better fed and better clothed than were our forefathers, yet there is a general condition of unrest, due to trust in riches. Despite all our modern safeguards of police and detective systems, despite our telegraphs, telephones, etc., human lives and property are still in peril because of the hunger for wealth everywhere prevalent.

The Pastor next discussed the parable from which his text is taken. In it our Lord pictures a man whose lines were fallen in pleasant places. The smiling sun and the genial showers prospered his undertakings, and his wealth grew apace. To him came opportunities for helping friends, neighbors and relatives less favored—opportunities for turning his material wealth to good account in the cultivation of the generous traits of his nature and thus for developing more and more the Divine character; for God scatters His blessings of sunshine and shower upon both the evil and the good.

But instead of growing richer in character through the cultivation of noble qualities, this rich man permitted selfishness to dominate him. He pulled down his barns in order to build greater ones. Instead of dispensing the wealth which Divine providence permitted to flow into his lap, he accumulated more. Many, alas! to-day are following his example. These say to themselves, "I will accumulate wealth, and then will say to my soul, You have plenty; 'eat, drink and be merry.' Think not particularly of your less favored brethren and neighbors, nor of the hopelessly poor; live for yourself." Thus in the parable the Master has drawn a picture of practically every man in the world, some of whom are really doing these things, and others of whom are longing for the opportunity to do so.

Commenting upon the Master's estimation of the foolish rich man, the Pastor asked, If the Lord declared that the rich man of the parable was a fool what may we suppose is His estimate of the masses of humanity to-day—blessed as men never before were blessed, privileged as men never before were privileged, and therefore responsible as men never before were responsible for the use of money? Alas! he declared; we fear that the Lord is not well pleased with the world in its scramble for wealth, witnessed to-day on every hand. In our text the people of God of to-day have a reminder that all have the opportunity to cultivate the Christ-like spirit of generosity, helpfulness and brotherly-kindness.

The speaker then demonstrated that the Lord does not address His reproof and admonition to the world, but merely to His Church—the consecrated few. The world, he declared, is about to learn a great lesson along this very line of selfishness. Having sown to the wind the seed of selfishness, it is about to reap a whirlwind of trouble, the fruitage of selfishness, in which the interests of rich and poor will clash in the conflict between Capital and Labor, between those who have secured wealth and those who will strive to take the wealth from them—"a Time of Trouble such as was not since there was a nation."

Are any so blinded as not to see the awful growth of anarchy, he asked, which is gradually settling down upon the highest type of civilization to which the world has ever attained? Are there any so blinded as to be unable to perceive that the conflict will be along the lines of selfishness—desire to hold on the one part, and desire to acquire on the other?

The Pastor explained that according to the Scriptures God is not now appealing to the world; for well He knows that so intense is the spirit of avarice that such an appeal would be useless. God is therefore permitting the world as a whole to learn its great lesson, that selfishness is an integral part of sin, even as love and benevolence are integral parts of righteousness. There is no doubt, he declared, that by the time the poor world shall have fully learned its lesson of the terrible results of selfishness it will be ready to cry out for Divine assistance.

When that time comes, the speaker claimed, God's means of assistance will also be ready. The Messianic Kingdom will be inaugurated, and a Reign of Love will be established which will contrast sharply with present conditions, and which will bring blessed results of peace, love and good will amongst men. Since God is both loving and wise, we may reasonably assume, he believes, that there is no better way than this whirlwind of trouble for teaching the world its needed lesson on this subject.

It was then shown that God's lessons are now for the Church—not the church nominal, which is merely a more civilized section of the world, but the Church real, the saintly people of God in and out of the various sects and parties, and of every nation, kindred and tongue. Anxious to know and to do the will of God, these receive special instruction such as the world is not prepared to receive. To these saintly footstep followers of Jesus the Lord says, Let not your treasures be of an earthly kind. Rather, go to the opposite extreme, and spend and be spent in the interest of others, in the service of God, in the service of His Message of Love; and thus, along the lines of the Divine promises, seek for a share with the Great Redeemer, not only in the sufferings and self-denials of the present life, but also in the glory, honor and immortality of the life to come.

In support of his argument, the Pastor quoted many familiar passages of Scripture, such as "Therefore take no thought for your life, what ye shall, eat; neither for your body, what ye shall put on. The life is more than meat, and the body than raiment." "Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of." Therefore, "Seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom. Sell that ye have, and give alms; provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the Heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also."

A new light was thrown upon a familiar Scripture commonly applied to the worldly rich, but mistakenly so, if the Pastor, who is a most able Bible scholar, is correct in his explanation." He declared that when St. Paul wrote to Timothy "Charge them that are rich in this world that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God who giveth us richly all things to enjoy," the Apostle very evidently referred to some of the consecrated people of God who had wealth. This wealth these were to consider merely as a stewardship, not to be disposed of according to their own worldly caprices, and surely not according to the dictum of friends, neighbors and relatives. Whoever has given himself to the Lord must have consecrated all he has; else he is not accepted as Christ's disciple.

The Pastor showed that the Apostle's charged to the brethren who possessed wealth is stated in the verses following the one under discussion—"that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." This he interprets to mean that those possessing wealth should be willing to share with others of the brethren as members of a community, somewhat along the lines of Christian communism. The word foundation, he declared, is here used in the same sense as when we say that a wealthy man gave a foundation of a million dollars for a college. His gift constitutes the basis for the carrying out of the college plans.

Thus, the speaker explained, a Christian who generously uses in the Lord's service his financial stewardship is laying a foundation for the future—a foundation for spiritual wealth; and the more of time, influence and wealth any one can lay up thus in doing good, in forwarding the interests of the brethren and of the Lord's work, the more is that one piling up treasure in Heaven. The advantage of this procedure, he asserted, is that it helps to centre the heart's affections on the things above, and to wean them from the things of earth; for where our treasure is, there will our hearts be also. And thus, says the Apostle, we shall be able to "lay hold on eternal life," now proffered to us.

At first many are inclined to say, What difference does it make to the Lord what I do with my time, money, influence, talents? He is able to supply the needy without in the least impoverishing Himself. Why, then, should He desire His children, who are far from rich in the world's estimation, to sacrifice their little all of talent, money, time, influence? And why should He make this a test to determine whether or not they shall attain the Kingdom? What is the philosophy of it?

The philosophy was declared to be this: As originally created in the Divine likeness man was tender-hearted, sympathetic. But after sin had entered the world and the strife for a living began, selfishness gradually became the predominant influence, producing hard-heartedness—carelessness of the interests of others—self-love.

The speaker pointed out that during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign Satan will be bound, his allurements ended and the curse lifted. Then the earth will yield its increase. The stress being removed, it will be easier for mankind to learn the lessons of love and brotherly-kindness, and to rise out of their present condition of meanness, hard-heartedness and selfishness—back to the glorious image of God.

This will mean the dissolving of the stony-heartedness of the human race; or, as the Scriptures put it, the Lord "will take away the stony heart out of their flesh, and give them a heart of flesh"—a heart of sympathy. All who then refuse to return to harmony with God will be destroyed in the Second Death, as set forth in Acts 3:19-23.

It was pointed out, however, that while such a restitution under the favorable conditions of the Messianic Kingdom is God's provision for the world, He has a different provision for the Church, now being called and proven. By nature their hearts were hard and selfish, and, as the Apostle says, they "were children of wrath, even as others." But the fact that God has called these to joint-heirship with His Son in the glorious Kingdom that is shortly to bless the world does not signify that He will accept them in their natural condition of hard-heartedness and selfishness.

On the contrary, if the Church are to be the kings, priests and judges of the world, in association with their Lord and Head, the great King, it is readily seen that they must be rid of this condition themselves before they can properly be capable of helping the world up out of its hard-heartedness.

Several differences were pointed out between the Lord's dealings with the Church at the present time and His dealings with the world by and by. These differences are due to the fact that the Church are called to so high an honor; and correspondingly it is appropriate that they should manifest more love and zeal than will be expected of the world.

To illustrate: The Church must walk by faith and not by sight; they must voluntarily accept the Lord's providences, and voluntarily cooperate with Him in putting away the stony heart, accepting instead the Spirit of the Lord—a spirit of love, kindness, gentleness, meekness, patience and long-suffering toward all. Moreover, during the thousand years of the world's recovery from sin, selfishness and hard-heartedness, doubtless each individual will have several centuries for his gradual development. But the Father seeks in the Church class those who will give such heed to His instructions, and show such earnestness in copying His character, that they will succeed in attaining a heart condition of tenderness, sympathy and love like unto that of the Heavenly Father, in the present years of their Christian experience.

The discourse closed with an earnest exhortation that all who are the Lord's gird up the loins of their minds, determining that with His help they will be rich toward God; that each think less and less of earthly riches, and more and more prize the Kingdom which the Lord has promised to His faithful ones. All who attain this Kingdom will be rich toward God in the highest sense. Not only will they be rich in the possession of the highest prize that God has to give—His very best—but rich in His character-likeness, rich in experience, rich in faith, rich in benevolence, rich in all that is good and great, however poor they may have been in earthly goods at the end of their course.

THE CAPTAIN'S WIFE

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

"I ain't mindin' other folks' business nor never was," said the third sergeant as he placed a skillet of bacon on the winter hut fireplace, "but I'll go as far as to say that it don't look right."

"Of course it don't," said the second sergeant.

"What you fellows blowin' about?" asked the orderly sergeant as he came in for fire to light his pipe.

"You wouldn't guess in four years' time, and I won't keep you shiverin' and tremblin'. The captain's wife has come!"

"And we was sayin'," said the second sergeant as he lifted his eyes from the coffee cup—"we was sayin' that it wasn't discipline and didn't look right. Just think of a woman down here."

"By gosh!" whispered the orderly as he sat down to his smoke.

"Waal, what you goin' to do 'bout it?" asked the third sergeant after a pause.

"Dunno."

A month had passed, and no calamities had occurred. Some of the men began to breathe easier and to wonder if they hadn't misjudged the kind faced and smiling little woman who was sacrificing a good deal to be with her husband for a few weeks.

It was a cavalry command, and every pleasant winter's day the captain and his wife had a gallop over the highways. One day an engineer was dispatched to see about repairs to a bridge spanning a creek flowing through the neutral ground between the armies, and the orderly sergeant of Company D was detailed with ten men as an escort. The bridge was reached and inspected, and the engineer and his escort were ready for their ride back when there came a sudden alarm. Half a mile down the road, where Captain Shattuck and his wife had debouched from a crossroad while taking an afternoon gallop, they had run full tilt against a Confederate cavalry scout. The enemy had shouted to the captain to surrender, and as he wheeled his horse to get away a bullet brought him out of the saddle. His wife would have pulled up her steed, but he took the bit in his mouth and was beyond control. As she went flying up the road the scouting party followed. They knew of the small detachment of Federals at the bridge and were hoping to make a surprise.

"It's the captain's wife, and the Johnnies are close behind her!" shouted the sergeant as the woman came into view with a great clatter. "Open ranks and let her through and then close up and give 'em hail Columbia!"

With a rush and a clatter the horse of the fugitive passed the blue clad troopers, but came to a dead halt a few rods beyond and turned about. A volley from the carbines checked the pursuers for the moment, but it was seen that they were strong enough to break through, and the sergeant gave the order to fall back to an abandoned log house a quarter of a mile in the rear.

"Men," exclaimed the woman as she looked from man to man, "do you know that your captain is back there, wounded and a prisoner? Are you going to leave him there?"

"It's too bad, ma'am, but they are three to one," replied the sergeant. "We'll be lucky if we ain't killed or gobbled up before help comes."

"But I'm going to ride back!" she cried as her pale face flushed and her voice had a thrill to it. "If you won't go with me to rescue your captain I'll let them take me prisoner and go to Richmond with him."

"Heavens, ma'am!" hoarsely whispered the sergeant, with admiration in his eyes. "But we'll have the captain or die! How far down the road was it?"

"Not over half a mile."

"And how many rebs in the party?"

"Not over fifty."

"Fifty rebs and ten of us! We'll never do it, but we'll die for the captain! Into your saddles, boys! You ride on toward camp with the engineer, ma'am!"

"Not a foot. I'm going with you. Some one give me a revolver."

"By twos—right wheel!" shouted the sergeant as he handed her his navy and drew his saber. "Now, then, ride through or over them and don't stop this side of the captain or the devil!"

It was a curious spectacle the gray clad soldiers witnessed—a woman riding at the head of that charging squadron, a woman with white face and glittering eyes, who held her reins in one hand and used the pistol with deadly effect with the other. Through the thick of them fought the ten, and, fearing that the alarm might have already reached the Federal camps, the Confederates disappeared into the woods instead of pursuing. Down there beyond the bridge the captain was lying on the ground with a bullet in his shoulder and three men guarding him. The cavalcade swept up to them and surrounded them, and there were three prisoners instead of three guards.

"Lord, sir, excuse me, sir, but it was the captain's wife who did it all," said the sergeant as he returned to the colonel. "She not only saved her husband from Libby prison, but we might all have been wiped out if we'd made a fight for it at the old house."

That evening the orderly said to the second and third sergeants, "When you finish your grub rout out the boys, for we're goin' to swing our hats and give three cheers and a tiger for the captain's wife."

Brightening Summer Business

LAWNS and gardens can be kept green and vigorous in the hottest weather by watering them faithfully. By the exercise of intelligence and utilities at hand, man can offset natural tendencies.

So in the matter of business: When there arises a condition which is a menace to the health and vigor of a business—the corrective is intelligent energy and the use of agencies which are known refreshers.

Every merchant in this community may keep his business vigorous this summer by making preparations in advance, and by employing the advertising columns of this newspaper. Africans Not To Come Here.

The congested conditions in the Canadian labor market, and the fact that in some parts of the country there are large numbers out of work has caused the Government, through the Immigration Department, to begin advertising in British papers advising mechanics and laborers not to come to Canada. Only agriculturists are for the present encouraged to emigrate.

It is the first time in history that such steps have been taken, and a decrease of fifty per cent. in immigration this year is estimated by Supt. Scott.

THE FALL OF THE HOUSE OF USHER

By Edgar Allan Poe

EDGAR ALLAN

GOUVERNEUR

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Gouverneur Morris was "The Fall of the House of Usher," by Edgar Allan Poe, who won world renown as a short story writer.

PART II.

ONE evening, having informed me abruptly that the Lady Madeline was no more, he stated his intention of preserving her corpse for a fortnight, previously to its final interment, in one of the numerous vaults within the main walls of the building. The brother had been led to his resolution (so he told me) by consideration of the unusual character of the malady of the deceased, of certain obtrusive and eager inquiries on the part of her medical man and of the remote and exposed situation of the burial ground of the family. I will not deny that when I called to mind the sinister countenance of the person whom I met upon the staircase on the day of my arrival at the house I had no desire to oppose what I regarded as, at best, but a harmless and by no means an unnatural precaution.

At the request of Usher, I personally aided him in the arrangements for the temporary entombment. The body having been encoffined, we two alone bore it to its rest. The vault in which we placed it was small, damp and entirely without means of admission for light, lying at great depth immediately beneath that portion of the building in which was my own sleeping apartment. It had been used apparently in remote feudal times for the worst purposes of a donjon keep and in later days as a place of deposit for powder or some other highly combustible substance, as a portion of its floor and the whole interior of a long archway through which we reached it were carefully sheated with copper. The door, of massive iron, had been also similarly protected. Its immense weight caused an unusually sharp grating sound as it moved upon its hinges.

Having deposited our mournful burden upon trestles within this region of horror, we partially turned aside the yet unscrewed lid of the coffin and looked upon the face of the tenant. A striking similitude between the brother and sister now first arrested my attention, and Usher, divining perhaps my thoughts, murmured out some few words, from which I learned that the deceased and himself had been twins and that sympathies of a scarcely intelligible nature had always existed between them. Our glances rested not long upon the dead, for we could not regard her unawed. There was a faint blush upon the bosom and the face, with that suspiciously lingering smile upon the lip which is so terrible in death. We replaced and screwed down the lid and secured the door of iron.

And now, some days of bitter grief having elapsed, an observable change came over the features of the mental disorder of my friend. His ordinary manner had vanished. His ordinary occupations were neglected or forgotten. He roamed from chamber to chamber with hurried, unequal and objectless step. The pallor of his countenance had assumed if possible a more ghastly hue, but the luminousness of his eye had utterly gone out. The once occasional huskiness of his tone was heard no more, and a tremulous quaver, as if of extreme terror, habitually characterised his utterance. I felt creeping upon me by slow yet certain degrees the wild influences of his own fantastic yet impressive superstitions.

It was especially upon retiring to bed late in the night of the seventh or eighth day after the placing of the Lady Madeline within the donjon that I experienced the full power of such feelings. Sleep came not near my couch, while the hours waned and waned away. I struggled to reason off the nervousness which had dominion over me. I endeavored to believe that much, if not all of what I felt, was due to the bewildering influence of the gloomy furniture of the room—of the dark and tattered draperies which, tortured into motion by the breath of a rising tempest, swayed fitfully to and fro upon the walls and rustled uneasily about the decorations of the bed. But my efforts were fruitless. An irrepressible tremor gradually pervaded my frame, and at length there sat upon my very heart an incubus of utterly unaccountable alarm. Shaking this off with a gasp and a struggle I uplifted myself upon the pillows, and, peering earnestly within the intense darkness of the chamber, hearkened—I know not why, except that an instinctive spirit prompted me—to certain low and indefinite sounds which came through the pauses of the storm at long intervals. I knew not whence. Overpowered by an intense sentiment of horror, unaccountable yet unendurable, I threw on my clothes with haste, for I felt that I should sleep no more during the night, and endeavored to arouse myself from the pitiable condition into which I had fallen by pacing rapidly to and fro through the apartment.

I had taken but few turns in this manner when a light step on an adjoining staircase arrested my attention. I presently recognized it as that of Usher. In an instant afterward he rapped with a gentle touch at my door and entered, bearing a lamp. His countenance was, as usual, cadaverously wan: but, moreover, there was a species of mad hilarity in his eyes, an evidently restrained hysteria in his whole demeanor. His air appalled me, but anything was preferable to the solitude which I had so long endured.

"And you have not seen it?" he said abruptly after having stared about him for some moments in silence—"you have not then seen it? But stay! You shall." Thus speaking and having carefully shaded his lamp, he hurried to one of the casements and threw it freely open to the storm.

The impetuous fury of the entering gust nearly lifted us from our feet. It was, indeed, a tempestuous yet sternly beautiful night, and one wildly singular in its terror and its beauty. A whirlwind had apparently collected its force in our vicinity, for there were frequent and violent alterations in the direction of the wind, and the exceeding density of the clouds (which hung so low as to press upon the turrets of the house) did not prevent our perceiving the lifelike velocity with which they flew careering from all points against each other, without passing away into the distance. I say that even their exceeding density did not prevent our perceiving this. Yet we had no glimpse of the moon or stars nor was there any flashing forth of the lightning. But the under surfaces of the huge masses of agitated vapor, as well as all terrestrial objects immediately around us, were glowing in the unnatural light of a faintly luminous and distinctly visible gaseous exhalation which enshrouded the mansion.

"You must not—you shall not behold this!" said I shudderingly to Usher as I led him, with a gentle violence, from the window to a seat. "These appearances which bewilder you are merely electrical phenomena not uncommon, or it may be that they have their ghastly origin in the rank miasma of the tarn. Let us close this casement. The air is chilling and dangerous to your frame. Here is one of your favorite romances. I will read, and you shall listen, and so we will pass away this terrible night together."

The antique volume which I had taken up was the "Mad Trist" of Sir Launcelot Canning, but I had called it a favorite of Usher's more in sad jest than in earnest, for, in truth, there is little in its uncouth and unimaginative prolixity which could have had interest for the lofty and spiritual ideality of my friend. It was, however, the only book immediately at hand.

I had arrived at that well known portion of the story where Ethelred, the hero of the trist, having sought in vain for peaceable admission into the dwelling of the hermit, proceeds to make good an entrance by force. Here, it will be remembered, the words of the narrative run thus:

"And Ethelred, who was by nature of a doughty heart and who was now mighty withal on account of the powerfulness of the wine which he had drunken, waited no longer to parley with the hermit, who, in sooth, was of an obstinate and malicious turn, but, feeling the rain upon his shoulders and fearing the rising of the tempest, uplifted his mace outright and with blows made quickly room in the plankings of the door for his gauntleted hand, and now, pulling therewith sturdily, he so cracked and ripped and tore all asunder that the noise of the dry and hollow sounding wood alarummed and reverberated throughout the forest."

At the termination of this sentence I started, and for a moment paused, for it appeared to me (although I at once concluded that my excited fancy had deceived me) that from some very remote portion of the mansion there came indistinctly to my ears what might have been in its exact similarity of character, the echo (but a stifled and dull one certainly) of the very cracking and ripping sound which Sir Launcelot had so particularly described. I continued the story:

"But the good champion Ethelred, now entering within the door, was sore enraged and amazed to perceive no signal of the malicious hermit; but, in the stead thereof, a dragon of a scaly and prodigious demeanor, and of a fiery tongue, which sate in guard before a palace of gold, with a floor of silver, and upon the wall there hung a shield of shining brass with this legend enwritten:

Who entereth herein a conqueror hath him;
Who slayeth the dragon, the shield he shall win.

And Ethelred uplifted his mace and struck upon the head of the dragon which fell before him and gave up his vile breath, with a shriek so horrid and harsh and withal so piercing that Ethelred had fain to close his ears with his hands against the dreadful voice of it, the like whereof was never before heard."

Here again I paused abruptly, and now with a feeling of wild amazement, for there could be no doubt whatever that in this instance I did actually hear, although from what direction it proceeded I found it impossible to say, a low and apparently distant, but harsh, protracted and most unusual screaming or grating sound—the exact counterpart of what my fancy had already conjured up for the dragon's unnatural shriek.

Oppressed, as I certainly was, upon the occurrence of this second and most extraordinary coincidence by a thousand conflicting sensations, in which wonder and extreme terror were predominant, I still retained sufficient presence of mind to avoid exciting by any observation the sensitive nervousness of my companion. I was by no means certain that he had noticed the sounds in question, although assuredly a strange alteration had during the last few minutes taken place in his demeanor. From a position fronting my own he had gradually brought round his chair so as to sit with his face to the door of the chamber, and thus I could but partially perceive his features, although I saw that his lips trembled, as if he were muttering inaudibly. His head had dropped upon his breast, yet I knew that he was not asleep from the wide and rigid opening of the eye as I caught a glance of it in profile. The motion of his body, too, was at variance with this idea, for he rocked from side to side with a gentle yet constant and uniform sway. I resumed the narrative:

"And now the champion, having escaped from the terrible fury of the dragon, bethinking himself of the brazen shield and of the breaking up of the enchantment which was upon it, removed the carcass from out of the way before him and approached valorously over the silver pavement of the castle to where the shield was upon the wall, which in sooth tarried not for his full coming, but fell down at his feet upon the silver floor with a mighty great and terrible ringing sound."

No sooner had these syllables passed my lips than, as if a shield of brass had indeed at the moment fallen heavily upon a floor of silver, I became aware of a distinct, hollow, metallic and clangorous, yet apparently muffled reverberation. Completely unnerved, I leaped to my feet, but the measured rocking movement of Usher was undisturbed. I rushed to the chair in which he sat. His eyes were bent fixedly before him and throughout his whole countenance there reigned a stony rigidity. But as I placed my hand upon his shoulder, there came a strong shudder over his whole person, a sickly smile quivered about his lips, and I saw that he spoke as in a low, hurried and gibbering murmur, as if unconscious of my presence. Bending closely over him, I at length drank in the hideous import of his words.

"Not hear it? Yes, I hear it and have heard it. Long, long, long, many minutes, many hours, many days have I heard it, yet I dared not—oh, pity me, miserable wretch that I am—I dared not—dared not speak. We have put her living in the tomb! Said I not that my senses were acute? I now tell you that I heard her first feeble movement in the hollow coffin. I heard them—many, many days ago—yet I dared not—I dared not speak! And now, tonight, Ethelred—ha, ha!—the breaking of the hermit's door and the death cry of the dragon and the clangor of the shield—say, rather, the rending of her coffin—and the grating of the iron hinges of her prison and her struggles within the copper archway of the vault! Oh, whither shall I fly? Will she not be here anon? Is she not hurrying to upbraid me for my haste? Have I not heard her footstep on the stair? Do I not distinguish that heavy and horrible beating of her heart? Madman!"—here he sprang furiously to his feet and shrieked out his syllables as if in the effort he were giving up his soul—"Madman! I tell you that she now stands without the door!"

As if in the superhuman energy of his utterance there had been found the potency of a spell, the huge antique panels to which the speaker pointed threw slowly back upon the instant their ponderous and ebony jaws. It was the work of the rushing gust, but, then, without those doors there did stand the lofty and enshrouded figure of the Lady Madeline of Usher. There was blood upon her white robes and the evidence of some bitter struggle upon every portion of her emaciated frame. For a moment she remained trembling and reeling to and fro upon the threshold; then, with a low, moaning cry, fell heavily inward upon the person of her brother and, in her violent and now final death agonies, bore him to the floor a corpse and a victim to the terrors he had anticipated.

From that chamber and from that mansion I fled aghast. The storm was still abroad in all its wrath as I found myself crossing the old causeway. Suddenly there shot along the path a wild light, and I turned to see whence a gleam so unusual could have come, for the vast house and its shadows were alone behind me. The radiance was that of the full, setting and blood red moon, which now shone vividly through that once barely discernible fissure of which I have before spoken as extending from the roof of the building in a zigzag direction to the base. While I gazed this fissure rapidly widened, there came a fierce breath of the whirlwind, the entire orb of the satellite burst at once upon my sight, my brain reeled as I saw the mighty walls rushing asunder, there was a long, tumultuous shouting sound like

KIDNEY TROUBLE AFFECTED HIS SPINE

Suffered For Forty Years Until He Used "Fruit-a-tives"

BROWTE, ONT., OCT. 31st, 1913.

"For about forty years, I was troubled with Lame Back brought on by Kidney and Bladder Trouble. I was never confined to my bed with the trouble, but it affected my spine and I had to rest for a time. I took advertised remedies which never did me any good. Then I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. They did me more good than any other remedy.

My son suffered from the same trouble and frequently had to leave off working, but "Fruit-a-tives" remedied it for him. I would strongly advise anyone suffering from Kidney and Bladder Trouble to use "Fruit-a-tives".

BUT the trouble is that silence and passivity are invariably translated as indorsement.

It requires lots more faith than some of us have to think we are getting what is coming to us.

Speculation.

I wonder idly when and where
My purchases would end
If I had in my pocket all
The money I could spend.
I think I'd travel round a bit
And look at all the sights,
And to supply my wants the stores
Would have to open nights.

What would or wouldn't I procure
To wear and drink and eat
In luxuries and all the things
That make the life complete?
When I in spending right and left
Got action on the works
The places where the goods were sold
Would put on extra clerks.

I'd buy enough to load a dray
Or start a candy store,
And after I had rested up
I'd go and buy some more.
Most any ancient thing in stock
On me they could unload,
And when the clerk had wrapped it up
I'd tote it down the road.

Oh, life would be a busy dream
Of buying on the run,
Of getting everything that made
For comfort or for fun!
But as I find on feeling deep
I'm very nearly broke
I think I'll rent a corner store
And buy a five cent smoke.

The Afterwath.

"Talking of that banquet last night," said Holmes, "I suppose you heard some fine language."

"Yes," replied Boggs; "I heard some fine language this morning that affected me very much.

About ten years ago I took a thorough treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, using altogether 21 boxes, and since then can eat anything, have been freed from headaches, and my health has been greatly improved in every way. BELFAST, July 27.—A parade of two full regiments of Ulster volunteers, numbering several thousand men, was held here last night. All the men carried rifles and their equipment included several machine guns, which were strongly guarded. The marchers traversed the principal streets of the city, and their demonstration, the boldest exhibition of Orange strength attempted to date in the Home Rule struggle, aroused great enthusiasm.

TO MAKE UP FOR DELAY.

Royal Commission May Divide Into Two Sections.

OTTAWA, July 27.—A suggestion which may be adopted in order to prevent the upsetting of the whole prearranged program for the Dominion Royal Commission owing to their being delayed several days on the steamer Alsatian which was fog-bound is that the commission would divide into two sections for the first few days of the week. In this way they could cover all the important appointments for the first part of the trip and then they could unite again and carry out the remainder of the program as arranged. Otherwise a great deal of work would be involved in changing the dates for meetings and for special trains and boats and the men whose evidence on trade and other matters is desired would all have to be advised of the change.

SOO'S CITY CLERK DEAD.

C. J. Pim Had Lived In City Since His Birth In 1854.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., July 27.—Following an attack of appendicitis, City Clerk C. J. Pim passed away. Mr. Pim was an old resident of the Soo, having been born here in 1854, and was highly respected. He was at one time in the employ of the Hudson Bay Co. in the early days of the Soo, and later was keeper of the Caribou lighthouse.

Over twelve years ago he was appointed city clerk, and his knowledge of English, French and Indian languages made him an efficient civil servant. He leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter. Flags are at half-mast throughout the city in respect for him. The funeral takes place to-day.

To Banish Wrinkles and Freshen Up Quickly

After a strenous day outdoors, when winds, heat and exhaustion have combined to take away one's freshness and caused the skin to wrinkle and sag—or after a tedious or fretful day indoors—one often has urgent need for some quick rejuvenator. Maybe there's a tango party on for the evening, or some other social event. How in the world can one make herself presentable, looking as she does? It's quite easy.

Just get an ounce of powdered saxolite and a half pint witch hazel at the nearest drug store, mix the two and bathe the face in the solution for two or three minutes. Then look into your mirror and behold the wonderful transformation Wrinkles have vanished, loose, tired muscles have been rested and firmed up," marks of fatigue have flown, and you look so much brighter and younger you can hardly believe your eyes. No one need hesitate to try this, the witch hazel and saxolite being so perfectly harmless.

Message Says He Will Establish a Junta In Toronto.

TORONTO, July 27.—Gen. Victoriano Huerta, ex-President of Mexico, left Kingston, Jamaica, early yesterday morning for Montreal, from whence he will come directly to Toronto, where plans for a counter revolution in Mexico against Generals Carranza and Villa are under way, according to a code cable message received here yesterday afternoon. The person responsible for the statement also declared that Pascual Orozco and Carcelo Caraveo, former Mexican Federal officers, are to leave the western coast of Mexico for Canada early this week. Santos Ochaona, a prominent Huertista, also is expected to arrive in Toronto Monday or Tuesday.

Gen. Felix Diaz, nephew of Porfirio Diaz, the former dictator of Mexico, according to a reliable source, is to be the leader of the new revolution. The plans of the plotters, it was said, comprise two simultaneous movements in western and northern Mexico. Gen. Diaz is to direct the northern campaign, which now is recruiting troops from Federal refugees, Spaniards and Clentificos along the New Mexico-Coahuila border of the United States.

WILL PAY INTEREST.

Government Will Meet C. N. R. Payments If Need Arise.

OTTAWA, July 25. — The trust deed in connection with the C. N. R. bond guarantee has been filed with the Secretary of State. Its main features are already known, but there is an interesting clause enabling the Government, if it sees fit, to pay at the request of the company, all or any portion of the first six half-yearly payments of interest on the guaranteed securities falling due after the opening for traffic on the through line of the C. N. R. from Vancouver to Quebec City. Any money so paid for interest shall be held to be still secured by the guaranteed securities and together with interest thereon at 4 per cent. shall form a charge on the mortgaged premises ranking immediately after the guaranteed securities.

An arrangement similar to this has been made with the G. T. P. If the company ever finds that it cannot pay the interest on its bonds as it becomes due it must give the Government fifteen days' notice.

Honor For Chief Justice.

Canada's Chief Justice, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, has been honored by being made one of the chief speakers at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, next October a Washington.

Three years ago this month the Society of International Law convened at Washington. Chief Justice Fitzpatrick, who represented Canada, was one of the important associates, and a special compliment was subsequently paid him by the U. S. Senate, which ordered his speech a the annual banquet to be printed a a valuable contribution to the general cause of peace and arbitration.

As is well known, Canada's eminent chief justice was born in Quebec City about 50 years ago. Although engaged in much noteworthy litigation before his appointment in 1906—such as defending the late Hon. H. Mercier and Ernest Pacaud in the prosecutions following the fall of the Mercier Administration in 1892—he is probably best known to fame as chief counsel for Louis Riel after the Northwest Rebellion.

Should Ban Mixed Marriages.

The Canadian State Department has issued a public notice that marriages between women of the British nationality professing Christian religion and Moslems, Hindus and other persons belonging to countries where polygamy is legal, should not be allowed.

The Conscientious Man.

He omitted his tax item's outlay—
First struggled with pamphlets galore.
Then purchased a whole ream of paper
And figured for two days or more.

He wrote down each possible dollar
(His conscience was big as a whale—
He listed "one stock in an oil well;"
He listed "one henhouse for sale."

He listed the place that he lived in,
His dog and his chickens, of course.
And then his wife's household allowance,
But added, "'Tis taxed at the source."

He paused as he neared "the dem'd total."
For his tax surely must be immense.
And he'd lost two good jobs while he figured—
And, lo, it was just thirteen cents!

One Possible Mixture.

"You can't say you saw her voice, can you?"

"No."

"And you can't say you heard her sharp look?"

Very Late Dinner Course.

She came downstairs all dressed in green.
And I would fain have told her
She was the sweetest thing I'd seen
Had I been bolder.

Comparisons are odious,
And yet I feared relief
In saying that she looked to us
Just like a lettuce leaf.

She'd missed the soup, the fish, the roast,
And had come in, perforce,
Because she, her most willing host,
Right with the salad course.

"Ah, now I know!" she said so slow
As if a fault confessing;
"Ah, now I know why I was so Long with my dressing!"

POWERS WILL HOLD CONFERENCE TO PREVENT A EUROPEAN WAR

With General Throughout Europe That the Effort Will be Successful to Prevent Austria-Servia Conflict.

MORE HOPEFUL TO-DAY

Examiner Special:

LONDON, July 27.— Sir Edward Grey officially announced in the parliament to-day that France, Germany and Italy had been invited to participate in ambassadorial mediation conference. Thus to-day the wish was general throughout Europe that the European powers might fend off war between Austria and Servia and the other nations that might be involved. It was known that Austria refused to parley further with Servia and Servia was prepared to resist invasion and looked to Russia for aid. On the whole the situation was generally more hopeful than on Saturday with the crisis hinging on Austria's acceptance or declination of the proposal to mediate on the remaining issue, the right of the Austrian officers to arrest on Servian soil, Servians suspected of anti-Austrian plotting. It was said that in her reply Servia had granted all a sovereign state could grant. One important fact of a successful arrangement was that the Austria ambassador at St. Petersburg had shown a willingness to discuss matters with the Russian foreign minister.

With the most serious view taken here, the Italian and German ambassadors had a long talk with Grey, who first had a conference with Churchill and Asquith with the hope of preventing a resort to arms between Austria and Servia.

Germany was in a calmer mood, the public believing the passing of time without an outbreak between the two nations is promising. The Kaiser hurried to Kiel in his royal yacht and then h special train to Potsdam for a conference with his officials. President Poincare of France, cancelled his proposed trip to Copenhagen and was also thwarting his time to the situation.

Austria's view of the reply to its demand by the Servian cabinet was that it was filled with dishonesty, and that the Serbs have been dishonest in the negotiations. In a statement in the Commons Lord Grey said: 'Great Britain will remain neutral so long as the conflict is confined to Austria and Servia. The moment another power is involved, however, the position of this nation will be critical." He urged the powers to bring all possible pressure to bear upon Russia to prevent intervention on behalf of Servia by the Czar. If these efforts fail, he declare, "a catastrophe of incalculable consequences" will follow.

BLEW UP BRIDGE.

VIENNA, July 27.—Servian troops to-day blew up a railroad bridge spanning the Danube at Semlin, where Austria has concentrated her greatest force for the invasion of Servia. The reports of Servians firing on an Austrian boat bearing troops on the Danube were confirmed. The fire was returned and a hot engagement followed. The outcome of the fighting hasn't been learned.

BRITISH NAVY ACTIVE.

PORTLAND, Eng., July 27.— The first fleet of the British navy, comprising twenty-eight first-class battleships and a large number of cruisers and torpedo destroyers was recalled by wireless and are now coaling. All leave has been stopped and it is understood that the fleet will proceed to the North Sea.

LONDON, ENG., July 27. — The latest news of the Servian situation has had a decidedly bad effect on the stock markets of the world. It is panicky in London, and a report says the exchanges had closed in Berlin, Vienna and Budapest. Canadian Pacific fell 8 points in London, about 4 in Toronto, Ont. Runs have begun on the German banks.

NEW YORK, July 27 — Private advices received by Sharon, Hamilton and Co. from Europe, state that the outlook is exceedingly serious, and general conflict is not unexpected.

WASHINGTON, July 27—The war outlook is very gloomy. The Russian Minister of War at St. Petersburg has issued a statement, it was learned in official circles here. The Russian Minister considers that war between Austria and Russia is inevitable and that orders for complete mobilization of the Russian Army have been issued.

NEW YORK, July 27 — No rate decision to-day. Americans in London weak. London settlement begins to-day. Austria and Servia are actively engaged in the war movement. Europe is awaiting the action of Russia.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS NEW TRIAL BY JURY

Case of Pressick vs. Cordova Mines Will Be Re-heard at the Fall Assizes

$1700 SUM IN DISPUTE

A new trial has been ordered in the case of Pressick vs. the Cordova mines. This was a claim by Mrs. Pressick for the death of her husband, who fell in a large hole while working at the mines. The case was tried here, Mr. Kerr appearing for the plaintiff and Mr. Cowan of Toronto for the defence, and the jury awarded the widow the sum of $1700. It was referred to the Court of Appeal, divided evenly, and the verdict stood. The Mining Company thereupon appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada, which court has now ordered a new trial by jury on the grounds that the evidence did not support the verdict of the jury at the previous trial.

The case will be heard in the fall.

LINDSAY LOCAL MET WITH MISHAP

The Lindsay local, due here at 8.50 p.m., met with a mishap on Saturday evening, the front axle of the engine breaking when about three miles east of Hastings. The Lakefield train was dispatched from Peterborough and the passengers taken through to Lindsay. The auxiliary was immediately sent down and a new axle adjusted and the train passed through between seven and eight o'clock yesterday morning. Only the promptness of Engineer Mann in applying the brakes prevented a serious accident.

A WARNING TO BATHERS

A local man, canoeing on Saturday with two young lady visitors to the City, complains that the boys bathing adjacent to the C. P. R. bridge passed unwarranted remarks as they paddled by. Now, it is not expected that this notice should meet their eyes, but it is hoped that the matter will reach their ears, for a repetition of the occurrence might be the means of depriving them of their summer pastime.

Civil Service Employees Should Refuse Tips: What?

It may be of interest to the general public to know that the oath of office taken by clerks in the Government service, contains the following clause: "I will not ask or receive any sum of money, services, recompense or matter or anything whatsoever, directly or indirectly, in return for what I have done or may do in the discharge of any of the duties of my said office except my salary or what may be allowed me by law or by the Government in Council. So help me God."

GREATLY EXCITED

Special Wire to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., July 27—Toronto Serbs are greatly excited here, while the Austrian colony is unconcerned. The Servians held a big demonstration and 250 are preparing to go back to the services of their country.

MARBLE DEALERS' CONVENTION HERE ON AUGUST 3, 4

Ontario Association Will Spend Two Days in City Next Week—The Programme

GUESTS OF MARBLE CO.

The annual convention of the Ontario Granite and Marble Dealers' Association will be held in Peterborough on Monday and Tuesday of next week, when a hundred or more of the members are expected to assemble. The association has a membership of several hundred, but as the present is not regarded as the best time in the year to get away from business it is hardly likely that a full attendance will be realized.

The convention will be opened on Monday afternoon and addresses of welcome will be offered by Mr. T. M. Howard of the Vermont Marble Co. and Mr. T. W. Moore, also of this City. Several hours will be devoted to business and at 3.30 the visitors will enjoy a drive around the City, including the two cemeteries. In the evening further business will be taken up.

On Tuesday the members will be the guests of the Vermont Marble Company and will spend the day on the river and Rice Lake, with dinner at Gore's Landing. Everything is being done to make this a most enjoyable outing.

Mr. T. G. Gibson of Toronto, President of the Association, will preside at the meetings.

ARMY WORM IN SMITH

The army worm has now been discovered on the farm of Ex-Warden R. N. Scott, of Smith. No serious damage has been reported since Saturday however, although in some places the insects have spread slightly. It is thought that a second brood is possible, but in the event of its arrival it will not prove as formidable as the first. The present invasion of the insects is about over.

"Truth" Has A Grievance

Dear Sir,—Regarding your paragraph re deception of jobs, in your issue of July 24th, I would like to make known through the medium of your valuable paper the full facts of the same.

A number of men were engaged by an agent of this town for a camp for road cutting and timber falling. This agent stated that the wages were from $30 to $35 per month, including board. The cost to reach this job, as the agent stated, was $1.55, inclusive of a 25c meal. This is how far your $1.55 goes. You take train for Lakefield, costing 30c; next boat for Mount Julian, 50c; also another 85c for stage a distance of 12 miles from Mount Julian, and still no meal included. After leaving the stage you are faced with an 8 mile walk through the bush to the camp. This same agent was informed by several of the men that they were not experienced men. This the agent said did not matter if the men were willing to work, as the job would last until next spring, and all men sent by him would be found employment as previously stated.

On arrival at camp we were informed by the foreman of the camp that only experienced axemen were required. You are invited by the man to try the job, but at the time bluntly told that it is useless you to try. Several of the men one day's work and received and were consequently faced with a mile walk back to Peterborough of the men were Italians who ed their fare up to the camp company, who did one day and left the camp in debt, face the walk to Peterborough.

I also wish to state that were not $30 per month, magnificent sum of 60c board.

I think that this matter given through your colu the real truth of affairs deception may be known you in anticipation of remain, yours, etc.

UTH.

EARLY DROWNED IN TUB OF WATER

Baby Girl on Ware Street Fell into Tub While Mother Was Hanging the Clothes

FIRST AID RENDERED

The baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Beatty, 75 Ware Street, while playing near a tub of water on Friday afternoon, overbalanced and fell headfirst into the water, being almost drowned when rescued by her mother. Mrs. Beatty was washing some clothes and went outside to hang them on a line. A few moments only had elapsed when her attention was caught by a peculiar sound from the kitchen and on rushing in Mrs. Beatty found the baby almost wholly immersed in the water. Only its little feet were caught on the edge of the tub, which was on the floor. Quick action on the part of the mother, who called to neighbours, and the assistance of Henry Sowden, and Mrs. Jobe, prevented a fatality. The usual methods for resuscitation were applied. A 'phone message was sent from Freburn's store to Dr. Eastwood, but when he arrived the worst of the struggle was over. The little girl is between two and three years old and to-day seems to be little the worse for the experience.

Exports To U.S. Have Increased

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, July 27. — The effect of the Underwood tariff bill upon the Canadian trade with the States is clearly reflected in the Canadian trade statistics published for the twelve months ending April 30. The exports to the United States were $290,666,674, an increase of $32,830,874 over the year before.

Higher Price of Butter Result of Long Dry Spell

The jump of butter from 25c. to 29c. on the market on Saturday last was rather significant. From all accounts the cause is to be found in the continued dry weather which has parched the pastures and has resulted in a curtailment of the milk receipts. The recent rains may help a little, but the farmers claim that the damage is beyond repair, and many cattle are said to be fed upon material which should not be called into use until the winter.

FLY TIME IS SWATTING TIME

If, at first you don't succeed,
Swat again!
Follow, follow, where they lead,
Swat again!
If you would from flies be freed
You must live one simple creed,
And but one short maxim head,—
"Swat again!"

If but one gains roosting space,
Swat again!
Don't allow it on the place,
Swat again!
All his deeds are filthy, base,
It will lead you quite a race,
Quick! Destroy it—leave no trace
Swat again!

Never rest by night or day,
Swat again!
Danger lies in long delay,
Swat again!
Where they buzz to chorus gay,
Step in—bring them all to bay;
Keep on swatting, it will pay;
Swat again!

DUBLIN IS SEETHING WITH EXCITEMENT

Another Outbreak in the Irish Capital is Feared—Nationalists Clamour for Revenge on Soldiers

ATTACK THE BARRACKS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, July 27—Dublin is seething with excitement to-day. The populace, worked up to fever heat by last night's encounter between the British soldiers and the Irish Nationalists, is on edge, and another outbreak is feared. Nationalist volunteers, carrying rifles, are walking about the streets to-day and few policemen are to be seen. A great crowd paraded the streets all night, singing "God Save Ireland" and "A Nation Once Again," and other patriotic songs. Day came before the police finally dispersed the mob, which searched the streets trying to find soldiers of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, on which to inflict vengeance for the events of yesterday. Early to-day, finding the soldiers were ordered to remain in the barracks, they attacked the Royal Barracks and clamoured the soldiers to come out. Finally the mob kicked down the gate, fired a couple of shots and were then dispersed by the police. Premier Asquith hurried back to London from his summer home, arriving there early to-day, taking charge of the War Office.

Secretary for Ireland Birrell, announced in the Commons to-day that the assistant commissioner of the Dublin police had been suspended, pending an official inquiry.

In his statement, Birrell declared the soldiers, exasperated by the Nationalists, fired without orders.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin demanded late to-day that the corps of King Own Borderers that fired into the mob, be removed from the city at once. The indications at the barracks were that the troops were preparing to leave. The Redmondites were incensed in the Commons. William Redmond declared, "Troops ought to be hanged." A full investigation is promised.

LOCAL MAN IS BEREAVED

A VALUABLE BOOKLET

One of the most useful pamphlets to be distributed about town in some years is the excellent "Handbook of First Aid" of Johnson & Johnson.

The book is full of suggestions for first aid to the injured in accidents and emergencies. It also contains valuable information on how to care for the sick and prevent spread of diseases, as well as desirable household and toilet hints.

In times when contagious diseases prevail, when numerous accidents occur, this book will serve as a reminder that in it are lessons worthy of careful attention that if followed would lessen the danger from death.

It is well designed. The cover shows two men assisting an injured man, who has been given first aid, while inside the cover are illustrations of what to do and how to do it in hundreds of cases.

The book is being carefully distributed into each home, and when it is received, read it carefully and then hang it up in some convenient place for future reference.

Boy Fractured Skull By a Fall From a Tree

Wilfred Lavasseur, the seven-year-old son of Mr. Dan Lavasseur, who resides near the Henry Hope factory, fell from a tree on Saturday, fracturing the base of his skull and seriously endangering his life. He was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Dr. Amys attending him. It is understood that the injury is of a very serious nature, and, while hopes are held out for the little fellow's recovery, they are not the most confident. He was resting easily this morning.

Col. Hughes Promises To Assist in Canal Celebration Here

The movement to fittingly celebrate the opening of the Trent canal from Trenton to Peterborough, by which this City will be made a lake port, is receiving general and favourable recognition. Contrary to a letter signed "Citizen" in Saturday night's Examiner, this long stretch of the canal will be open to navigation during the coming autumn. In addition there is the long stretch north of the City. However, the central idea of the celebration lies in the fact that Peterborough gets direct and easy water communication with Lake Ontario. Mr. Burnham in urging that something be done to recognize this fact, apparently desires to awaken the City to the advantage to be gained by letting the rest of the country know this section of the canal is an actual fact. He has received the following letter from the Minister of Militia, who is a Victoria riding representative:

Ottawa, July 25th, 1914.

Dear Burnham,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 21st instant, relative to the celebration in Peterborough on its becoming a lake port.

I shall be very pleased to assist you in any way I can, if you will let me know the dates.

Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES.

AN EXPLANATION WANTED.

A ratepayer has asked the Examiner for an explanation of the fact, that last year his tax bill for garbage collection was $1.00; while this year the same property basis, demands a tax of $5.20 for garbage collection. The authorities should supply this information. Under the best conditions and circumstances, the average ratepayer finds it difficult to pay his tax-bill with submissive resignation to the inevtiable; and when, as this year, the burden reaches its greatest weight, he is reasonably entitled to some explanation of an increase on one item which he finds it as hard to understand as to pay. He has to pay and he thaks the authorities that compel payment are in duty bound to help him understand.

BLOODSHED IN IRELAND.

The responsibility for bloodshed, from the rioting in Dublin over the gun-running, and the death of four of the attacking rioters, falls upon the Unionist politicians and the Ulster faction leaders. If these had not incited Ulster to armed rebellion, if they had not initiated gun-running in Ulster, there would have been no Nationalist volunteers to need guns, as an answer to the Ulster volunteers. No small responsibility rests upon the Government which has allowed rebellion to assume so much headway. The loss of even a few lives is too big a price to pay for deference to and indulging the intrigues of Unionist politicians and Ulster mischief makers of the Carson brand. The people's parliament has passed Home Rule. Apply it, and until it is proved that it works injustice to any section of the Irish people, there is no warrant for "volunteers" and threats of civil war conditions.

THE TRAIL OF PARTIZANSHIP.

The position of chairman of the commission to administer the Workmens' Compensaiton Act, is one that demands the best intellect and judgment of the country. The first consideration is that the chairman should be free from the taint of partisanship, which means that he would have a free hand and be in a position to mete out justice to working men untrammelled by party considerations. The situation demands possession of sympathy with the working man and a knowledge of labour problems. After waiting seven years for the Whitney government to pluck up courage to pass a compensation act, labour interests deserve to have the Act fairly and adequately administered.

There is little prospect of this being assured, when a government hanger-on, a feeder on jobs, at the public grib, an intense partisan is given the practically judical position of head of the Compensation Act Commission at a salary of ten thousand a year; a salary greater than that of the highest judges in the land, and only equalled by the salary of the head of the Supreme court, Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, P.C., G.C.M.G.

Mr. Price is a law-partner of Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, who has distinguished himself less in regard to discharge of his official duties than he has done in providing fat government jobs for his partner. In 1912-13 Mr. Price collected $8,000 for services in connection with the consolidation of the Railway Act and repeated the grab on the same score last year. In 1913 he was sent as envoy of the Minister of Labour to Port Arthur and Fort William in connection with labour troubles at $40 per day for a good many days. This is not all Mr. Crothers has done for his law partner. In 1913 another trip to British Columbia was made by Mr. Price. He was sent to inquire into the labour troubles in the Vancouver coal mines owned by Mackenzie and Mann. For weeks Mr. Price was there at $40 a day and expenses, and he didn't succeed either. He made his report and drew him pay, but the labour troubles were not settled; and are worse to-day than ever. Mr. Price was as a partisan given a lot of odd jobs that netted him about $11,000. Now he has been loaded upon the people of Ontario and has been tied up permanently to feed at the public crib at the rate of $10,000 a year. The worst feature of his apointment is that it converts the chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Act into a partizan concern, and in effect subordinates the interests of the working men to the reward of partizanship.

SWIMMING AND SAFETY.

The Montreal Mail puts the plea for acquiring a knowledge of swimming thus concisely and effectively:

Whether the whole world world shrinks in horror from an Empress of Ireland disaster, or a lone mother stands screaming on the shore, the lesson is the same, learn how to swim.

There is no need to argue in favour of learning this life-saving and wholesome art. On the Empress of Ireland when she went down, here were among others a father and mother and a little daughter aged eight, hurled into the sea. Natnrally they got separated. The little girl could swim, and by this means reached a piece of wreckage or some similar support, and was later picked up and saved. The father and mother couldnt' swim and were drowned. In cases of danger or emergency the knowledge of swimming onl- a few strokes represent all the difference between life and death. Though the city authorities still neglect the important duty of providing bathing facilities, which inovlve and imply opportunities for learning swimming ,there is still abundant opportunities of reasonably convenient accessability to water; and this convenience of access emphasizes the necessity of learning how to swim. These hot days and nights, the river is alive with canoes and other craft, and in many cases the occupants are in the greatest danger. Persons venture into canoes who should not be permitted to do so. No man, woman or child should venture into a canoe who does not know how to swim, and in case of accident, which is momentarily likely to happen, there is likelihoodd of one or more deaths from drowning.

In any event a knowledge or swimming is a duty; and the art is very easily learned. Animals learn to swim easily. Swimming is not natural to most land animals. Throw a kitten a fortnight old into the water and it learns to swim in a moment. It begins by attempting the motions of walking, in the natural desire to reach shore; and it finds that the natural motions of walking become converted into swimming. But human beings haven't the coolness and presence of mind of the lower animals, and we have to learn to swim, and the learning, if we put our minds and bodies into the right condition and position, is as easy as a child learning to walk. We speak of compulsory education in our schools; we should make the acquirement of a knowledge of swimming compulsory. That knowledge universally possessed, would save scores of valuable lives every summer and would save many homes from being darkened with the sorrow from the death by drowning of one or more of its members—in nine cases out of ten from failure to know how to swim. The Examiner considers this matter so important that it has procured from Mr. G. A. Carson, physical director of the Young Men's Christian Association, a practical article upon "Swimming." This will be found in another column, and it is hoped it will be read and heeded. Mr. Crason is doing a good work in teaching the art of swimming at the Y.M.C.A. pool, and it would be better for us all if this were used to its full time capacity, for this purpose. "Safety first," through learning and knowing how to swim should be the universal motto.

AS BEFORE THE FLOOD.

In spite of the fact that Ulster is sore, that the Hindus threaten divers things, that Austria is arming against Servia and that Madame Calliaux is fighting for her life, the sport page and the fashion page are read almost before the rest of the newspaper is glanced at.—Ottawa Free Press.

CIVIL WAR SERIOUS.

Those who jauntily talk of civil war in the British Isles would do well to remember the experience of the United States. The cry there was "On to Richmond in a week." It took five years fratricidal strife and a river of blood flowed before Richmond was reached and the Stars and Bars hauled down from the southern capital.—Ottawa Free Press.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

SUBORDINATING THE COMPENSATION ACT TO PARTY PATRONAGE

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, July 27—Current comment in Toronto on the handling of Ontario's plum — worth $10,000 per per year—to Samuel Price, K. C., expresses surprise and regret that Sir James Whitney should have made the position of Chairman of the Workman's Compensation Commission a place of party patronage.

Mr. Price is a law partner of T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour in the Borden Cabinet, and amongst the chief qualifications which the Toronto Mail, the Toronto World and other Conservative journals mention in support of his selection is the fact that he has been the recipient of several previous favours from Conservative Prime Ministers. He has ben a royal commissioner at various investigations and several times has been given the opportunity to frame laws and settle industrial disputes.

Leading men of both parties have continually stated that it is of first importance that the best man in the country for this position, Chairman of the Workmen's Compensation Commission, should be selected and that both he and his confreres should be free from any taint of partisanship. This position demands sympathy with the working men as well as an adequate knowledge of his "patronage majesty," after weeks of tedious, dear Sir James Whitney naively disclosed the fact that the list of names on which he made his selection probably contained "more names of able men than ever previously came before a Government."

LAURIER, BORDEN AND "YELLOW PERIL" IMMIGRATION

In Opposition, Sir Robert Borden and his associates professed to be the staunchest foes of Oriental immigration. They denounced the Liberal Government because even a few Orientals were allowed to enter Canada. They swept British Columbia on the cry of "Asiatic exclusion," and by the aid of a forged telegram pledging exclusion. Once they gained power, there came a remarkable change in their attitude and in immigration conditions.

According to official figures given in a booklet "issued by direction of the Hon. W. J. Roche, Minister of the Interior," more Chinese entered Canada in the first two years of Borden rule than had been admitted in the last eleven years of Liberal administration! Between the fiscal year 1909-01 and the fiscal year 1910-11, both inclusive, 11,314 Chinese were admitted to the Dominion, or an average of 1,029 per year. In the first two fiscal years of Conservative administration, the number of Chinese admitted to Canada was no less than 13,092, or an average of 6,846 per year—six times as high an average as in the days of Laurier.

In 1908 an arrangement was completed by the Laurier Cabinet with the Government of Japan for controlling and curtailing the Japanese emigration to Canada. The beneficial effects of that arrangement were at once evident. In the first year that it was in force, Japanese immigration showed a great reduction. It remained in force during the life of the Liberal Ministry and Japanese immigration was kept at a low figure. It remained in force on the accession of the Borden Cabinet, but it has not been used with the same good effect by the Conservative Government as by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. In the first two years of Conservative rule, according to the figures issued by Hon. Dr. Roche, 1,849, Japanese were admitted to the Dominion as compared with only 1,203 in the last three years that the Liberals held power at Ottawa. In other words, the average number of Japanese admitted under Borden has been 749 yearly as compared with a yearly average of 401 in the three years following the completion of the arrangement with Japan. Under Liberal rule, Hindu immigration was practically stopped. It was stopped as the result of conferences held with the Imperial authorities and the British authorities in India by Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, then Deputy Minister of Labour, who acted as Commissioner for the Laurier Government in dealing with the matter. It was checked so effectively that in the last three years of Liberal rule—the years following the conference—only twenty-one Hindus entered the Dominion. Nor did any serious difficulties arise such as have recently come in connection with Hindu immigration under Conservative administration of Canadian affairs.

The Liberals greatly reduced Japanese and Chinese immigration. They practically stofped Hindu emigration and their methods created no situations of Imperial peril. The Conservatives talked much in Opposition of "Asiatic exclusion." Under Conservative administration, there is no "Asiatic exclusion." On the contrary, there have been large increases in immigration from Japan and China, and the Conservative method of dealing with attempted Hindu immigration has created a situation of grave Imperial danger.

Coming Call.

The fliers to the world below
Their haughty heads incline,
And very pleasantly they call:
"Come up! The air is fine!"

Knew Better.

"You say you are without funds?" said the judge.

"I haven't a cent to my name," replied the bankrupt.

"Judge," said the lady creditor, "he is trying to deceive you. I saw on his desk a check book, and half of the checks had not been used."

Looking Backward.

How dear to my heart are the feastings of childhood,
The light, flaky biscuits that dear mother made,
When coming in fresh from the meadow or wildwood
We rushed without mercy the pantry to raid!
How quickly we'd grab them
And spear them or stab them
And greedily punish their crispy brown crust!
How Billy and Molly and Jimmie would eat them
Till one unaccustomed would think they would "bust!"
Good faith, there was nothing that ever could beat them,
Surpass them nor throw them the least in the shade,
Those hot, smoking biscuits,
Those light, flaky biscuits,
Those buttermilk biscuits that dear mother made.

Where He Scored.

"What would you do, Miss Ethel, if you had loads of money?"

"Oh, spend it."

"Would you?"

"Yes. What would you do if you had a lot of money?"

"I'd give it to you."

Chance to Be Generous.

"He has just ordered up the drinks for the crowd."

"I thought this was a temperance town."

"That is why he is in such a hurry. They only sell five cent drinks."

Did You Ever Figure This Way

To purchase a modern house with furnace at $1900 and pay $200 down on same and balance at 6 per cent and taxes and insurance, what this really costs on monthly basis.

Purchase at $1900 pay $200 down

Balance $1700 at 6 per cent is $102 per year.

Taxes for one year is $30.

Insurance for one year is $2.50.

$134.50 for the year or in other words $11.21 per month for a modern house. Now if you are paying $15 a month rent what do you save out of your rent money, just $11.21 from $15 leaves $3.75 per month or $45.48 per year saved out of ordinary rent money this applied on the principal will gradually pay it off and you will have a home of your own clear of debt in a few years you have to pay rent anyway, why not be paying on a home of your own. PETES CHASE SOUTHPAW JINX AND WIN BOTH GAMES FROM WHITE'S HAMS

Had to Beat Two Left-handers But Came Through in Good Style, Winning the First Game by a Ninth Innings Rally.

SECOND WAS EASY

HAMILTON, July 26.—The Hamilton Athletics dropped back into last place in the Canadian League race on Saturday, when they lost both of the double-header to Peterborough. The first game was closely contested and resulted in a 6 to 5 score, but the second game was a runaway for the visitors and ended in a one-sided score of 12 to 5. Eight errors by Hamilton, and heavy, timely hitting by the Petes was responsible for the second victory, while poor base running lost the first game for the locals.

Paddy Dougherty worked in the first game for the first time in several weeks and should have won. He heaved winning ball throughout, but three errors by his team mates and poor base running spoiled his good pitching.

Shears started in the second game, but only lasted two and one-third innings, he allowing nine hits and seven runs during that short time. Billy Donahue relieved him, but did not do much better. The team leaves for St. Thomas on Monday and will not return home for nine days. The scores:

RED CAPS AND DE LAVAL WON SATURDAY'S GAMES

There were two good games in the Mercantile League series at Riverside Park on Saturday, the De Laval team beating the Printers by 9 to 6 and the Red Caps winning from the Wm. Hamilton Co. 17 to 2. O'Connell pitched fine ball for the Typos in the first game, striking out fifteen of the Separators, but his support was very poor, and the De Laval men came from behind and won out. The batteries were Mahoney and A. Taylor for the De Laavl, and O'Connell and B. Taylor for the Printers.

The second game was a hard fought battle until the eighth innings. The Red Caps ed by 4 to 2 at the end of the seventh and wanted to quit then. The Hams, however, refused, and the Red Caps and Leary, L. Lane and the last two innings. The batteries were: Rahmel and Swanston for the Red aCps and Leary, L. Rose and Ross for the Wm. Hamilton Co. Art Hall umpired both games most satisfactorily.

Beavers Are With Us To-day

The Toronto Beavers arrived this morning from Ottawa and will hook up with the Petes this afternoon in the first of a three-game series. Either Roberts or Schaefer will pitch for Ort's men to-day, with Belting as the probable Peterborough choice. The Beavers have several new players since their last trip, including Snell, turned back by the Toronto Internationals. The games for the first three days of the week will start at 3.45 o'clock with to-morrow (Tuesday) Ladies' Day.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Spectator:—In a fanning bee last night, Jack White pointed out the value of one consistent winning twirler to a club. Bobby Heck, of London, and Louie Schettler, of Peterborough, were used as examples. Heck is held, by White, as the one responsible for the success of the London club last year and this. As White points out, a pitcher of Heck's calibre is always able to break up any losing streak which his team may get into. If his club loses a couple of games in a raw, Heck can be counted upon to jump in and bring home a victory. Schettler has been doing this for the Peter recently and has been a big help in lifting them out of the cellar.

White is of the opinion that Pat Dougherty would have done the same for the local club had he been able to take his regular turn on the mound. Dougherty's illness has been costly to the locals. He is easily the best of the local staff and pretty consistent. A pitcher who can be counted upon to hold the opposing team down to a couple of tallies, gives his own club a chance to work out a victory.

DON'T FORGET THE BIG BOOSTER DAYS THIS WEEK

Don't forget the two booster days for the Peterborough Ball Club this week. Thursday and Saturday are the dates, and with these two days chosen there is no excuse for any one failing to turn out and help boost the team along. The directors of the Peterborough Club merit liberal patronage. They have done their best to put a good team in Peterborough, and have kept faith with the public at persons loss, refusing to sell a pitcher to Ottawa at a good price last week, because they felt it was not fair to the Peterborough fans to weaken the local team as long as the race is on. The admission to the grounds on Thursday and Saturday will be the same as any day but 25c will be charged for admission to either grand stand. Make it a point to be present on Thursday or Saturday, or, better still, be there for both Booster Day games.

WHERE THE HEATHER BLOOMS IN CANADA

Novel Means of Advertising the Dominion's National Park

The visit of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle to Jasper Park has served to draw the attention of the travelling public of Great Britain to the magnificent asset Canada possesses in her great national reserves. Mr. J. B. Harkin, Commissioner of Dominion Parks, is also carrying on a campaign to make these immense playgrounds better known, and has just issued from the Department of the Interior a most attractive souvenir of the mountain parks. This is a booklet entitled "Just A Sprig of Mountain Heather." Attached to its cover is a piece of real purple heather taken from the Alpine meadows of the Canadian Rockies.

It is a novel and very effective way to call the tourists' interest in Canada's National Parks. Mr. Harkin tells in the booket of the significance of these reserves and of the Dominion's natural heritage of beauty in the form of majestic mountain, peaceful valley and emerald lake. Jasper is the latest of the Dominion parks to be established. It comprises an area of a thousand square miles in the wonderful district recently opened up by the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific through the Yellowhead Pass.

WHAT TO TAKE TO THE PICNIC

Here is a list of sensible things needed for the sensible picnic, which can be bought a week in advance, and which are helpful at all times. Wax paper, plain white paper napkins, paper tablecloth ((of one goes where there is a table), paper drinking cups, paper of splint plates. If a large party, a splint basket; if an aut party, a hamper; if a small party, a pasteboard box or boxes; a bottle opener for the grape juice or ginger ale.

The sandwiches are made the evening before and each wropped separately; it is very much better to mince ham, tongue, lamb or cheese than to put slices of meat between the bread, says the Dallas News. The minced meat can be seasoned and flavored correctly.

All pastes en be mde two or three days beforehand. It is best to cut sandwiches smal and wrap two or three together. A good way is to have as many boxes as you have kinds of sandwiches, marking each box. The cake is cut in suitably-sized pieces, and wrapped three in one, unless bought in cartons. Then they need not be wrapped.

The bottle of olives is opened, drained, and the cork put back. Cocoa syrup is boiled two or three days before hand. Lemons are rimmed or squeesed and added to the sugar syrup. All one needs to do is add either ocoa or lemon to the water. A box of fruit of choice or what one can afford. stuffed dates, figs and prunes to make a good sweet, and some pain candies.

Another Stoney Lake Story From Sam Hunter Telling Of A Big Fish Nearly Landed

Sam Hunter is having an unusually good summer at Stoney Lake. Every year it has been the custom of the clever cartoonist of the Toronto World to contribute a story to the Millbrook Reporter. The following breezy bit is his second for 1914, and is decidedly worth repeating. It is entitled "Fishermen's Luck" and is as follows:

Twenty-five pounds, or to be exact, twenty-five and one-quarter pounds, was the recorded weight of the 'lunge caught by Dr. Anderson of Cleveland on Tuesday of last week. It was caught within a few yards of Mr. Jack Hunter's dock and was gaffed and safely taken aboard by Mr. Dick Hunter. There may have been a few persons on Stoney Lake who had not the meancholy pleasure of gazing for a few moments upon the composed and peaceful features of that 'lunge, but that was only because the "doc" in his triumphal tour missed the opening to some camps. He was the proudest "native son" that ever went back in triumph to Ohio. He started home by the Wednesday early boat, and wouldn't have swapped that fish for the United States Presidency. Many were the Oh's! and other exclamantion marks worked by that fish, and deep but hidden the disgust of the noisy and boastful gentleman who had just come in a few minutes before with a fourteen pound 'lunge.

"They tell me," said the doctor, getting a fresh grip on his fish and making himself apoplectic looking in the face, trying to hold it out at arm's length, that it's the biggest 'lunge ever caught, sir, in these waters." Jimmie was one of a group at the landing surrounding the fisherman and his prize, his hands draped behind him and his head screwed to win'ard of a large fat man who was blocking his view. How about it, Jimmie?" I asked, after squeezing into view of the monster. "Did you ever land anything to beat that?" Jimmie backed out and gave a short laugh. "They make me tired," he said. "It's a good fish, mind ye, but" —poking a stubby forefinger into that part of my anatomy where the up-to-date doctor would probably jab for signs of appendicitis if he caught me with a bad cold and thought I might have "the price" of an operation—"Ah've handled better ones nor you." "But not this season?" I ventured tantatively. "Twenty-four years ago come th' twenty sixth of July next, continued Jimmie, "me an' a cousin of Bob McCracken's hooked a fesh over near Tub Island that mighty near done for us. He upset our canoe as we was just gettin' him intil shore, an' spilled 40 quarts of huckleberries on us. But we got til shore safe an' took a twenty-six pound 'lunge home with us in th' end. We struck our fesh just west of Tub, and th' minute we put th' hooks intil him we headed for th' point of Eagle Mount. It was a tug of war. Six times he backfired an' towed us a hunder' yards or so with th' nose of th' canoe dippin' water, then he'd et up a minute, an' then we'd hit 'er up with th' paddles an' gain a few yards. Cap Scollard of th' old Mary Ellen was landin' some quarry men at th' point that mornin' an' he yelled til know if we wanted a tow, an' some of th' quarrymen put out in a punt til help us. "Keep Aff!" Ah yelled til them. Twenty-eight minutes an' we was fair on th' rocks an 'the' fesh was withie strikin' distance. Johnny had th' line now an' as th' monster head came up Ah struck once, twice, three times weth th' paddle. Then there was a fearsome plunge an' th' canoe was half full of water an' floatin huckleberries, an' Johnny was drawin' en th' line weth neither spoon, hooks or fesh on it. Th' monster had broke his holt. After half an hour's hard fightin' he'd broke aff th' hooks an' got away." There was a long, thoughtful pause during which Jimmie recharged his burnt-out brier with fresh backstrap, and an open-faced young man in white duck who had been edging closer and closer during the narrative, coughed depreciatingly. "I, ah—beg your pardon, but I thought at first you said you—ah—took it home with you?" "Not that one, young man," said Yimmie. "The one we took home with us weighed no more'n a pound heavier nor yon ad they're makin such a 'fuss about over there. He was disgorged intil th' canoe by th' big lad I struck over the head weth th' paddle. He couldn't have been swallyed more nor a few minutes judgin' b' his fresh appearance."

SUGGESTS SUMMER BOARDERS

We can imagine that we hear some one remark when they read the above caption, "The idea of suggesting that a farmer's wife take summer boarders. As though she had not enough work to do in the summer!" We fully appreciate the fact that the summer season is a very busy one in the country. Nevertheless we throw out this suggestion for what it is worth.

During the months of July and August our city cousins are having their vacation. And how they do enjoy getting away from the rush and bustle for a few weeks and out to the quiet farm! They who have friends or relations in the country consider themselves very lucky and some appear to have the idea that we on the farm should consider ourselves honored by their presence for a few weeks. Others, we believe, thoughtlessly overlook the amount of extra labor that is involved in their presence in the home.

Almost every farmer and his wife enjoy company and it is only right that they should have company, as it helps them to cultivate new ideas and get in touch with other spheres of life, and to take an interest in the outside world. We cannot overlook the fact, however, that with the ever-increasing high cost of living two or three summer visitors add considerably to the expense bill for running the home, to say nothing about the extra labor which it necessitates. The advantages are nearly all on the side of the visitor as they have a splendid vacation at practically no expense to themselves.

Our suggestion then is, why not come to some agreement with your city friends whereby they will pay you a reasonable sum for their board and room during the length of time that they are at your home. We believe that almost any friend from the city would be quite willing to do this as they would not then feel under any obligation to you whatever, and you would not only have the pleasure of having them in your home for a few weeks but would feel at the end of the summer that you had something to show for the extra amount of work which was necessary during their visit.

SOME HINTS ON SWIMMING

(Written for the Examiner by Mr. G. A. Carson, Physical Director of the Peterborough Y.M.C.A.)

Every summer the lakes and rivers throughout our land claim hundreds of our young people through drowning. We read about these accidents heave a sigh, say how sorry we are for their friends, etc., and then proceed with our business at hand, and forget about it until it strikes nearer home and some of our relatives or friends meet the same fate. Then we wake up to the fact and ask ourselves the following question:

1. Can I swim?
2. Can my children swim (if a married man).

In this article I do not intend to go into the different swimming strokes, or try to give instructions in life saving. My pupose is simply to throw out a few suggestions that may prove helpful to people who some day may find themseves in danger, and to those who want to learn or teach others to swim.

Let us first consider a few of the causes of drowning. The first is because of the fact that many persons who cannot "swim" take unnecessary chances in canoes, as well as going into dangerous water when there is no one around who is competent to save them in case anything happens. Another is because many go in too soon after a heavy meal. Again, many people who are good swimmers seem to lose their head when they get out in deep water, and simply fail to do the thing they know how to do. Cramps are the cause of many fatalities. There are many more but these are some of the most common. Now, you naturally ask the question, what is the cure, or how are these to be avoided? I have no "Cure All" to offer, but simply a few suggestions, which, if followed, may save many lives.

First, if you are accidentally tipped out of a canoe and you are sinking, try and remember to close your mouth and hold your breath, this will bring you to the surface, and when your mouth is well above water call for aid. If you have been dumped from a canoe, get hold of the end of the canoe; it will hold you up till aid comes. In case there is no object to which you can hold, turn on your back and, keeping your head well back, kick with your feet or use your hand as you would in feathering the oars of a boat; this will keep you up indefienitely and besides being very easy to do, it takes very little energy.

The next suggestion is such, common knowledge that it seems almost unnecessary to repeat, and yet we find good, sensible people violating it right along. It is this: No matter how good a swimmer, one should never go into the water for at least one and a half and, better, two hours after eating.

In case of a cramp, don't get excited and give up. In most cases, where cramps are given as the cause of drowning, the cramps are not really the cause, but rather, fear, caused by the cramp. Because a person takes a cramp in one leg it is no reason why he or she should drown. A good swimmer can swim a long way with either the arms or legs independent of each other.

Now, to go on to the teaching, there is a great deal of controversy over which is the better stroke to teach beginners, but as I said at the beginning, it is not my intention to discuss the merits of the different strokes. I will endeavour to explain one stroke which has been used a great deal the last few years, and has met with great success, because of its simplicity and lack of complicated co-ordinations and also because it is composed only of natural movements. The method of instruction is to have the class line up on the side of the tank, or bank of the river, if it is out of doors, and take the following land drill. Place one foot forward and, keping the knees straight, bend the body forward from the waist as if leaning over the level of the water pressing backward as far as possible and with enough violence to give them an impetus to swing out over the water the forward motion at the same time the body turns from side to side (the left when the right arm reaches forward and vice-versa) while the head also swings with the body and faces towards the rear arm, thus in a way protecting the mouth and giving a better chance to breathe.

The movements are somewhat like alternate scoops, in which the large shoulder muscles do most of the work for the fingers and hand are kept straight, while the wrist and elbow are locked, the elbow being kept elevated. After about five minutes of going through the arm movements on land place the water wings around the waist and enter the water. The main thing is to gain confidence, and owing to the fact that any one can move along on the arm stroke, especially with the aid of the water wings the pupil soon becomes confident. After about ten minutes with the wings the pupil tries to swim without any support and usually proceeds for at least a short distance.

By making the pupils swing their body from side to side (or as it results roll from side to side) they will find it very easy to develop the leg action, which is a leg drive keeping the leg straight from the hip to the knee is slightly bent the toes pointed and the kick is directly down on the water.

A important rule for swimmers to learn is to relax when they find there is nothing to be afraid of in the water and try to swim with all your muscles relaxed.

There are two methods of breathing that can be used with this stroke. The first and probably the best one is to inhale through the mouth when the face is turned to the side and exhale through the nose when the face turns down into the water. Second method: Exhale while body is swinging to the side, and inhale during the backward pressure of arm and shoulder, in this method the breathing is all done through the mouth.

Physical Director, Y.M.C.A.

Christ Will Reward Every Man According To His Works

Elder F. W. Johnston of Kingston spoke to a large gathering last evening in the big tent on the corner of Harvey and Dublin Streets, the topic being that of the 2,300 days of Daniel 8:14. He traced out with indisputed certainty the chronological order of this period and showed what was involved in the reading of that text, when it says "Unto two thousand and three hundred days then shall the sanctuary be cleansed." By referring to many Scriptures he proved conclusively that the "cleansing of the sanctuary" was a work to be done in heaven when the books of heaven are opened and the records cleaned up. In other words, the work was an investigative judgment taking place in the heavens before Jesus comes. This work, he said, was final and would decide the destiny of all. He deplored the erroneous position of Pastor Russell concerning the future chance to be granted the heathen, and showed how that as the Scripture says "that Christ is the light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world". He referred to the Scripture in Rev. 22: 11, 12, that declares that just before Christ comes and at the time when he closes his priestly work that "he that is filthy will be filthy still and he that is righteous will be righteous still" and that when Christ comes, instead of giving a chance for salvation, he comes to "reward every man according to his works.

The audience was very attentive, and the best of order was maintained. The tent is well lighted and attractive and situated as it is, by the river side, a nice, cool, refreshing breeze added comfort to the hour.

Mr. Johnston is well informed and has a large fund of Scripture at his command and seldom makes any mistake in his quoting of Scripture. This of course adds very greatly to the interest and many are now making it a favourite resort.

STONEY LAKE RIPPLES

Two lone fishermen sat in a boat, one of the experienced, weather-beaten sort, the other of the green variety, and as pale as plaster.

"Trim the boat," commanded the old head.

No response; and still the craft lay low on one side.

"Trim the boat, I sty," yelled the veteran.

Still no movement, save a slight twist of the eye balls in the head of the novice.

"Sit over then, darn you," and over he went.

The bathers of Sandy Beach are unanimous in their praise of Mr. J. Hampden Burnham for his great kindness in providing such a fine pier for diving from, namely, the thousand dollar cement wharf in the bay. If it should prove of no other use it will be handy for that purpose. But there seems to have been a slight omission in the plans: Mr. Burnahm should have seen that a tower was added for the special benefit of the high-diving circus performers.

A Kawartha Park resident nobly came to the rescue, however, by ordering a large number of shingles ahead of time, which the boys have piled high in the air. These, he will leave on the wharf all summer.

A fair maiden, who resides near one of the popular bathing beaches, decided to go for a swim. Donning her fashionably abbreviated costume she borrowed her neighbour's canoe to save parading in front of the numerous cottages along the shore. Being advised to seat herself in the middle she shoved off unto the bosom of the briny deep. Unfortunately the stubborn craft persisted in going around in circles, to the great amusement of the spectators on the bank. During her embarassing excitement she was heard to murmur:

"Ah, your rascal, keep your face straight."

SAILING RACE AT STONEY LAKE THIS YEAR WILL BE EXCITING

Will Probably Be Five Entries in Event This Year—Some Keen Competition.

STONEY LAKE NEWS

STONEY LAKE, July 27—"I think your lakes are beautiful," remarked a passenger on the steamer "Empress" on Saturday evening, as the trim little steamer wended its way among the islands of Stoney Lake. It was his initial visit to the Kawarthadom, and, needless to say, his first impression was a most favourable one. "What I have already seen," he added, "to my mind, is much prettier than the Thousand Islands, in the St. Lawrence. The natural beauty of the Islands here has not been superseded by artificiality as is the case of many of the St. Lawrence River Islands".

Stoney Lake truly has an appealing fascination, and the stranger to its shores is at once wrapped in its charms. These peculiar qualities of allurement are amply proved, if any such proof were necessary, in the fact that tourists came to Stoney Lake year after year for their vacations, never seeming to tire of its attractions.

All upward-bound boats on Saturday carried large numbers of holiday-seekers, all eager to participate in the pastimes of a popular summer resort.

During the past week the weather has been all that could be desired by those who own sailing dinghies, and enjoy a good stiff breese. On Saturday afternoon the sailing craft were much in evidence, the trim little dinghies travelling along at a goodly clip. Speaking of sailing, the annual Stoney Lake Regatta, which is billed for Monday, August 10th, promises plenty of excitement in the big sailing event of the day. The handsome trophy for this race will have some keen competitors this summer. For the past few years Harold Knapman's "Cygnet" has carried off the honours of the day but Mr. "Bob" Aikens of Toronto is confident that his new boat, the "Gull," will land the coveted silverware this time. It is also rumoured that Mr. "Bob" Shaw, champion of former years, will be an entry with his speedy sailboat, while Messrs. Munro's "Independence' and Mr. Basil Hall's sailboat will also be entries. With favourable weather conditions this ought to be the best of a varied programme of interesting aquatic events.

Quite a large crowd gathered at Juniper Island Saturday evening, and the opening selection of Mr. Asa Huycke's splendid orchestra soon brought the lovers of the Terpsechorean art to their feet. The new dances are increasing in popularity, the waltz and two-step being very rarely danced. Mr. Huycke will play at Stoney Lake three nights in the week for the balance of the season.

Mrs. Basil Hall entertained a large number of young people on Saturday evening at her Island. The spacious living room and verandahs were used for dancing while a huge bonfire and a marshmallow roast also provided plenty of amusement.

Mrs. Cross, Miss Helen Davidson, Mr. Arthur Field and Mr. Knight, Manager of the Bank of Ottawa, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hall.

The new Church of England, built this summer, is certainly appreciated by the large number of Anglicans at the Lakes. On Sunday morning the seating capacity of the edifice was completely taxed. Rev. A. W. McKenzie of Lakefield had charge of the service.

At Juniper Island Sunday morning the usual service was held, while in the evening a big crowd gathered at Mr. George Gillott's island for a song service. Solos were sung by Mrs. Wilmot of Belleville, and Miss Helen Husband of Hamilton.

Miss Helen Darnley of Toronto is the guest of Misses May and Wilma Nelson at Kawartha Park.

Miss Georgie Springer of Toronto, is staying with Mrs. Donnelly at Kawartha Park for a few weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Middeton are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Brock, "Shingle Shanty," Clear Lake.

Miss C. Clementi is spending a holiday with Miss Eleanor Collins at Cata Moran.

Mr. Wilfred Stratton was a week-end guest of Mr. Ken. Routley at Rockport.

Dr. Morison motored to Kawartha Park and spent the week-end with his family.

Miss Greta Pakenham of Toronto, formerly of Peterborough, is spending her holidays at her uncle's cottage, Upper Stoney Lake.

Mrs. Gladman and family are occupying "Woodside" Kawartha Park, for the balance of the summer.

F. Frank Mason Is Retiring From Floral Business

The old established florist business of Mr. Francis Mason has been taken over by Mr. Willie Denne. Mr. Frank Pine and Mr. Cecil Williamson, etc., will be conducted by them under the firm name of the Peterborough Floral Company, with Mr. Cable, Pine, in charge. An experienced lady from Toronto will have charge of the cut flowers, and designs, and should bring to Peterborough some excellent ideas. The new company will take over the business on August 1st, and Mr. Mason will remain with them until Sept. 1st.

The floral business has grown rapidly in Peterborough during the past years, and the Company, believing there is a still greater future for it, have purchased the business and taken a lease on the premises for a term of five years.

Mr. Mason is one of Peterborough's oldest business men and in retiring he is taking well-earned rest.

BRIGHT MUSIC AT ST. JOHN'S

Exceptionally bright were the musical services rendered by St. John's choir yesterday. At this season, when holidays are the rule, choirs of average strength are the exception, but St. John's choir evidently live up to their responsibilities. A jib by the motor at the start of the morning service served to bring out an effectie reserve force, as the beautiful hymn, "Pleasant Are Thy Courts Above," was ably sung without accompaniment. Two classic standard anthems were rendered. Novello's setting to the Collect for the day, "Lord of All Power and Might," and Sir John Goss' "O Taste and See How Gracious the Lord Is." It being the last Sunday in the month, the service was fully choral, Rev. James Price officiating in the evening. The choristers are engaged in rehearsing new selections.

Special prayers were offered for relatives and friends now at sea bound for Peterborough.

CARE OF INNER TUBES DESCRIBED

Tire Man Tells of Precautions to Insure Long Service For Them —The Care of Spares.

A pneumatic automobile tire is an envelope for the air pressure it retains. The casing provides the tensile strength necessary to sustain the internal pressure and to resist road wear.

"The function of the inner tube is to provide an air-tight lining for the casing," and F. A. Henderson, of one of the large tire companies, the other day. "The casing is the more expensive, but this does not prevent the saving that a few simple precautions with the tube will return.

"It ought to be borne in mind that the tube is the most delicate part of the tire. The tube in itself has comparatively no tensile strength; it simply flattens itself out against the inside of the casing. If ever the casing becomes too weak at any point, the tube blows out; in itself it cannot restrain the pressure of the inside air cushion.

"As the function of a tube is that of an air-tight lining for the casing, the most satisfactory tube is one that not only fulfills this requirement best but which contains its air-tight property longest. To remain air-tight the tube must be elastic as in service it is subject to continual fixing.

"In general, there are two classes of tubes on the market—pure gum and compounded. The compounded tube is usually thicker than the pure gum type and increased thickness is desirable because it decreases the susceptibility to pinching and puncturing. Pure gum tubes are usually not built as thick because of the unnecessary expense this would involve. But the extra thickness of the compounded tube introduces more disadvantages than this one advantage can compensate for.

Originally, a compounded tube is air-tight and highly elastic. But it can't retain these qualities long. The inorganic compounds it contains not only are good conductors of heat, so increasing the tendency to heat, but are themselves capable of deteriorating the rubber, especially when heated. It is difficult to repair a compounded tube satisfactorily. Its adhesion to pure gum vulcanized repairs is not perfect, and the heat necessary to cure the repair seriously injures the part of the tube affected.

"The inside of the casing should be clean. If any dirt is present, it chafes the tube, weakening it sometimes to the yielding point. Suppose, as often happens, a nail or a stone finds its way inside the casing. When the tube is inflated, it is flattened against the inside of the casing by the pressure and it is forced with equal pressure against these foreign substances. Frequently they cut the tube before it is fully inflated.

"Besides the inside of the casing, the tube also comes in contact with the rip between the beads of the casing. The rim accordingly should also be clean and smooth. The chief damage from rims, however, arises from their tndncy to rust. Rust, aside from from making the rim rough, eats into the tube. Perhaps, the most effective way to deal with this is to paint the rim with graphite paint. Whenever possible, this should be done. Flaps to be placed between the rim and tube offer protection from the rim and rust, and are of advantage provided the user is careful not to pit his tube between the edges of the flap and the head of the casing.

"Most motorists realize the damaging effect of running a tire flat after a puncture. The casing is quickly ruined beyond repair, but the tube is even more easily ruined. Driving a short distance with the tire flat will grind up the tire into pasty shreds. Again and again the motorist has been surprised when driving his car carefully on the best of roads to have an explosion announce a blow-out on one of his tires which, after his examination, proves to be an internal one. The casing has not been cut and bruised; it is in perfect condition. Still, the tube, without apparent cause, has split for the space of a foot and is worthless.

"The cause is to be found in the tire's previous history. The last time the tube was removed from the casing and then applied again, a small part of it was caught between the rim and the bead. On being inflated, too much strain was centred at this pinch. The weakening was gradual, but the eventual blow-out certain. The tube may also be pinched between the spreader at the base of the valve stem and stay bolts.

"Because of the manner in which regular clincher casings are applied to their solid rims, pinching at the edge of the bead is more frequent in the use of this type than any other. The elastic bead must be stretched over the side of the rim with a tire iron, and care is necessary to prevent a pinch. A final precaution is this: Protect your spare tubes. Usualy the spare tubes are folded and carried in the tool box. Here they come in contact with greases, oils, and tools which present sharp edges. The tube will frequently be shifted around during a search for some needed article. In time this shuffling around chafes and deeply wears the folded edges. Often a tube is actually worn out in a tool box before it is ever used. Tubes should always be carried in bags in the pasteboard with which thier maker furnishes them."

Gasoline Wasted By Majority of Owners

Aggregate During Year Runs Into Millions—Suggestions Offered

BY C. W. STIGER,
(President Stromberg Motor Device Company, Chicago.)

Gasoline costs some motor enthusiasts—who do not pay much attention to the myriad ways they can cut it down by a third or a half—approximately, $150 a year each. That is, perhaps, $50 or $60 wasted. There are about 1,000,000 cars of all types in America. The waste on all of them probably runs orev $23,000,000.

The figures given above are based on the fact that a man who loves motoring wil drive his car approximately 10,000 miles a year. His motor will consume somewhere between 600 and 800 gallons of gasoline, a third of which might be saved on the average car.

There are several secrets of gasoline saving which motorists generally do not know. Yet an engineer can take the car from which an ordinary driver gets only twelve miles to the gallon and in many cases make it yield eighteen to twenty miles to the gallon. This is a saving of one-third or better.

An instance came up the other day. We were quoting a certain manufacturer's six-cylinder models with carburetors. A layman driving the car could get out thirteen miles to the gallon. A careful driver stepped into the same car and secured nineteen and three-fifths miles to the gallon.

He pointed out to the less careful driver what it was in his driving, or, rather, what he didn't do, which accounted for the extra mileage. The layman got back into the car and got nineteen miles to the gallon. It was easy, too. Instead of "stepping on the throttle"—pushing it clear down and shooting the gas into the motor needlessly—the careful driver fed the gas fast, but steadily.

Some motorists do not utilise the wonderful power of momentum. They speed a car up to twenty-five or thirty miles an hour, feeding gas every second, then quickly put on the brakes, killing momentum that perhaps would take them one-sixth of a mile. This is done every day byowners who would avoid it if they would stop a moment to think.

In spite of this self-starting era, there are not two per cent of the motorists who have not the habit of letting their motors run idle at the curb, oftentimes for ten or fifteen minutes. A motor fairly devours gasoline vapour while idling, much more than at good speed.

KING GEORGE PAYS HIS RESPECTS TO KING WILLOW—Memories of the great centenary festival at Lord's. The centenary was greatly honoured by the presence of the King and Prince Albert. The occasion was a great match between M.C.C. South African heroes and the Rest of England. The South African side were put "badly in the cart." The King is seen talking to Mr. C. B. Fry, Mr. Douglas and Lord Hawke, Prince Albert is just behind His Majesty.

LAKEFIELD COMPLIMENT FOR NEW MAGISTRATE

The Lakefield News has the following regarding Mr. O. A. Langley, who, it is understood, succeeds County Magistrate Edmison:

Mr. O. A. Langley is well known, having resided and practiced law in Lakefield for nearly fourteen years, during which time he has appeared on one side or the other in most of the litigation from this vicinity and has earned a high reputation for skill and ability in the conduct of cases. While still possessed of much of the energy of youth, he will bring to his new task a full knowledge of the law and a ripe experience in the weighing and consideration of facts and their bearing upon the real issues involved. A man of integrity and uprightness, who exercises the greatest care in getting at the true merits in all matters, he should fill the office with credit to himself and the County.

DOMINION FRUIT CROP

The results of the severe frost in eastern Canada early in June are now quite evident. In New Brunswick most of the later varieties of apples were not injured, but earlier sorts, as well as plums and small fruits, were lessened. In the central portion of the Annapolis Valley early varieties on low-lying areas were badly reduced, in some cases almost a total failure. This badly affected section is in the low lands between Bridgetown and Kentville, but most of the orchards on the mountain slopes escaped injury. The apple season in Nova Scotia was between ten days and two weeks late in opening so the harvesting of the crop will probably be somewhat delayed on that account.

In British Columbia, too, conditions have been almost ideal, with possibly a little shortage of rain in the inland valleys during the latter part of June.

APPLES.

The June or July "drop" now being over, reports generally are not so favorable as those sent in a month ago. There is, however, a tendency on the part of growers to underestimate their crop at this time, just as they are inclined to overestimate it at the time of blossoming. In eastern Ontario the crop will equal that of last year, and in western Ontario will approach that of 1912. Nova Scotia, while suffering seriously from frost in some sections, will produce the best crop since 1911, if nothing further interferes. The crop of British Columbia will surpass that of 1913. It is therefore clear that the Canadian apple crop from present indication, will be above average, and with proper attention given to distribution and marketing, one that will return to the growers satisfactory figures.

PEARS AND PLUMS.

Except in some of the southern parts of the Province there will be only a very light crop of pears produced this year. In the Niagara district early varieties will also be light, but the late sorts are better. In other southern sections of the province the crop will not be by any means a good one. In British Columbia, in spite of a very heavy drop, the yield promises to be good.

Partly on account of the exceptionally heavy crop produced last year and partly on account of winter killing, plums are generally light in Ontario, Middlesex reports a medium crop. In the Niagara Peninsula the crop is short, and north of Lake Ontario practically a failure. Damsons are a medium crop in Quebec, and the native sorts heavy. Nova Scotia reports a medium crop. The yield in British Columbia will be variable, but will be generally satisfactory.

PEACHES.

In the Okanagan Valley reports are still favorable for early varieties and for Elbertas, with other late sorts not so promising. Peach leaf curl has destroyed practically the whole crop in the Kootenay Valley.

In Essex county and in the Lake Erie District of Kent, where there was no winter injury, there will be a full crop, which undoubtedly will be sold at high prices. The total output from these sections will not be great, though it is worthy of note that very extensive plantings are being made. The crop in Lambton county will be light.

TOMATOES AND CHERRIES.

Tomatoes will be cheap. In southern Ontario, where the acreage planted has been very extensive, the fruit has set heavily, and an immense total crop will be marketed. In Middlesex, Perth, Halton, and probably other of the inland counties, there was injury by frost about June 20th, reducing the crop in some instances to about 50 per cent. In British Columbia some growers place the total crop at over double that of last year.

Throughout western Ontario, and in all the southern counties, the cherry crop has been abundant. Markets have been receiving heavy shipments, and while prices have been at times almost exceptionally low, the demand has been steady. In Montreal on July 9th, Richmonds sold at 40 cents for six quart baskets and 65-75 cents for eleven quarts. In eastern Ontario and Quebec sweet cherries are a failure and sour varieties only a medium crop. The crop in Nova cotia will be from 75 per cent. to full. The sweet varieties dropped heavily in the Kootenay Valley of British Clumbia, and are only a medium crop. Sout varieties are reported full throughout the province.

Grapes promise to yield a very large crop in the commercial vineyards of Ontario. Concords and Niagaras are especially good, and red varieties, while not so heavy, will be an average crop.

INSECTS AND FUNGUS PESTS.

Aphis are reported as doing some injury in Lincoln and Norfolk counties, and are quite serious in orchards at the Pacific Coast and in the Okanagan Valley. Canker worm is quite prevalent in western Ontario. In the Province of Quebec the green apple worm has been generally serious, rendering a considerable quantity of fruit unfit for No. 1.

Fire blight is very serious in the Niagara Peninsula, especially on Greenings. A similar condition prevails in the Okanagan Valley of British Columbia. Peach leaf curl has practically ruined the peach crop in the Kootenay Valley and has spread over the entire Niagara district, where very little effort was made to check it. Apple scab is now developing in Ontario, Nova Scotia, and British Columbia, but it is not possible yet to say to what extent it will injure the quality of the fruit. Black knot is quite prevalent on plums and cherries in Nova Scotia.—Fruit Crop Report No. 2.

—Farm and Dairy.

To Fatten the Neck

Bend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the neck, and then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Repeat these movements until you are tired. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Sitting erect in a chair, bend the head from one side to the other, and then roll the head from one side to the other, and then roll the head to the right, left and forward. Another good position is to let the arms hang loosely at the side.

SMALL COMFORTS AID THE MODERN MOTORIST

The 1914 Cars Have Conveniences That Add Greatly to Pleasure of User.

No feature of motoring is more outstanding than the continued increase in comforts and luxuries which attend it. This year the tendency to incorporate in the car every conceivable device that can add to the joy of its use is more evident than ever. The name of the accessories of this type is to be found in the 1914 cars is legion. There are interior telephones for closed cars which do away with the "shouting" tube of old. You need no longer pull at a strap to close the window, simply turn a small handle and the sashless pane will take any elevation you desire. Rear seats and front seats can be adjusted to suit one's particular length of limb. When your tail light goes out a buzzer will apprise you of the fact. When you come to city streets from the country roads you can dim your brilliant searchlights by the turn of a switch.

A profusion of brass gewgaws no longer makes cars ridiculous, the necessary and inconvenient instruments—slightly increased in number by the application of elecricity to gasoline cars—are placed on the dash where they are right at hand, but not conspicuous. The back panel of the front seats hase been made very useful in some 1914 models. For instance, a disappearing compartment housed there, may hold a set of vacuum bottles or Milady's vanity case. Mere Man's smoking set may swing neatly out out of sight in this location. Great improvement has been wrought in the matter of extra seats. In many models they fold away either into the back of the front seat, or the side panels or the floor, so as to be completely out of the way when not wanted. Tops can be raised by one person without getting out of the car and curtains fall handily in place.

If you like to drive in cold weather you may have your car heated in one of severay ways by the hot exhaust or by the hot water from the engine. You may also keep your hands cosy by electrically warmed gloves. If your car is an electric, you may drive it from either the front or the rear seats and you may face the front arm chairs in any desired direction.

A luggage carrier for automobile which resembles a folded top, and is carried in the same position, being within easy access, has been patented by a Californian.

ALL IS MYSTERY

The secret things belong to Jehovah our God.—Deut. 29, 29.

Whichever way we turn we come upon mystery. All nature is mysterious; we ourselves, the flowers, birds, animals, sun, moon, stars—everything, in fact, that has been created has something unexplainable about it. The great students of astronomy mental philosophy, and all of the other sciences, after spending generations of investigation are able to grasp only a few facts and the rest remain unrevealed. Secret things are everywhere apparent.

The same is true of the spiritual world. "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform." The story is told of Augustine that he had been thinking for a long time about the Trinity and wondering how there could be three in one, but he was not able to solve the problem. One night he dreamed that he was beside the sea and saw a little child carrying water in a shell and pouring it into a little cavity that he had hollowed out in the sand. Augustine asked the child what he was doing, and the answer was: "I am going to put all the water of the sea into my little lake." Augustine smiled and said, "Foolish child; you never can get the great sea into your little lake." The child replied that it would be as easy as for Augustine to comprehend the great truth of the Trinity with his human mind.

We find just as many things in the world to-day to perplex us as did Augustine, and it is vain for us to hope to understand them for "these secret things belong to Jehovah our God." We sometimes hear people object to the Bible because there is so much mystery about it. Such questions as why we are not told more about heaven, how Christ's dying on the cross many, many years ago can save people to-day, and so forth, are raised, which are impossible to answer. These questions, however, are not the important ones in life, and we should endeavor to keep before us the idea that it is not necessary for us to have an answer to these questions in order to live as we should. All we have to do is to have faith and believe.

In speaking about the mysteries of life, a prominent writer says; "We need never be afraid of any mysteries, they are always full of divine love. Our part is just to do God's will as it is revealed to us. God's thoughts for us are all just, merciful and good. God's plan for every life is beauty and blessing. We may trust the secret things in God's hands without doubt or fear. But we must obey his revealed will as it is made known to us. That is the whole law of life—perfect trust and complete, unquestioning obedience."—R.M.M.

OWNER OF HUDDERSFIELD.

Romance of the Famous Clothing Town Goes Back to 1506.

"No ye, that we, in consideration of the sum of £965 9s. 9d. (value about £9,650 7s. 6d. to-day) have granted to William Ramsden, his heirs and assigns, all that our manor of Huddersfield, etc., and all our capital messuage or tenement, all Bay Hall, in Huddersfield, aforesaid."

In these terms Queen Elizabeth in 1599 conveyed to William Ramsden, an ancestor of Sir John William Ramsden, the greatest territorial magnate in the baronetage, who lately died, the land on which the busy manufacturing town of Huddersfield now stands.

It was a splendid investment for the Ramsden family, but a bad bargain for the Crown, for the charter has for three centuries past made Huddersfield the property of the Ramsden family. Two years ago it was stated that the yearly ground rent of the estate amounted to £130,000. The property, however, was apparently subject to heavy charges.

The afore-mentioned charter, however, was not the only royal favor bestowed upon the Ramsden family, in spite of the fact that John Ramsden, who succeeded the William Ramsden to whom the charter was granted, was committed to the Tower for high treason for taking up arms for Charles I., for the grandson of the latter was created a baronet by Charles II., and succeeded also by royal favor in adding enormously to the wealth of the family. The Merry Monarch in 1672 gave Sir John a charter to hold a market every Thursday in the town of Huddersfield, and the late baronet ultimately sold these market rights, with the site, to the corporation for £42,303.

Of course, the Ramsden family was only one of many families which at that time acquired riches and acres by royal favor. These were the days when kings and queens granted land and property to their favorites in the most easy-going and liberal manner, without any thought of the future rights of the state.

Altogether the Ramsden estates in Huddersfield and district comprise 4,500 acres, but, including other lands belonging to the family, the whole amounts to 150,000 acres.

It was not, however, until 1880 that the late Sir John Ramsden became absolutely sole lord of Huddersfield, for there was a small plot of land in the centre of the town which did not belong to the Ramsden family. The last owner of the little plot was the late Mr. Thomas Frith, a Quaker of Brighouse and a member of the Society of Friends. Frith could not be induced to part with this little plot of land, although he was offered a price by Sir John Ramsden which would have sufficed to pave the land with guineas. The old Quaker, however, refused to accept, saying, "Nay, not if thou sets them edgeways. Nay, Sir John, Huddersfield will belong to thee and me still."

When Mr. Frith died, in 1880, the testators conveyed the land to Sir John Ramsden, and he thus became sole owner of Huddersfield.

A Mathematical Wonder.

Intense interest is being shown in the arrival at Cambridge of Mr. S. Ramanujan, the young Hindu whose work is higher mathematics was brought to the notice of the Indian Government and who through the instrumentality of Mr. Godfrey H. Hardy, Fellow and Lecturer at Trinity College, Cambridge, has gone into residence at that college. Mr. Ramanujan, however, enters as an advanced student, and his work, therefore, will be mainly reading and research, and under these circumstances he will not go through the ordinary course of examinations nor will he be able to figure in the mathematical tripos. Mr. Hardy explains that Mr. Ramanujan, who is 26 years of age, and a native of Madras, made himself acquainted with him some fifteen months ago by forwarding to him a number of mathematical problems which he had proved. They were of so extraordinary a nature and so remarkable in their results that Mr Hardy was considerably interested and decided to get into closer communication with Mr. Ramanujan, who was at that time a clerk in the Port Trust at Madras.

JUST NOISY DRUNKS BEFORE POLICE MILL

The Principal Cause of Larger Police Forces Had Usual Representation This Morning

A Monday sheet would not be complete without the mentioning of sundry Sunday or Saturday drunks. Saturday night, for instance, William Hall Godfrey looked through the eye of John Barleycorn and made things interesting for a while in his East City residence. Just before the police arrived he scooted for the open leading the Thompson men a merry chase out the C.P.R. An employee hurried the police and finally dropped them at Godfrey's heels. The folks at home declined to make any charge. But for being drunk on a public street, he was fined $3 and $3.75 costs, or was given the alternative of 15 days holidaying on the hill.

All four cases were house cases, with the old mill grinding in the same old way. Wilfred Ireland, W. Parker and some other chap who hit it high out in the West, and contributed their license of $3, with or without fines as the case happened to be, not for the scandal they provided for the growing youth, but because they happened to be noisy or helpless. It would be cheaper for intentional drunks to hire guardians to help them home than permit themselves to wander helplessly on the streets after they have tanked to the limit.

Stock Markets

NEW YORK, July 27.—London sold between 50,000 and 80,000 shares for foreign accounts in New York market to-day.

NEW YORK, July 27 — Little change is noted in steel trade. The operations of leading Steel Companies are gradually working to a high level of the year under the influence of a better volume of business taken in the last six weeks. Last week railroads bought about 20,000 cars, and about 20 locomotives. Rail orders are light, only about six thousand tons being ordered.

NEW YORK, July 27. — The stock market is irregular and on a trading area; the trend of developments is more favorable. The New Haven situation has been an unsettling factor as have Rock Island, MOP and other weak roads; rumour that the former action may be compromised and if not it will not be settled for two or three years. Criminal prosecutions are approved by the thinking people of the financial district. Gold exports and the Ulster situation have been unsettling elements, but all are durable side we find .presidential— exaggerated. Turning to favourable side we find president revising his attitude and becoming a champion of business. The presidents' conferences with business men and his declaration in the Jones' withdrawal that the time has come for corporation and abandonment of class discrimination will go far in restoring confidence, especially as the conferences have resulted in modifications of the Anti-Trusts bills now pending in Congress. Market conditions: Scale buying of S.P., U.P. and U.S. is found. The Morgan specialties are finding N.Y.C., Erie, N.H., S.R., B.O., the Reid issues, L.V., R.I., Gould stock, M.O.P. and Den and C.O. K.Y. all show extensive shortages for professional account.—New York Financial Bulletin.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The stock market gave you a good chance to follow last night's advice, which was to cover at least half your shorts this morning. It is a very strong sign that the present downward movement is over for the time being. On Monday, March 23rd we advised you to sell stocks for a big break the next day the market turned weak again and kept going down. I hope you covered half your shorts. This week's decline was not due to the war news. I look for a rally of 2 to 4 points after which the decline will be resumed. Around [illegible] week's high prices the general list may again be sold, on any break Monday a few more shorts may be covered.

NEW YORK, July 27. — The rally gained headway in the late afternoon, although there was at no time the excitement or hiding for large blocks that would mark a hurried run on shorts to cover. Accumulation seemed to be going on a belief on the part of many people in the financial district that a war involving other countries than Austria and Servia would be avoided. There are many reports indicating a change for the better in European international politics, but some of them were of doubtful origin, and probably the factor which had most influence in producing better sentiment was the plan of Sir Edward Grey to secure co-operation among the powers to maintain the peace of Europe. Foreign houses sold about 80,000 shares of stock to-day.

ARCHIBALD BLUE DIES.

He Had Been Dominion Census Commissioner Since 1900.

OTTAWA, July 28. — Archibald Blue, chief officer of census and statistics for Canada, died rather suddenly at his residence here yesterday morning, aged 74. He had been ill for about two years, and his condition has been serious for the last three weeks, though death was not expected. He was a native of Oxford, Ont.

Originally a school teacher, he entered journalism. He was on the staff of The St. Thomas Journal from 1867 to 1879, when he became an editorial writer on The Toronto Globe, and in 1889 he went over to The Toronto World. In 1882 he organized and became secretary of the Ontario Bureau of Industries, and was appointed Provincial Deputy Minister of Agriculture in 1884. He afterwards acted as secretary of the commission of enquiry into the mineral resources of the province, and organized the bureau of mines, remaining at its head for nine years, until he came to Ottawa in 1900 as chief census commissioner for Canada.

DIARRHOEA and VOMITING

ATTACKED HER LITTLE BOY

He was Cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry

Mrs. Wesley Pringle, Dublin, Ont., writes: "It is with great pleasure I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. When our little boy was 3 years old he had the worst attack of diarrhoea and vomiting I ever saw. We called in our doctor, and he came eleven times from Tuesday morning until Saturday night, but still no change. We expected each moment to be the last of his suffering, as the doctor said he could do nothing more. Mr. Pringle was going up town Saturday night and was advised to try your great and wonderful medicine. He got a bottle, and about 9 o'clock the first dose was given, and was kept up as directed, and when the doctor came on Saturday he said, 'what a wonderful change. Why, your little boy is going to get better!' Then we told him what we had given him. He said, 'keep right on, he is doing well.' I often think, as I look at my boy, growing to be a man, what great thanks I owe to Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry." It has been on the market for 67 years, so you do not experiment when you buy it.

Insist on having "Dr. Fowler's". There is nothing "Just as Good." Price, 35 cents. Manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Nova Scotia Was Shaken

Earth Tremors Badly Scared the Residents of Maritime Province —No Damage

IN SOUTHERN PART

HALIFAX, N.S., July 28.—Earth tremors, which violently shook the buildings and so alarmed the inhabitants that in one place they fled from their houses, fearing immediate collapse, were felt at noon yesterday in the southwestern shore of Nova Scotia, from Mahone Bay to Shelburne.

The disturbances occurred a few minutes before noon, and were in most places felt in two distinct shocks.

The earthquakes came from an easterly direction, and evidently spent their force at Shelburne, where only one shock was felt, and that of less duration than elsewhere.

Mahone Bay, Maders Cove, The Narrows, all reported shocks severe enough to rattle the dishes.

At Bridgewater the shock was very severe, but no damage was reported. The distance between Mahone Bay and Shelburne is about 100 miles. At Sable River, which is half way between these two places, the shock was so severe that pictures were disarranged on the walls, and houses shook so violently that people rushed into the open in terror, fearing their buildings would collapse. It was in this vicinity, a radius of twenty miles; that the seismic disturbances were greatest.

At Liverpool, which is the next important station east of Sable River, on the Halifax & Southwestern Railway, there were two distinct shocks, one of twelve seconds' and another following immediately of six seconds' duration. All buildings in this town were more or less shaken, but no damage was reported.

"MASSACRE" DENOUNCED.

Nationalist Town Councils In Ireland Condemn Authorities.

DUBLIN, July 28.—Rioting broke out again last night, but subsided without serious results. The rumor went about that the Scottish Borderers would entrain at the Amiens Street Station. A great crowd, for the most part from the slums, surrounded the station and amused themselves by stoning the street cars.

Six hundred volunteers paraded through the streets, a crowd of 4,000 following them, marching in step and singing.

Feeling runs high throughout Nationalist Ireland. Town councils are adopting resolutions denouncing "the massacre." The soldiers of the Limerick and Kilkenny garrisons are confined to barracks, and concerts by military bands in several towns have been cancelled.

The Lord Mayor of Dublin has called a meeting of the magistrates to consider the action of the Castle authorities in calling out the police and soldiers without consulting the city officials. The police threaten to strike unless those members of the department who were dismissed for disobedience of orders are reinstated.

It is announced here that Sir John Ross, the police commissioner, resigned as a protest against the suspension of Deputy Commissioner Harrell. The Nationalists are delighted, as Commissioner Ross was unpopular.

GREY URGES MEDIATION WHILE SERVIANS BLOW UP BRIDGE ACROSS THE DANUBE

War Talk and Intervention Heard in Various Capitals of Europe —Greece Will Help Servia.

BRITISH FLEET COALING

LONDON, July 28. — An engagement between Austrians and Servians is reported to have occurred on the Danube, but no details are available, and it is not considered to have been of importance. As far as the censorship permits, it is known that Austria has not yet opened her military operations.

Meanwhile, diplomacy is proceeding with energy along two separate lines to avert, if possible, and, if impossible, to localize the war.

First, Sir Edward Grey the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has proposed to the powers a scheme for joint mediation, which, it is stated, France and Italy have already accepted. Germany has not yet replied, and her acceptance is regarded as doubtful.

Sir Edward Grey explained in the House of Commons his idea, which was that four Powers—Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy—should co-operate in an endeavor to arrange the dispute between Austria and Servia on the basis of Servia's reply to the Austrian ultimatum. This reply he regarded as the foundation on which friendly and impartial powers should be able to arrange an acceptable settlement.

Should the British Foreign Secretary's efforts fail to avert war, it is expected that he will endeavor by some means to prevent complications by confining the hostilities to Austria and Servia.

The second line of diplomatic endeavor, from which even more is hoped to-day, is taking place at St. Petersburg between the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Serghus Sazonoff, and the Austrian ambassador. It is understood that M. Sazonoff is making a strenuous effort to bring about a direct understanding, and that a solution on these lines would be more agreeable to Germany than Great Britain's conference proposal.

The Russian Emperor has postponed his intended visit to Finland in order to remain in the capital during the crisis. It is said that Russia is urging Servia to give Austria the utmost possible satisfaction.

An extremely warlike spirit prevails in Vienna, where the evening papers declare that the Servians are only seeking evasions, and that therefore it is impossible for the Austrian Government to retreat. Further, they hint that even should Servia accept the Austrian ultimatum u conditionally and offer to pay the cost of Austria's mobilization. Austria now would be compelled to ask for quite new guarantees.

Big Bridge Blown Up.

VIENNA, July 28. — The Militarische Rundschau repeats the report that the Servians have blown up the great bridge across the Danube between Belgrade and Semlin. It is stated that the explosives in the bridge were discharged by pressing an electric button in Belgrade. It is also said that Servia has withdrawn her troops on the Albanian frontier.

Montenegro is reported to have mobilised her army. Great activity is being displayed in Loucen, a Montenegrin fortress overlooking the Austrian town of Cattaro. King Nicholas and his Government have gone to Podgoritza.

British Fleet Coaling.

PORTLAND, Eng., July 28. — The first fleet of the British navy has been recalled here by wireless telegraph and is now coaling. The fleet, which comprises 26 first-class battleships and a large number of cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers, had left here on the annual exercises and before the receipt of the Admiralty's order not to disperse. All leave has been stopped and it is understood that the fleet will proceed to the North Sea.

Russian Strike Over.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 28.—The workmen in the Russian capital who had been on strike, yesterday decided to resume work in order to emphasize the approval of the Russian Government's support of Servia. They made patriotic demonstrations in the streets and sang the Russian National Anthem.

Greece Will Help Servia.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 28.—The Greek Minister here yesterday declare that in the event of war between Austria-Hungary and Servia, Greece would be compelled to despatch 100,000 troops to the assistance of Servia.

Russian Harbors Mined.

LONDON, July 28—A special newspaper despatch from Copenhagen yesterday says several of the Russian harbors on the Baltic Sea have been mined.

Foreign Office Gloomy.

PARIS, July 28.—The impression at the French Foreign Office is that the semi-official note issued in Vienna explaining why Austria-Hungary could not accept the Servian reply, indicates that there has been no improvement in the situation.

The sense of smartness is sure to make a man shallow.

TO INVESTIGATE DUBLIN AFFAIR

Home Rule Settlement Delayed by Tragedy in Capital City

INDIGNATION EXPRESSED

LONDON, July 28.—The first effect of the Dublin tragedy has been to smash Premier Asquith's plans for taking up the amending bill to-day. The Premier announced yesterday that the matter had been indefinitely postponed. The Irish members are so exasperated over the killing of four persons and the wounding of many others in the clash Sunday between the regular troops and the Nationalist Volunteers, that they are in no frame of mind to grant any concessions to Ulster. The Laborites and many Liberals support them.

The Government announced in the House of Commons yesterday that Deputy Police Commissioner Harrell, who ordered out the troops, had been suspended and that his superior, Commissioner Sir John Ross, who expressed a desire to share the responsibility, had resigned his office.

A special inquiry will be held, probably by judicial commission. In the meantime, the demand for the removal of the Scottish Borderers from Dublin has not been granted, largely because an attempt to march them out would be the signal for attacks by the mobs. They will remain prisoners in their barracks until the anger of the people has cooled.

The Nationalist members of Parliament held a meeting yesterday afternoon and showed more animus against the castle than the Government. They consider Viscroy Aberdeen's official family prejudiced against the Nationalists.

A heated discussion was started in the House of Commons by John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, who demanded an impartial inquiry into the conduct of the troops, and their punishment, if the shooting was not justified. He demanded also that the regiment should be removed from Ireland, that the proclamation against the importation of arms into Ireland should be withdrawn because it constituted a serious danger and that the law be administered impartially.

He called for the suspension of Sir John Ross, the police commissioner of Dublin, and said: "We had an experience of him in the Larkin riots. He is unfit to hold his office. He is a well-known political partisan."

Mr. Redmond compared "this monstrous business" with the parades of armed volunteers in Belfast. "To such a state of impotence has the British Government been reduced in Ireland," he said, "that a subordinate official is able to call in soldiers without consulting the executive of the country."

He expressed the hope that the Irish people would not blame the troops too much, and concluded amid great cheers: "Four-fifths of the Irish people will not submit any longer to be bullied and punished for conduct which is allowed to go scot free in Ulster by another section of their fellow-countrymen."

WORM PEST TURNING.

It Will Be Gone By Early Next Week Say Experts.

TORONTO, July 28. — Before the first days of next week the army worm plague will have practically ended, according to a statement made yesterday by the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, based on reports from district representatives of the Department. These officials state that already the worm is entering the papal state and that before many days its activity as a caterpillar will have ceased.

In discussing the inroads of the army worm this month, the Deputy Minister said that it had done more or less harm in nearly all parts of agricultral Ontario. Huntsville is the last place to report discovery of the army worm. Word from there came to the Department yesterday.

The digging ditches and scattering poison were the usual methods used to kill the worm. Northumberland County devised a novel plan. The army had to cross over a railway track and the farmers put coal tar on one of the rails. The worms stuck fast to it and the train did the rest.

Record Cargo Discharged.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., July 28. —A new record was established at the Government elevator here yesterday when the steamers, J. T. Hutchinson and F. P. Miller with cargoes of 200,000 bushels each were discharged between the hours of 7 a.m. and 6 p.m., exactly 10 hours.

GERMANY KEEPS OUT.

Her Present Policy In War Crisis Is Against Intervention.

BERLIN, July 28.—Important conferences were held at Potsdam yesterday afternoon between the German Emperor, the Imperial Chancellor Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, and the strategic heads of the army and navy, to determine definitely the German policy in the crisis.

The British and French ambassadors, Sir Edward Goschen and Jules Cambon, called on the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Herr Von Jagow, with communications from their Governments.

Authentic information has been received in Berlin that Russia, though not mobilizing her army, is taking certain precautionary military measures.

Runs on the savings banks by small depositors occurred in various parts of Germany.

The British Ambassador made no concrete proposals. It is understood he told the German Foreign Minister that Great Britain's object was not to intervene in the Austro-Servian controversy which, he declared, was not Great Britain's affair, but to endeavor to find a basis on which Great Britain, France and Germany, by action at Vienna and St. Petersburg, could prevent the spread of the conflict.

The French Ambassador proposed that Germany use her influence at Vienna in favor of moderation. He was informed that Germany was perfectly willing to let the other powers try, but as Austria's ally, could not interfere with Austria's freedom of action.

The official announcement of Russia that no mobilization of her army had been ordered was supplemented by trustworthy information from Warsaw, that among the precautionary military means taken were the withdrawal of troops in Poland from the immediate frontiers of Germany and Austria for concentration in the interior, the recall of the Russian troops from their summer camps and the cancelling of leave of absence of all officers.

CHAPTER IV.

THE CITY OF DEATH.

Presently Beatrice grew calmer. For though grief and terror still weighed upon her soul, she realized that this was no time to yield to any weakness—now when a thousand things were pressing for accomplishment, if their own lives, too, were not presently to be snuffed out in all this universal death.

"Come, come," said Stern reassuringly. "I want you, too, to get a complete idea of what has happened. From now on you must know all, share all, with me." And, taking her by the hand, he led her along the crumbling and uncertain platform.

Together, very cautiously, they explored the three sides of the platform still unchoked by ruins.

Out over the incredible mausoleum of civilisation they peered. Now and again they fortified their vision by recourse to the telescope.

Nowhere, as he had said, was any slightest sign of life to be discerned. Nowhere a thread of smoke arose; nowhere a sound echoed upward.

Dead lay the city, between its rivers, whereon now no sail glinted in the sunlight, no tug puffed vehemently with plumy jets of steam, no liner idled at anchor or nosed its slow course out to sea.

The Jersey shore, the Palisades, the Bronx and Long Island all lay buried in dense forests of conifers and oak, with only here and there some skeleton mockery of a steel structure jutting through.

The islands in the harbour, too, were thickly overgrown. On Ellis, no sign of the immigrant station remained. Castle William was quite gone. And with a gasp of dismay and pain, Beatrice pointed out the fact that no longer Liberty held her bronze torch aloft.

Save for a black, misshapen mass protruding through the treetops, the huge gift of France was no more.

Fringing the waterfront, all the way round, the mournful remains of the docks and piers lay in a mere sodden jumble of decay, with an occasional hulk sunk alongside.

Even over these wrecks of liners, vegetation was growing rank and green. All the wooden ships, barges and schooners had utterly vanished.

The telescope showed only a stray, lolling mast of steel, here or yonder, thrusting up from the desolation, like a mute appealing hand raised to a Heaven that responded not.

"See," remarked Stern, "uptown almost all the buildings seem to have crumbled in upon themselves, or to have fallen outward into the streets. What an inconceivable tangle of detritus those streets must be!

"And, do you notice the park hardly shows at all? Everything's so overgrown with trees you can't tell where it begins or ends. Nature has her revenge at last, on man!"

"The universal calm, made real," said Beatrice. "Those rather clearer lines of green, I suppose, must be the larger streets. See how the avenues stretch away and away, like ribbons of green velvet!"

"Everywhere that roots can hold at all. Mother Nature has set up her flags again. Hark! What's that?"

A moment they listened intently. Up to them, from very far, rose a wailing cry—tremulous, long-drawn, formidable.

"Oh! Then there are people, after all?" faltered the girl, grasping Stern's arm.

He laughed.

"No, hardly!" he answered. "I see you don't know the wolf-cry. I didn't till I heard it in the Hudson Bay country, last winter—that is, last winter plus X. Not very pleasant, is it?"

"Wolves! Then—there are—"

"Why not? Probably all sorts of game on the island now. Why, shouldn't there be? All in Mother Nature's stock-in-trade, you know.

"But come, come, don't let that worry you. We're safe for the present. Time enough to consider hunting later. Let's creep around here to the other side of the tower, and see what we can see."

Silently she acquiesced. Together they reached the southern part of the platform, making their way as far as the jumbled rocks of the fallen railing would permit.

Very carefully they progressed, fearful every moment lest the support break beneath them and hurl them down along the sloping side of the pinnacle to death.

"Look!" bade Stern, pointing. "That very long green line there used to be Broadway. Quite a respectable Forest of Arden now, isn't it?" He swept his hand far outward.

"See those steel cages, those tiny far-off ones with daylight shining through? You know them—the Park Row, the Singer, the Woolworth, and all the rest. And the bridges, look at those!"

She shivered at the desolate sight. Of the Brooklyn Bridge only the towers were visible.

The watchers, two isolated castaways on their island in the sea of uttermost desolation, beheld a dragging mass of wreckage that drooped from these towers on either shore, down to the sparkling flood.

The other bridges, newer and stronger far, still remained standing. But even from that distance Stern could quite plainly see, without the telescope, that the Williamsburg Bridge had "buckled" downward and that the farther span of the Blackwell's Island Bridge was in ruinous disrepair.

"How horrible, how ghastly is all this waste and ruin!" thought the engineer. "Yet, even in their overthrow, how wonderful are the works of man!"

A vast wonder seized him as he stood there gazing; a fierce desire to rehabilitate all this wreckage, to set it right, to start the wheels of the world-machinery running once more.

At the thought of his own powerlessness a bitter smile curled his lips.

Beatrice seemed to share something of his wonder.

"Can it be possible," whispered she, "that you and—and I—are really like Macaulay's lone watcher of the world-wreck on London Bridge?"

"That we are actually seeing the thing so often dreamed of by prophets and poets? That 'All this mighty heart is lying still' at last—for ever? The heart of the world, never to beat again"

He made no answer, save to shake his head; but fast his thoughts were running.

So then, could he and Beatrice, just they two, be in stern reality the sole survivors of the entire human race? That race for whose material welfare he had, once on a time, done such tremendous work?

Could they be destined, he and she, to witness the closing chapter in the long, painful, glorious Book of Evolution? Slightly he shivered and glanced round.

Till he could adjust his reason to the facts, could learn the truth and weigh it, he knew he must not analyse too closely; he felt he must try not to think. For that way lay madness!

Far out she gazed.

The sun, declining, shot a broad glory all across the sky. Purple and gold and crimson lay the light-bands over the breast of the Hudson.

Dark blue the shadows streamed across the ruined city with its crowding forests, its blank-staring windows and sagging walls, its thousands of gaping vacancies, where wood and stone and brick had crumbled down—the city where once the tides of human life had ebbed and flowed, roaring resistlessly.

High overhead drifted a few rosy clouds, part of the changeless nature which alone did not repel or mystify these two beleaguered waifs, these chance survivors, this man, this woman, left alone together by the hand of fate.

They were dazed, fascinated by the splendour of that sunset over a world devoid of human life, for the moment giving up all efforts to judge or understand.

Stern and his mate peered closer, down at the interwoven jungles of Union Square, the leafy frond-masses that marked the one-time course of Twenty-third Street, the forest in Madison Square, and the truncated column of the tower where no longer Diana turned her huntress bow to every varying breeze.

They heard their own hearts beat. The intake of their breath sounded strangely loud. Above them, on a broken cornice, some resting swallows twittered.

All at once the girl spoke.

"See the Flatiron Building over there!" said she. "What a hideous wreck!"

From Stern she took the telescope, adjusted it, and gazed minutely at the shattered pile of stone and metal.

Blotched as with leprosy stood the walls, whence many hundreds of blocks had fallen into Broadway, forming a vast moraine that for some distance choked that thoroughfare.

In numberless places the steel frame peered through. The whole roof caved in, crushing down the upper storeys, of which only a few sparse upstanding metal beams remained.

The girl's gaze was directed at a certain spot which she knew well.

"Oh, I can even see—into some offices on the eighteenth floor!" she cried. "There, look-" And she pointed. "That one near the front! I—I used to know—"

She broke short off. In her trembling hands the telescope sank. Stern saw that she was very pale.

"Take me down!" she whispered. "I can't stand it any longer—I can't possibly! The sight of that wrecked office! Let's go down where I can't see that!"

Gently, as though she had been a frightened child, Stern led her round the platform to the doorway, then down the crumbling stairs and so to the wreckage and dust-strewn confusion of what had been his office.

And there, his hand upon her shoulder, he bade her still be of good courage.

"Listen now, Beatrice," said he. "Let's try to reason this thing out together, let's try to solve this problem like two intelligent human beings.

"Just what's happened, we don't know; we can't know yet a while, till I investigate. We don't even know what year this is.

"Don't know whether anybody else is still alive, anywhere in the world. But we can find out—after we've made provision for the immediate present, and formed some rational plan of life.

"If all the rest are gone, swept away, wiped out clean like figures on a slate, then why we should have happened to survive whatever it was that struck the earth, is still a riddle far beyond our comprehension."

He raised her face to his, noble despite all its grotesque disfigurements; he looked into her eyes as though to read the very soul of her, to judge whether she could share this fight, could brave this coming struggle.

"All these things may yet be answered. Once I get the proper data for this series of phenomena, I can find the solution, never fear!

"Some vast world-duty may be ours, far greater, infinitely more vital than anything that either of us has ever dreamed. It's not our place, now, to mourn or fear! Rather it is to read this mystery, to meet it and to conquer!"

Through her tears the girl smiled up at him, trustingly, confidingly. And in the last declining rays of the sun that glinted through the window-pane, her eyes were very beautiful.

DUSTBANE
Makes All The Difference!
ORDINARY sweeping stirs up clouds of fine, gray, microbe-laden dust, which settles back on furniture, curtains, picture-frames and wherever else a minute particle can find a resting place. It is breathed into the lungs of the people in the house, carrying danger of disease.
Sweeping with Dustbane is vastly different. The clean, antiseptic powder is propelled ahead of the broom, falling on and absorbing all the dust before it gets a chance to fly. All the germs are killed, the air is purified, and floors and carpets are left fresh and clean. There is practically no dusting to be done afterward, and most of that work is saved.
Every woman ought to know how Dustbane makes sweeping easier and more healthful. You can test Dustbane in your own home, free of cost, through our SURPRISED THE CAPTIVE.

An Incident That Aroused Varied Emotions All Around.

In his "Reminiscences" General Basil W. Duke of the Confederate army tells of an incident he witnessed just after the close of the war:

"One morning about 9 o'clock I was sitting on the platform of a station waiting for my train when my attention was attracted to a squad of Federal soldiers who had evidently been on guard during the night, but were now getting their breakfast. They were well supplied with rations and seemed in high spirits.

"Just then I caught sight of a lank, hungry looking fellow who was unmistakably an ex-Confederate. He wore a ragged, faded gray jacket, with the buttons cut off, a pair of most dilapidated blue trousers and an old canvas haversack, as empty as extra-sidereal space, hung around his neck. If he had eaten a square meal within six months appearances were deceitful. He was partially hidden behind a cotton bale, whence he watched the Yankee spread with eyes that threatened to protrude across the intervening distance.

"About the time I saw him the Yanks' also caught sight of him. They held a short consultation; then one of them sprang up, started toward him and shouted out:

"'Hello, reb! Come this way; we want you!'

"For some reason—perhaps because I was sick and peevish—I conceived the idea that they wanted to arrest him, and my blood boiled with indignation at so totally an unprovoked act of oppression.

"The 'Johnnie' evidently entertained the same opinion, for he began a rather rapid retreat. A fresh summons, however, re-enforced by a volley of threats, induced him to turn and approach the party, with an attempted dignity of demeanor that was ludicrous compared with his hasty retrograde movement.

"When he reached the spot where the 'grub' was the Yanks seized him, made him sit down and began to exert themselves to appease his manifest hunger. I have known some extraordinary feeders, but I honestly believe I have never seen any other two men eat as much as that fellow did. He kept at it steadily for not less than an hour, while the Yanks aided and encouraged him to the utmost. He drank six tin cupfuls of coffee. He swelled visibly, and I wondered how his frail garments stood the tension.

The Gallery's Verdict.

In the old days the proprietor of a music hall always used to walk up and down the center gangway during the performances and restrain the exuberance of his patrons. One night a lady singer began a doleful ballad in a still more doleful voice, and at once received "the bird" from the gallery. "That'll do, boys," said the proprietor. "Order, please! Give the artiste a chance." But when the performance was finished he took off his hat, bowed to the gallery and remarked, "I beg pardon, you were quite right."—London Express.

An Episode of New York Society

By RUTH GRAHAM

When John Kenworthy went to New York he had made a big fortune in railroads. He had cleaned up some fifteen or twenty millions and was a director in many roads. He was thirty five years old when he struck the metropolis, and it occurred to him that he would like to see society. Society is not to be seen without a ticket of admission any more than a theatrical performance. Kenworthy, remembering that the players of Vanity Fair must have big salaries and that such salaries must be contributed by those who are able to pay, concluded to invest a small quantum of his income in the show.

An officer of one of the companies in which Kenworthy was interested who knew New York well, being applied to for information, gave it thus:

"There are both rich and poor in the charmed circle. The poor usually hold their right of entrance by inheritance; the rich have bought their way in. There are many poor families that if they could sell their social birthright would reap a fortune by the transaction. They can't do that, and many of them would not do it if they could. But they can help the outsiders to get inside for a consideration and will do so provided they have confidence in the discretion of the outsider."

"I see," said Kenworthy. "How would such a transaction be managed?"

"I will introduce you to a young man whose family has been in the swim for 150 years. He will take charge of your entry into society if it is intimated that he will be given a perfunctory position at a salary of $20,000 a year in the office of one of your railroads—keeper of the securities, with deputies to guard them."

Kenworthy was introduced to George de Rotter, whose ancestors came to New York in 1630 and opened a dye house. De Rotter was appointed sixth vice president of a railroad, with duties requiring his attention once a week for two hours. His salary was to be $20,000 a year for at least one year. He was to lift Mr. Kenworthy up the steps—one step at a time—of the temple of fashion.

One evening De Rotter announced to Mrs. de Lawney that he was arranging a dinner for a gentleman from the west and asked permission to put her name and that of her daughter Marguerite on the list of invited guests. Mrs. de Lawney graciously accepted, and when De Rotter had gone she found a thousand dollar bill between the leaves of a book he had been reading while waiting for her to come down to receive him.

This was not the first such transaction that had taken place between them. But Marguerite, a high bred and truly refined scion of good old stock, was not cognisant of them. She knew the family finances were low and wondered how her mother managed to keep their heads above the surface. Mr. de Rotter, though he relied on the discretion of his employer, thought it worth while to tell him that if Marguerite de Lawney should hear that she had been paid to attend his entertainment it would produce a commotion.

This statement made an impression on Kenworthy. He desired to buy persons, but persons who were not to be purchased had for him an indescribable charm. He directed De Rotter to assign Miss de Lawney to the host for a dinner companion and when the affair came off was much struck with the lady. Many of those who knew that they were hired to be present at his functions, considering that they had done their part in accepting his invitation, gave him an icy shoulder. Here was one who supposed that she was being entertained as a guest, one whose bearing showed conclusively that she was to the manner born, who smiled on him. Kenworthy passed the happiest evening of his life, and it seemed that Miss de Lawney had really enjoyed herself. If so she was the only one present except the host who had.

De Rotter was a skillful conductor, and Kenworthy was discreet. He knew that his guests were paid to attend his functions, and they—excepting Miss de Lawney—knew that they were paid. Kenworthy continued his attentions to the young lady and in time proposed. So great was her pain at refusing him that he really felt sorry for her.

Having seen all he wished to see of New York society, he packed up his traps to go back to the west. Before leaving he wrote a note to De Rotter especially enjoining on him, as he valued a second year's salary, to keep from Miss de Lawney the fact that payment had been made for attendance at his functions. De Rotter had been sharp enough to see that Kenworthy had fallen in love. He inclosed Kenworthy's note to Mrs. de Lawney in one of his own, in which he informed her that he believed her daughter had thrown away millions.

By an accident this note fell into Marguerite's hands. She wrote a note full of grief and mortified pride to the man who had asked her to be his wife. He returned to New York for the purpose of calming her.

"I never dreamed," she said, "that the society of my ancestors had sunk so low. They were what I supposed I was till today."

Kenworthy again set about winning her and finally succeeded. He took her west with him, and she has never since seen her native city.

At the Bargain Sale.

"See," said his wife proudly: "I saved 30 cents by coming here today."

"Yes," growled her husband, "and I lost $5 worth of time coming with you."

When the nerve force expended in the day's work and in the act of living is not replenished by restful sleep at night you have cause to be alarmed, as physical bankruptcy stares you in the face. This letter directs you to the most satisfactory cure for sleeplessness.

Mr. Dennis Mackin, Maxton, Sask., writes:—"I have just finished using the sixth box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I must say that when I commenced using it my nerves were so bad that I could scarcely get any sleep. I would lie in bed nearly all night without sleep, and anyone who has this trouble knows the misery of sleepless nights. The Nerve Food helped me from the start, and has built up my nervous system wonderfully. I now enjoy good, sound sleep, and instead of feeling tired in the morning I am strong and healthy, and well fitted for my daily work."

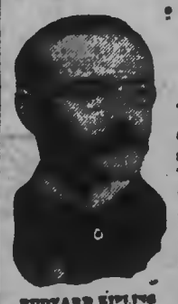
THE MAN WHO WOULD BE KING

By Rudyard Kipling

* *



RUDYARD KIPLING

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Irvin S. Cobb, was "The Man Who Would Be King" by Rudyard Kipling. Three other noted authors think this is the best short story.

IRVIN S. COBB

PART I.

THE beginning of everything was in a railway train upon the road to Mhow from Ajmir. There had been a deficit in the budget, which necessitated traveling not second class, which is only half as dear as first class, but by intermediate, which is very awful indeed.

My particular intermediate happened to be empty till I reached Nasirabad, when a huge gentleman in shirt sleeves entered and, following the custom of intermediates, passed the time of day. He was a wanderer and a vagabond like myself, but with an educated taste for whisky. He told tales of things he had seen and done, of out of the way corners of the empire into which he had penetrated and of adventures in which he risked his life for a few days' food.

My friend wanted to send a telegram back from the next station to Ajmir, which is the turning off place from the Bombay to the Mhow line as you travel westward. My friend had no money beyond 8 annas, which he wanted for dinner, and I had no money at all owing to the hitch in the budget before mentioned.

"Did you say you are traveling back along this line within any days?" asked he.

"Within ten," I said.

"Can't you make it eight?" said he. "Mine is rather urgent business."

"I can send your telegram within ten days if that will serve you," I said.

"I couldn't trust the wire to fetch him, now I think of it. It's this way: He leaves Delhi on the 23d for Bombay. That means he'll be running through Ajmir about the night of the 24th."

"But I'm going into the Indian desert," I explained.

"Well and good," he said. "You'll be changing at Marwar Junction to get into Jodhpore territory—you must do that—and he'll be coming through Marwar Junction in the early morning of the 24th by the Bombay mail. Can you be at Marwar Junction that time? I would take it more than kind of you if you was to come out of central India in time to catch him at Marwar Junction and say to him, 'He has gone south for the week.' He'll know what that means. He's a big man with a red beard, and a great swell he is. You'll find him sleeping like a gentleman with all his luggage round him in a second class compartment. I ask you as a stranger—going to the west," he said with emphasis.

"Where have you come from?" said I.

"From the east," said he, "and I am hoping that you will give him the message on the square—for the sake of my mother as well as your own."

Englishmen are not usually softened by appeals to the memory of their mothers, but for certain reasons, which will be fully apparent, I saw fit to agree.

"I'll give the message if I catch him," I said, "and for the sake of your mother as well as mine I'll give you a word of advice. Don't try to run the Central India states just now as the correspondent of the Backwoodsman. There's a real one knocking about here, and it might lead to trouble."

"Thank you," said he simply. "And when will the swine be gone? I can't starve because he's ruining my work. I wanted to get hold of the Degumber Rajah down here about his father's widow and give him a jump."

"What did he do to his father's widow, then?"

"Filled her up with red pepper and slippered her to death as she hung from a beam. I found that out myself, and I'm the only man that would dare going into the state to get hush money for it. But you'll give the man at Marwar Junction my message?"

He got out at a little roadside station. When I left the train I did business with divers kings, and in eight days passed through many changes of life.

Then I headed for the great Indian desert upon the proper date as I had promised, and the night mail set me down at Marwar Junction.

The Bombay mail from Delhi makes a short halt at Marwar. She arrived as I got in, and I had just time to hurry to her platform and go down the carriages. There was only one second class on the train. I slipped the window and looked down upon a flaming red beard, half covered by a railway rug.

"Tickets again?" said he.

"No," said I. "I am to tell you that he is gone south for the week. He is gone south for the week!"

The train had begun to move out. The red man rubbed his eyes. "He has gone south for the week!" he repeated. "Now, that's just like his impidence. Did he say that I was to give you anything? 'Cause I won't."

"He didn't," I said and dropped.

Later on I reflected that two gentlemen like my friends could not do any good if they foregathered and personated correspondents of newspapers, and might, if they "stuck up" one of the little rat trap states of central India or southern Rajputana, get themselves into serious difficulties. I therefore took some trouble and succeeded, so I was later informed, in having them headed back from the Degumber borders.

Then I became respectable and returned to an office where there were no kings and no incidents except the daily manufacture of a newspaper. A newspaper office seems to attract every conceivable sort of person, to the prejudice of discipline. But that is the amusing part of the year. There are other six months wherein none ever come to call and the thermometer walks inch by inch up to the top of the glass.

It was in that season, and a remarkably evil season, that the paper began running the last issue of the week on Saturday night, which is to say Sunday morning, after the custom of a London paper.

One Saturday night it was my pleasant duty to put the paper to bed alone. It was a pitchy black night, as stifling as a June night can be, and the loo, the red hot wind from the westward, was moaning among the tinder dry trees and pretending that the rain was on its heels. It was a shade cooler in the pressroom than the office, so I sat there while the type ticked and clicked and the night jars hooted at the windows and the all but naked compositors wiped the sweat from their foreheads and called for water.

Then the roar and rattle of the wheels shivered the quiet into little bits. I rose to go away, but two men in white clothes stood in front of me. The first one said, "It's him!" The second said, "So it is!" And they both laughed almost as loudly as the machinery roared and mopped their foreheads. The smaller of the two was the man I had met in the Mhow train, and his fellow was the red bearded man of Marwar Junction.

I was not pleased, because I wished to go to sleep, not to squabble with loafers. "What do you want?" I asked.

"Half an hour's talk with you cool and comfortable in the office," said the red bearded man. "We'd like some drink—the contract doesn't begin yet, Peachey, so you needn't look—but what we really want is advice. We don't want money. We ask you as a favor, because you did us a bad turn about Degumber."

I led from the press room to the stifling office with the maps on the wall, and the red haired man rubbed his hands. "That's something like," said he. "This was the proper shop to come to. Now, sir, let me introduce you to Brother Peachey Carnehan, that's him, and Brother Daniel Dravot, that is me, and the less said about our profession the better, for we have been most things in our time. Carnehan is sober, and so am I. We'll take one of your cigars apiece, and you shall see us light."

I watched the test. The men were absolutely sober, so I gave them each a tepid peg.

"Well and good," said Carnehan of the eyebrows, wiping the froth from his mustache. "Let me talk now, Dan. We have decided that India isn't big enough for such as us."

They certainly were too big for the office. Carnehan continued: "The country isn't half worked out because they that governs us won't let you touch it. Therefore, such as it is, we will let it alone and go away to some other place where a man isn't crowded and can come to his own. We are not little men, and there is nothing that we are afraid of except drink, and we have signed a contract on that. Therefore we are going away to be kings."

"Kings in our own right," muttered Dravot.

"Yes, of course," I said. "You've been tramping in the sun, and it's a very warm night, and hadn't you better sleep over the notion?"

"Neither drunk nor sunstruck," said Dravot. "We have slept over the notion half a year and require to see books and atlases, and we have decided that there is only one place now in the world that two strong men can Sar-a-whack. They call it Kafiristan. By my reckoning it's the top right hand corner of Afghanistan, not more than 300 miles from Peshawar. They have two and thirty heathen idols there, and we'll be the thirty-third. It's a mountainous country, and the women are very beautiful."

"But that is provided against in the contract," said Carnehan. "Neither women nor liquor, Daniel."

"And that's all we know, except that no one has gone there, and they fight, and in any place where they fight a man who knows how to drill men can always be a king. We shall go to those parts and say to any king we find: 'D'you want to vanquish your foes?' and we will show him how to drill men, for that we know better than anything else. Then we will subvert that king and seize his throne and establish a dy-nasty."

"You'll be cut to pieces before you're fifty miles across the border," I said. "You have to travel through Afghanistan to get to that country. Are you at all in earnest?"

"A little," said Dravot sweetly. "Not, as big a map as you have got, even if it's all blank where Kafiristan is, and any books you've got. We can read, though we aren't very educated."

I uncased the big thirty two miles to the inch map of India and two smaller frontier maps, hauled down volume Inf-kan of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and the men consulted them.

"See here!" said Dravot, his thumb on the map. "Up to Jagdallak, Peachey and me know the road. We was there with Roberts' army. We'll have to turn off to the right at Jagdallak, through Laghmann territory; then we get among the hills—14,000 feet—15,000. It will be cold work there, but it don't look very far on the map."

I smoked while the men pored over Raverty, Wood, the maps and the Encyclopaedia.

"There is no use your waiting," said Dravot politely. "It's about 4 o'clock now. We'll go before 6 o'clock if you want to sleep, and we won't steal any of the papers. When we've got our kingdom in going order we'll let you know, and you can come up and help us to govern it."

"Would two lunatics make a contract like that?" asked Carnehan with subdued pride, showing me a greasy half sheet of note paper on which was written the following. I copied it then and there as a curiosity:

This contract between me and you persuing witnesseth in the name of God—Amen and so forth.

One.—That me and you will settle this matter together—i. e., to be Kings of Kafiristan.

Two.—That you and me will not, while this matter is being settled, look at any liquor, nor any woman black, white or brown, so as to get mixed up with one or the other harmful.

Three.—That we conduct ourselves with dignity and discretion, and if one of us gets into trouble the other will stay by him.

Signed by you and me this day.
Peachey Taliaferro Carnehan.
Daniel Dravot.
Both Gentlemen at Large.

I left them still poring over the maps and making notes on the back of the "contrack." "Be sure to come down to the Serai tomorrow to say goodby," were their parting words.

The Kumharsen Serai is the great four square sink of humanity where the strings of camels and horses from the north load and unload. In the afternoon I went down there to see whether my friends intended to keep their word or were lying about drunk.

A priest attired in fragments of ribbons and rags stalked up to me, gravely twisting a child's paper whirligig. Behind him was his servant, bending under the load of a crate of mud toys. The two were loading up two camels and the inhabitants of the Serai watched them with shrieks of laughter.

"The priest is mad," said a horse dealer to me. "He is going up to Kabul to sell toys to the ameer. He will either be raised to honor or have his head cut off. He came in here this morning and has been behaving madly ever since."

"From Roum have I come," shouted the priest, waving his whirligig—"from Roum, blown by the breath of a hundred devils across the sea! Who will take the protected of God to the north to sell charms that are never still to the amir? Ho! Hazar Mir Khan," he yelled to his servant, "drive out the camels, but let me first mount my own."

He leaped on the back of his beast as it knelt and, turning round to me, cried, "Come, thou, also, sahib, a little along the road and I will sell thee a charm, an amulet that shall make thee king of Kafiristan."

Then the light broke upon me, and I followed the two camels out of the Serai till we reached open road, and the priest halted.

"What d'you think o' that?" said he in English. "Carnehan can't talk their patter, so I've made him my servant. He makes a handsome servant. 'Didn't for nothing that I've been knocking about the country for fourteen years. Didn't I do that talk neat? We'll hitch on to a caravan at Peshawar till we get to Jagdallak, and then we'll see if we can get donkeys for our camels and strike into Kafiristan. Whirligigs for the ameer, O Lord! Put your hand under the camel bags and tell me what you feel."

I felt the butt of a Martini and another and another.

"Twenty of 'em," said Dravot placidly, "twenty of 'em, and ammunition to correspond under the whirligigs and the mud dolls."

"Heaven help you if you are caught with those things," I said. "A Martini is worth her weight in silver among the Pathans."

"Fifteen hundred rupees of capital—every rupee we could beg, borrow or steal—are invested on these two camels," said Dravot. "We won't get caught. We're going through as Khalifer with a regular caravan. Who'd touch a poor mad priest? Goodby." And he gave me his hand solemnly.

Carnehan leaned down and shook hands. Then the camels passed away along the dusty road, and I was left alone to wonder. My eye could detect no failure in the disguises. The scene in the Serai attested that they were complete to the native mind.

Ten days later a native friend of mine, giving me the news of the day from Peshawar, wound up his letter with, "There has been much laughter here on account of a certain mad priest who is going in his estimation to sell petty gauds and insignificant trinkets which he ascribes as great charms to H. H. the ameer of Bokhara."

The two, then, were beyond the border. I would have prayed for them, but that night a real king died in Europe and demanded an obituary notice.

Australian "Squatters" Exclusive.

In this country the term "squatter" carries anything but an implication of dignity. It suggests the interloper, the fellow who is getting the use of land to which he holds no legitimate title. But, in Australia, it has a vastly different significance. The landed gentry of the great antipodean continent are called squatters. They are the descendants of the original pioneers. They own the great sheep ranges of the interior and the vast cattle grazing areas which are called sheep or cattle "stations" as the case may be. The Squatters' Club of the beautiful city of Melbourne is the most exclusive club in the whole commonwealth.

The Short-Memoried Public and The Long-Headed Advertiser

WHY, do you suppose, does a certain successful manufacturer of a summer beverage continue to advertise that beverage in the wintertime?

He is, simply, a thorough believer in the old adage: "Out-of-sight, out-of-mind."

He does not advertise in the winter, with any expectation of selling much of his product while the weather is cold—but with a view of keeping up his sales the following summer. Pronounced as is the impression his advertising creates in the summer, he does not believe in expecting that impression to "carry over" the winter months.

The public has not a long memory. The manufacturers who want lasting patronage for their product must indeed "keep everlastingly at it." How surprising that some of them lose sight of this fact.

Experience has shown this maker of beverages that it is unwise to discontinue his advertising in the winter.

It would be just as unwise for the makers of shoes, or hats, or stoves, or chocolates, or automobiles, to cease advertising in the summer.

Yes, the "out-of-sight, out-of-mind" theory is sound, as applied to advertising. It is but human of us to favour the goods which are kept continually before us through advertising, be the weather cold or not.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A HAPPY RESCUE

It was a beautiful morning in the "merrie month of June" one of those days on which nature tries to look her best. Gertrude Snow, standing on the hotel piazza, overlooking the cove, decided it was too lovely a morning to remain indoors.

She and her mother had arrived at the seashore the day before, having hurried away as soon as Gertrude had finished college.

Next year would be Gertrude's last at college and with her friend, Gladys Waite, she was preparing to have the "time of her life" this summer, before assuming the dignities of a Smith Senior.

Gladys Waite lived with her mother, father and brother in a cottage near the hotel and Gertrude had promised to go over early to let them know of her safe arrival. She had not met any of the family, but she was looking forward to the pleasure of knowing them, especially "Brother Ted," who was a sort of demi-god to his devoted sister.

As Gertrude stood looking out over the blue waters of the cove she spied a little island just beyond the place where two sailboats were moored. As she looked she could not resist the temptation to row across to the little island, which showd its rocky outline about 100 feet aove high tide, but which at low tide was surrounded by a sand bar which was left uncovered by the water.

How beautiful the sea looked! The waves were rippling back and forth, glittering as if they were set with millions of diamonds and sapphires, and the sun was looking down as if were trying to see its face in the mammoth mirror.

Gertrude was charmed with the eauty of the scene and rowed along easily till she reached the island. Having no knowledge of the sand bar, she rowed close to the rocky shore and fastened her boat to a ring which she found on a rock nearest the water.

This safely accomplished, she scrambled up the rocks and looked round. The island was small ar inhabited except at times when picnickers invaded it for a short time. It contained aout two acres of rocks, moss and such other vegetation as would thrive untended in the rocky soil.

Gertrude explored the island, gathered some of the moss and beach sweet peas which grew aong the farther shore, then, as the sun was rather warm, she sat down in the shade of a large rock to rest a few moments before returning. The smaller of the two sailboats which she had noticed from the hotel was being prepared for a pleasure trip. The other remained at its moorings. While she was watching the preparations she became droway and finally fell asleep.

She was aroused by a shout, and looking about her wonderingly, saw the sailboat still moored a short distance away and in it somebody waving frantically and shouting to her.

She could not understand what was being said, so going to a rock where she had fastened her boat she was dismayed to find it stuck fast in the sand. No amount of shoving or coaxing would start it, so, gingerly picking her way across the sand bar, she called to the occupant of the boat for help.

It did not take Theodore Waite many seconds to act. Equipped as he was for swimming, he plunged over the side of his boat and in a moment was standing beside her.

"I thought you were my sister," he said before she could speak, "but will you not let me help you just the same? I am Theodore Waite, at your service."

"Oh, I am so glad it is you," she replied. "You see, I am Gertrude Snow and I came over here for a few minutes to enjoy the lovely morning before going over to see your sister; because I suppose you are Gladys Waite's brother, aren't you?"

"I most certainly am," he answered, "and am delighted to meet my sister's chum even in this unconventional manner."

At their combined efforts the boat was dislodged, and under his sturdy strokes they soon reached the shore. After the boat was hauled to safety, they made their way to the Waites' cottage, where Gladys received Gertrude with open arms.

Thus began the friendship between Gertrude and Theodore Waite. And it continued all that summer. When they were not sailing they were dancing or motoring or doing the hundred and one things which make a summer at the seashore enjoyable.

They were usually a party of four. Ted had brought his college chum, "Gerry" Hopkins, to spend the summer with him and Gerry seemed to find as much pleasure in the company of Gladys Waite as Ted found in Gertrude's presence.

One of their favourtte pastimes was to motor five or six miles into the country, to a farmhouse, where they obtained fresh cream and eggs for the Waites' table.

One day, toward the end of the summer, either at Ted's suggestion or for private reasons, Gladys refused to go on the "egg tour," so Gertrude and Ted started alone.

It was a beautiful day, with a touch of Autumn in the air. All along the roads the golden-rod was waving its arms, and the purple and white asters told of the passing summer.

The two young people spinning along the smooth road, were silent for a while, but finally Ted could contain himself no longer, and turning to Gertrude said hesitatingly: "I don't know how to say what I want to, Gertrude; I only know that I love you very much and want you for my own."

Then, as Gertrude was silent, he continued: "I know I ought not to ask you to marry me until I am settled in business, but, oh, darling, I love you so. Won't you try to love me a little, sweetheart?"

Then Gertrude, lifting her shining eyes to his, said simply: "Ted, dear, I won't have to try to love you, for ever since you rescued me from the island I have known that I loved you very dearly; in fact," a trifle mischievously, "I think I was ready to fall in love with you even before I saw you. You know, Gladys was always singing your praises."

Quickly Ted stopped the auto and caught her in his arms, and as their lips met for the first time they were blissfully ignorant of the amused glances of several passers-by.

DOUBTFUL BLISS.

WHILE drinking in the solitude,
Far from the haunts of men,
We rather think perhaps we'd like
To see those haunts again.
For grandeur pales when naught assails
Our eyes but gray and green
If no companion is at hand
To help enjoy the scene.

Far from the city's blare and smoke
We think we'd like to stray,
To hold communion with the skies
And while the time away.
But when we come to try it out,
To dabble in the joys,
Far, far away from any one,
We long for human noise.

When touching elbows with the crowd
We turn away and frown
If some one deigns to speak to us
Or pause to call him down.
But out upon the yellow plain,
Far from the din and roar,
We'd go a mile to speak to one
We never saw before.

When we can fill an easy chair
It's very fine to dream
About a lonely, quiet nook
Beside a sylvan stream,
But when we sit for half a day
With not a soul in view
We think we'd like to see a man
To tell our troubles to.

"Remember, you have sworn to tell the whole truth!" said the lawyer fiercely.

"Here goes, then. You are an impertinent, incompetent, overbearing"—

At this point the lawyer appealed to the court.

"Well," resumed the witness, smarting under judicial rebuke, "the whole truth is considerable, and I began in the haudiest place."

"How did you like that cigar?" asked the dealer in a voice that indicated his opinion of the brand to be a high one.

"Oh, in a way," replied the customer guardedly.

"It's a free drawer."

"Yes."

"Then what's the matter with it?"

"Well, I had to draw also on my imagination to like it."

The diving bell was not mentioned before the sixteenth century. BIG FIRE AT HULL.

Lumber Valued at $500,000 Destroyed by Flames.

OTTAWA, July 28.—A fire broke out in Gilmour and Hughson's lumber yards just east of Brewery Creek, Hull, shortly before 10 o'clock last night, and burned fiercely all night. Three million feet of valuable lumber have been destroyed, as well as a quantity of mill wood belonging to Simon Dupuis.

Fanned by the wind, the flames spread through the lumber with great rapidity in the direction of the residential section of the city.

The fire is supposed to have originated in the rear of the Simon Dupuis residence. It had made considerable headway before it was discovered and spread rapidly. The Hull fire brigade were utterly unable to check the advance of the flames and a call for aid was sent to the Ottawa fire department.

There were only two houses in the immediately vicinity of the lumber yards and both were badly scorched.

It is impossible at the present time to determine exactly the amount of the loss. In one block of lumber alone, which was completely destroyed, there was nearly three million feet of lumber, which would be worth about $300,000. The latest estimate of the loss is in the neighborhood of $500,000, seven million feet of lumber being destroyed.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 27.—Excessively hot weather over the week-end and the Liverpool cables being unusually strong on the political situation, caused a sharp rise in wheat prices this morning. Opening figures were 1¾c to 2c higher for wheat, ¾c to 1c for oats, and flax was 7⅛c to 8¼c higher. There was heavy trading during the first few hours, but profit-taking developed, and a setback occurred on wheat and flax, while oats held fairly steady.

The weather map all over the west shows around 90 to 96 maximum temperatures, excepting in Alberta, and this was considered unfavorable. There was no rain recorded. Later news came in that the situation was clearer in Europe, and prices dropped to around yesterday. Wheat closed ⅝c lower to ¾c higher, oats ⅛c lower to 1c higher, and flax 1⅝c to 1¾c higher.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, July 27.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending July 25 were 1200 cattle, 1250 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 1000 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 800 cattle, 750 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 1000 calves. The strength which developed in the market for cattle a week ago has continued to be the main feature of the trade, and, altho the supply was fifty two hundred head larger than this day week, prices scored a further advance of 25c per hundred pounds, which is attributed to the renewed demand here for supplies from American buyers for shipment to Buffalo and the increased scarcity of good to choice steers.

At the higher range of prices there was a good demand from packers, and sales were made at $8.65 to $8.75, while others changed hands at $8 to $8.50 per hundred pounds. There was considerable enquiry from butchers for small lots of grain fed steers sold at $8 to $8.35 per 100 pounds. The demand for all grades of cattle was generally good, and an active trade was done.

In sympathy with advance in prices for live hogs of 20 cents per hundred pounds in the Toronto market, the undertone to the market has continued very strong, and prices have scored a further advance of 25c to 35c per hundred pounds. The trade was active, with sales of selected lots at $9.50 to $9.65, and some lots which brought as high as $9.75, but prices for heavy hogs were firm and unchanged at $8.50. Sows sold at $7.50 to $7.65; stags at $4.75 to $4.85 per hundred pounds.

The tone of the market for lambs has continued strong, and prices for Ontario stock since this day week have scored an advance of 15c to 75c per head.

Steamer Wrecks Lock Gates.

ST. CATHARINES, July 28.—The steamer Garner carried away two head gates of the lock about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The steamer is owned by the Canada Cement Co. of Montreal. No damage was done to the steamer, and it is expected that locking will be resumed to-day.

The cause of the accident is said to be that the engine centred when entering the lock, and they were unable to check speed before hitting the upper gates.

DOCUMENTS STOLEN?

Montreal Is In a Flurry About Papers Required In Probe.

MONTREAL, July 28. — A sensation was created in the City Hall yesterday morning by the announcement that official plans and documents which figure prominently in the Notre Dame de Grace sewer scandal have been stolen.

The Board of Control recently conducted an investigation which led to the arrest of Etienne Pelland, a former city engineer.

The mayor called in Chief of Police Campeau, and an effort will be made to recover the documents, which are of great value to the city, in view of the investigation now being carried on, and the charges made against former Engineer Pelland.

A clerk in the engineer's office was suspended yesterday morning. He was the last person to handle the plans, and it is thought that he was the only official who knew where they were placed by Engineer Pelland, the head of the department.

You never have to say "Giddap!" to a scandal.

Anybody can go to heaven on a tombstone.

SOME CHOICE RECIPES.

Veal Loaf.

Veal loaf is a good hot weather dish. Use three pounds of raw veal chopped very fine, butter the size of an egg, three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of cream, or milk, with a small piece of butter. Mix the eggs and cream together. Mix with the veal four pounded crackers, one teaspoonful of black pepper, one large tablespoonful salt, one of sage; mix well together and form into a loaf. Bake two and one-half hours, basting with butter and water while baking. Serve cut in thin slices.

Frozen Pineapple Custard.

Separate three eggs and beat the yolk with a small cupful of sugar, and stir into a pint of milk. Heat to nearly boiling point, stirring all the time. Then let it get cold, and add a cupful of sweet cream and the whites of the eggs beaten up stiff and white. Turn into a freezer and turn until almost solid; then stir in a small pineapple which has been chopped and allowed to stand for three hours, mixed with a cupful of sugar. This is a delicious and not expensive dessert for a hot day.

War Has Been Declared Between Austria and Servia

AUSTRIAN TROOPS SAID TO HAVE CROSSED DANUBE

Word Reaches Austrian Embassy That Two Army Corps Occupied Belgrade Without Resistance.

INVADE SERVIA

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Ont., July 28.—Reports received in Paris, Berlin and London to-day indicate that the Austrian troops have crossed the Danube into Servian territory, but confirmation was lacking. Two army corps occupied Belgrade, without resistance according to word reaching the Austrian embassy in Paris. Other unofficial reports in Berlin and London declare a detachment of Austrians invaded Servia at Mitrovitz, fifty miles from Belgrade. The German admiralty today ordered the concentration of the German fleet in home waters.

MADAME CAILLAUX COLLAPSES AGAIN

Examiner Special:

PARIS, July 28.—Cringing before the denunciation of Maitre Chenu, prosecutor and finally fainting in the prisoner's box, Mme. Joseph Caillaux, was again carried unconscious from the court room, where she is on trial for the murder of Calmette. Judge Albanel suspended the arguments of prosecuting lawyers while the guards carried her out.

A DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Kindly grant me a space in your valuable paper for the following:

I have read the paragraph in Monday's issue of The Examiner, re "Bright Music at St. John's" church on Sunday at both services (at which I attended). If the opening hymn was sung so ably as your paper stated in Monday's issue, why did Canon Davidson cut out two of the verses.

Re "fully choral evensong," which was not "fully," as your paper stated: I have always been a keen lover of church music, and singing, and St. John's does not live up to its reputation as the oldest and most beautiful church in this city, from a musical point of view.

Then again. I have never heard a fully choral Communion, or a choral Litany. I should also like to know why the Psalms are more read than sung. I have always been disappointed at St. John's choir, as I feel and know from experience the singing is not of the high standard one would expect to hear in a church like St. John's. Many times I notice mistakes from the organ and singing. I also noticed that the choir was somewhat depleted of some of its members last Sunday evening.

In conclusion, I should consider it a great honour to belong to St. John's choir, and having once joined, should do my very best to attend all church services and choir practices, the latter being very necessary, and to follow the choirmaster's instructions in every detail.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, in your paper, I am,

Yours sincerely,

VERBUM SAP.

BOOSTER DAYS SHOULD DRAW BIG CROWDS

Chance for Fans to Show Their Appreciation of Efforts of Local Management and Ball Team

BAND WILL BE THERE

Every ball fan in Peterborough should be at Riverside Park for one or both Booster days this week, Thursday and Saturday are the dates, the first giving the merchants and their employees a chance to show their interest in the game, and the second for the benefit of employees of factories. The band will be in attendance on both days, and there is every reason to expect the two biggest crowds of the season. The Peterborough management is deserving of liberal patronage. They have spent money freely to give Peterborough a good team, and it is up to the citizens to show their appreciation.

SHAVES STILL TO BE HAD AT 10 CTS.

Attempt to Raise the Price Generally to 15c. Has Been Temporarily Turned Down

TIME IS NOT OPPORTUNE

The 15 cent shave all around was nearly decided upon last night at a meeting of the Union barbers. Some time go a few of the bosses decided that ten cents a shave was not commensurate with the high cost of living, and they tacked on an extra nickel. The others declared that it was a lean year, that they were quite satisfied to take ten cents in the same old way, and incidentally they picked up a few new customers. The success of the movement to boost the price was not as manifest as it should have been. One of the "fifteen cent men" is said to have been sliding fifteen charges in this way: Fifteen cents for those who were not wise, or who were willing to pay it and ten cents to those who threatened to seek other tonsorial parlours. An effort to ring in the Union was attempted, it is said, but there was nothing doing in any direction. Those who have been content with the old schedule price state that they are satisfied to continue it, not that they wouldn't prefer fifteen, but the conditions do not look sufficiently bright just now to attempt a boost.

ANOTHER DEATH FOR WORMS

When the army were first seen in this section, about 50 years ago, when they formed a great pest, a number of farmers made brush drags by chaining limbs together. They even hitched a team to the brush drags, and pulled these over where the worms were lying in large quantities. The brush caught the worms as it went over the land and tore them. The method is simple and very efficacious on uneven ground, where rollers will not work, and it does not clog as a roller will under the circumstances.

SENTENCED TO SIX MONTH'S TERM

George Herron Found Guilty of Robbing a Drunken Man Punished by Magistrate Dumble To-day

COMPANION ESCAPES

George Herron, moulder, of Port Hope, was sentenced by Magistrate Dumble this morning to six months in the Central Prison for robbing a drunken man. John White, his companion and associate in the offence was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

The particulars of the case will probably be remembered.

Herron and White accosted John Byrne, a shantyman, who was under the influence of liquor, and asked for money. They received $2. Under a pretence of showing him a place to sleep the prisoners led Byrne into a hay loft and left him, going out apparently for liquor. Returning later, Herron himself went into the loft while White remained downstairs. In the meantime the police heard of the affair and arrived in time to hear a struggle. One of the officers went into the loft and found Herron struggling with the old man and holding a five dollar bill in one hand and a two in the other. Both Herron and White, who told the officers no one was upstairs, were arrested and the evidence having been heard on the 21st inst., judgment was reserved.

Mr. Gordon, who appeared for the prisoners, pleaded that neither had before been charged with a criminal offence, and as they were both middle-aged men it was improbable that they possessed criminal tendencies. The Magistrate found both prisoners guilty and said he always felt it a duty of the court to stamp out the habit of robbing drunks. He opined that there was no excuse for Herron who was foremost in the offence and he sentenced him to six months in the Central Prison. White he allowed to go on suspended sentence.

IRISH SITUATION IS OVERSHADOWED

Citizens of Dublin and Belfast as Excited Over War Scare as Over Home Rule Question.

TALK OF A TRUCE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, July 28 — The Irish situation was overshadowed to-day by the European crisis, with the citizens of Dublin and Belfast as excited over the war scare as over home rule. If the trouble should become acute they would be called as volunteers from Ireland. There was talk this afternoon of a truce so as not to embarass the Government. Five thousand Dubinites paraded the streets during the night; also two thousand Nationalists; not with rifles, but with heavy staves.

STOCKS DOWN GRAINS UP

C. P. R. Shows a Loss of Over 20 Points To-day—A Panic on the Stock Exchanges.

Wheat Went Up Eight Cents a Bushel

Toronto Rails, Brazilian, Barcelona, Canadian General—all Down.

NEW YORK, July 28—Latest reports indicate rallies on any favourable foreign news, owing to the large shortage. Rallies may not hold yet. A European war, so far as immediate news is concerned, would revive American industries as nothing else might for the United States would be the chief source of independent supplies for the carrying out of such a conflict. Banking institutions of the first magnitude are understood to look upon Union Pac., Steel, R.G., S.P., and ATCH. as the best bought issues. There may be more foreign liquidations in G.Q. S. TP, and ATCH, but they will be well taken on breaks. The shortage in LV is large, NYC. NH and AR are looked upon as liquidated stocks. OA, BO, and ACP will find offerings on rallies.—New York Financial Bulletin.

There was a panic on both the New York Stock Market and Chicago Grain Exchange to-day. C.P.R. opened up at 175½, and at 1:30 sold as low as 166, a loss of 116 dollars a share from its high mark of 286 of about a year and a half ago.

All other stocks had breaks of from one to five points. In the grain market December wheat opened up at 86¼, and sold as hight as 94½, evidently on the war news and bad crop reports.

In Toronto Brazilian was 60 and Toronto Rails 112½.

TORONTO, July 28.—The Toronto Stock Exchange closed in a panic after ten minutes of wild trading at this afternoon's session. It was said also that the Montreal Exchange had closed. Stocks fell hysterically.

ROAST FOR CAILLAUX

Henri Bernstein, the Playwright, Evokes Cheers and Hoots.

PARIS, July 28.—All the testimony in the trial of Mme. Henriette Caillaux, for the wilful murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, has been heard and the speeches of counsel for the prosecution and defence are to be delivered to-day.

While Henri Bernstein, the playwright, was giving his disposition yesterday, the applause and hooting caused such an uproar that Judge Albanel had the court cleared and suspended the sittings. The playwright abandoned all semblance of courtesy in addressing the former Premier and husband of the prisoner as "Caillaux" without prefix. He said: "We have just witnessed the French Treasury committing a felony by appropriating a will and turning it over to Caillaux. Then we have seen Ministers of state come here and declare, in order to cover up their former colleague, that diplomatic documents accepted with thanks by the President of the Republic, are forgeries. Either President Poincare is feebleminded or his Ministers have lied."

AUSTRIA MAKES FORMAL DECLARATION OF WAR

C.P.R. DROPPED TO 157 ON RECEIPT OF WAR NEWS

Decline of 20 Points in Few Days has Routed Bulls and Made Fortunes For Shorts

WHEAT AWAY UP

The impossible has happened in C.P.R. Opening this morning at 175 1-2, gaining one-half a point to the 176 mark and then gradually declining a few points during the trading hours until noon. At twelve o'clock it stood at 174 and then swooped with the swiftness of a hawk's descent. The first quotation showed 173 3-4. Then came 170, 169 3-4, 168, 167, then singly by whole points to 164. The next drop was to 161, then 160 and finally 157. That was the low water mark. There was a slight recovery to 161. But the impossible had happened when 157 was recorded. Only a war market could have accomplished a fall which traders a week ago, yes, a few days ago, would have regarded as out of the question. Those who were short C.P.R. who sold stock this morning at 175, would show a gain of $18 a point shortly after 2 o'clock. In this connection the bears who sold at Friday's price of 187 would be ahead just $30 a share. In other words, the war market has brought fortunes to the bears, while those who have been long either closed out or were closed out.

Wheat Soared.

The grain market had a feature in September wheat which opened at 88 3-4c. a bushel and at 2.15 o'clock stood at 92 1-2c. The war news was responsible for this increase, and, at the same time, the crop reports recently have not been the brightest. Taking it all around it was the worst flurry in a long time for those who were on the long side of C.P.R. or short wheat.

Announcement Says That In View of Refusal of Servia to Comply There is No Other Course Open

EXCITEMENT IN EUROPE

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., July 28.—War has been declared between Austria and Servia, according to Vienna dispatches received here. This announcement quickly followed the refusal of Austria to suspend hostilities pending mediations. Foreign Minister Berchtold, of Austria, made this announcement plain in a courteous reply to Sir Edward Grey that Austria had gone too far to turn back. The military measures and Austria's present course of action in regards to Servia could not be interrupted pending Britain's peace negotiations, was the message of Berchtold. Austria's reply thanked Sir Edward Grey, but diplomatically refused to accept mediation. Just previously to the declaration of war it was said that Germany gave an unfavourable reply to Britain's advice for a conference. Germany declared that Grey's suggestion was well meant, but impossible to carry out. It could not be expected that a great power disputing with a small one could submit to the decision of others on the hill, figuratively speaking. Austria flatly refused any scheme of intervention by the Powers, except plans looking towards the location of war. There was a report that the Servian Parliament, after a debate, had accepted all the demands made by Austria-Hungary, but this was overshadowed by the declaration of war.

VIENNA, July 28.—The declaration of war by Austria as gazetted here, said that Servia not having replied satisfactorily to the note of Austria, Austria found itself compelled to proceed itself to safeguard its rights and interests, and to have recourse for this purpose to force of arms. Austria therefore, at this moment, considered itself in a state of war with Servia.

LONDON, July 28.—Following the statement that Germany had rejected the mediation proposal, Asquith stated in the House that there was no development. Though war was declared, it is said the British cabinet was not yet hopeless.

STOCKS AFFECTED.

NEW YORK, July 28.—The New York Stock Market became very active and very weak, while in London the stocks reached the lowest points of the present crisis. Great expansion of the wheat trade took place with prices higher. Paris and Berlin stock exchanges were demoralized.

BERLIN, Germany, July 28.—According to reports, troops were being massed on the border. Reservists were pouring into Austria from Germany and all preparations were being made for the immediate invasion of the little kingdom of Servia.

It was also reported that an Austrian ship had seized a Servian ship, torn down its flag and hoisted the Austrian emblem, and that Montenegrin and Servian troops had became active.

MORE TOLERANT.

The Asquith Government is more tolerant than our Canadian militia rules. In Canada it is contrary to the regulations for even authorized and loyal troops to bear arms in processions outside of military parades. In Ulster the government allowed and allows "volunteers," frankly rebels against constituted authority, to parade the streets of Belfast flaunting arms and even exploiting machine guns. The culpable tolerance of the Government is responsible for the bloodshed that took place in Dublin.

STATISTICAL AND REAL PROSPERITY.

There is no profit in a controversy as to whether we are having or not having good times in Canada. We have to take things as they are anyway. Statistics may be quoted by government papers to show that we are prosperous. That is a sort of test, but it is not infallible. There are times when we feel things in our bones; things that don't lend themselves to explanation, to proof or disproof by argument. Hard times is one of those things. We feel it and can't perhaps put our nger on any particular point. But we feel the pinch and all argument is useless that can't explain away the feeling. Our friends may tell us when we feel out of sorts that we are "looking fine." We may have the outward appearance that indicates good health and a comfortable feeling, but if we dont' feel comfortable, don't feel well, we are not well, no matter what the indications are.

It is so with good times and bad times; and argument and quotation and manipuation of statistics won't change the feelings, won't change the conditions, that work for good or bad times.

The government newspapers feel that it does not improve the reputation of a government to have dull times under its rule, and are trying to prove that the times are good and getting better. That may come from the government arguers, but as a cold matter of fact the editors of the official government labour organ, the Labour Gazette, treat matters without party bias and show matters as they are. Its report of labour conditions for June is dismal enough reading.

On the other side a partisan journal, like the Ottawa Journal, devotes a column or so to complicated quotations of figures and statistics in an endeavour to show that we had hard times before 1911 as we are having them now. But somehow these figures don't remove that feeling of hard times that we have in our bones. We may be prosperous on paper; but it is paper that is not negotiable at the bank of Good Times. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier was appealing to the country in 1896 for the confidence of the people he told them that if they entrusted him with power he believed his policy would give results that would enable the people to feed their prosperity in their pockets. Hon George E. Foster and others had been feeding the people on statistics: not on a very sustaining diet when there is so intimate re lation between a full stomach and a full pocket. When Sir Wilfrid Laurier made his promise of a government policy that would improve times there was need for improvement. We can remember the conditions that immediately preceded 1896. In this city of Peterborough men were working at 90 cents per day of ten hours. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was trusted by the people, he came into power, and things took on an almost magical change. Whether or not improved conditions were caused by the application of the policy of his government, we had the results and the results came according to his promise. The people felt the jingle of prosperity in their pockets and we had rampant good times. Whether they were to be, or could be, accounted for, did not matter — we had the good times. It was the case over again of the blind man in Scripture, whose sight was restored. He couldn't account for it. He only was sure of the result—"whereas I was blind, now I see." Without imputing the hard times that we feel, even if figures disprove them, to the the government, we know that under the Borden government we have had surcease of the prosperity that flooded the country all through the fifteen years 'regime of the Laurier government. We have unemployment on a scale never known during the past twenty years. Without trying to account for it exactly, we know that a few years ago we had work for everybody. Now we have a surplus of idle men who would work if they could get work. But we wouldn't "let well enough alone" and we are paying the penalty.

Now what we have to do is to "grin and bear it." We see before us this winter a good deal of suffering and deprivation, mainly the fruits of unemployment, but not altogether. A good deal of it can be laid to the unthrifty habits of wage earners. In their day of prosperity they lived extravagantly, spent on pleasure and unnecessary things up to the last penny of their earnings; and when the rainy day comes they have no shelter prepared. Our present government is setting the example. With a falling national revenue, they are spending up to and beyond the national income; they are "dashing ahead and spending the money"; and the people—a good many of them — follow the bad example of the government.

ANOTHER WAR THREATENED.

The day of universal peace seems to be a long way off, despite all the humanitarian efforts which have been made to hasten its advent. The danger point just now, so far as international conflict is concerned, is Servia, which is threatened with an attack by Austria. Diplomatic relations between the two countries have been broken off, and war seems to be inevitable. The worst feature of the situation is that the threatened conflict at arms is likely to involve other European powers. Russian interference in behalf of Servia is looked upon as almost inevitable, and should this occur, Germany would almost certainly come to the aid of Austria.

The assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the throne of Austria-Hungary and his morganatic wife, Sophie, Duchess of Hohenberg, has undoubtedly had much to do with precipitating the existing situation, but the cause of trouble goes much further back. The murdered archduke was a stumbling block in the way of Servia's ambition to extend her boundaries. It was his ambition to unite all the Slavic provinces of Austria, the southeasterly region along the Adriatic, and reform Austria-Hungary from a dual into a triad government—that is the third part of the monarchy should comprise Croatia, Slavonia, Dalmatia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, Istria and Krain, as an equal factor with Hungary and Austria under the same crown. Actuated by this dream of his own, the assassinated crown prince used all his influence to form the new kingdom of Albania, in order to close the doors of the Adriatic sea to the Servians forever.

It is not likely Great Britain will, in any contingency, become involved in the threatened conflict, but she will suffer, as all other counties must, from he disturbance of business thereby occasioned.—Brantford Expositor.

HOME RULE SITUATION.

In considering the Home Rule situation it is well to remember that in Ulster religion and politics have practically the same dividing line; but not altogether, for while practically all Catholics are home rulers, there is still quite a large and responsible and highly influential body of Protestants who are in favour of Home Rule. Upon this point the Manchester Guardian, one of the sanest and most influential of British public journals, says:

"But even if we ignore this fact, which undoubtedly would count for something if it came to a poll, and assume that every Protestant is opposed to Home Rule," says the Guardian, "still the maojrity opposed to Home Rule in the whole province is only a small one, so much so that an actual majority of the Ulster members in the House of Commons at this moment are avowed Home Rulers. And if we take the counties separately the result is even more striking. Of the four northeastern counties commonly regarded as solidly Protestant and Unionist, two only, Antrim and Down, are so in fact. In the other two, Armagh and Derry, the Protestants are just a majority. But when we come to the remaining three counties of Donegal, Savan, and Monaghan, the Catholic majority is overwhelming—something like four to one—just as the Protestant majority is overwhelming in almost the same proportions in Antrim and Down.

"On what ground of justice or expediency are the majorities of the Protestant counties to have the form of Government they desire, and those in the Catholic counties to be refused it? Lord Lansdowne, indeed, contends that it is a smaller hardship to be asked to stay under a government you know than to be transferred to another which you fear and detest. But it is very doubtful whether if feeling is to be the test, the feelings of the Home Ruler refused permission to join his comrades in a Home-Ruled Ireland would be any less vehement than those of the anti-Home Ruler included against his will. Some of each sort there must in any case be. There are the scattered Unionists in the south and west of Ireland, and there are the considerable minority of Home Rulers in the four northeastern counties of Ulster. The herdship is one which cannot be avoided, but there is no reason why we should enormously and needlessly increase it, and increase it wholly at the expense of the Home Rulers.

"One argument, indeed, has been persistnetly used, and it is reflected in the whole scheme of the opposition peers' amendments. The Protestants in no part of Ulster, no matter whether in any particular part they happen to be a few or many, accept Home Rule, and sooner than submit they will fight. Well, that may be so, but then what of the Catholics who may, and almost certainly will, take up exactly the same position? Protestant Ulster is drilled and armed; Catholic Ireland from end to end is drilling and arming. If force is to be arbiter it can be invoked with equal justice and probably an equal chance of success, by each side. Some better reasons will have to be found for an obviously unfair proceeding before it can be accepted by the Government and the majority of the House of Commons, and we have not the smallest expectation that they will be forthcoming."

Asquith as the head of the Government, may be anxious to justify himself when, as he will have to do before long, he shall have enforced the Home Rule Act after exhausting ever means of conciliation; but there are sure to be, under the enforcement of any great act of legislation, some recalcitrants; there are sure to be some exponents of the spirit of the old couplet:

No man e'er felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law.

MONEY TO LOAN

Did You Ever Figure This Way

To purchase a modern house with furnace at $1900 and pay $200 down on same and balance at 6 per cent and taxes and insurance, what this really costs on monthly basis.

Purchase at $1900 pay $200 down

Balance $1700 at 6 per cent is $102 per year.

Taxes for one year is $30.

Insurance for one year is $2.50, $134.50 for the year or in other words $11.21 per month for a modern house. Now if you are paying $15 a month rent what do you save out of your rent money, just $11.21 from $15 leaves $3.79 per month or $45.48 per year saved out of ordinary rent money this applied on the principal will gradually pay it off and you will have a home of your own clear of debt in a few years you have to pay rent anyway, why not be paying on a home of your own. BEAVERS WON OUT 3 TO 2 IN TENTH GRABBED FIRST GAME OF HOME SERIES

One of the Most Exciting Battles of the Season at Local Ball Yard —Schaeffer Was Invincible in All But One Innings.

SOME FINE FIELDING

The Petes opened their week's engagement at home yesterday by dropping a hard-fought game to the Toronto Beavers. It took ten exciting innings to give the Ortmen the decision by a 3 to 2 score. Inability to hit Schaeffer, coupled with Belting's wildness and a couple of fielding misplays, gave the verdict to the visitors, but it was a battle royal and one of the most exciting of the season from a spectator's standpoint.

Bill Schaeffer, champion fisherman of the League, and an ex-Peterborough, Guelph and Berlin heaver, was on the firing line for the visitors, and he had the Petes well in hand all through the journey, with the exception of the sixth innings, when Welsh's single, a pass to Dolan, and Rooney's long two-bagger, gave the local athletes their two runs. Schaeffer had fine control and used a change of pace effectively.

Belting did the honours for the Petes and although he kept the Toronto hits down to seven, no two in one innings, was in trouble most of the way, owing to his lack of control. He passed six men and plugged another, and the first man up in eight of the ten innings got on. The result was several tight holes for the local hurler. He wiggled out of a bad one in the sixth, when the Beavers filled the bases with none out. Schaeffer popped up to King, and when Hunt lined to Welsh, Schultz tried to score and was nailed at the plate by a fine throw from the left fielder. Welsh was also in the limelight in the third, when he went back and speared Killilea's fly in grand style. Trout, in left field for the visitors, although handicapped by a bad ankle, covered a lot of ground and shared with Welsh the fielding honours. Isaac had a grand play in the fourth, when he knocked down Byrne's smash over the bag, and got Dolan between the bases.

First Innings.

Toronto—Hunt was hit. Ort bunted to Belting and Hunt was out at second. Fox making a one-handed catch of the pitcher's throw. Trout hit to King who made a bad heave to first, Ort going to third. Killilea singled to right, scoring Ort. Kelly caught Killilea asleep off first. Isaac flied to Blount.—One run, one hit, one error.

Peterborough — Blount died on a crack to Schaeffer. Welsh grounded to Killilea. Dolan rolled to Isaac. Schaeffer retired the side on four pitched balls.—No runs, hits, or errors.

Second Innings.

Toronto — Schultz walked. Burrill forced Schultz, Belting to Fox. Snell grounded to King. Schaeffer fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Rooney singled to right. Byrne bunted a fly to Snell in trying to sacrifice. King flied to Trout. Fox flied to Ort.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Toronto—Hunt was out on a bounder to Dolan, Belting covering. Ort singled to centre. Trout flied to Welsh. The latter made a fine catch of Killilea's long drive to left.—No runs, one hit, no error.

Peterborough — Kelly fanned. Trout grabbed Belting's fly to left. Blount beat out a swinging bunt past Schaeffer and stole second. Welsh grounded to Killilea—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Toronto — Isaac singled to left. Schultz sacrificed. Dolan to King. Burrill grounded to King, Isaac going to third. Snell walked and stole Kelly not throwing. Schaeffer fouled to Kelly, a nice grab by the catcher.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Dolan bounced a hit off Isaac. Rooney sacrificed, Schaeffer to Schultz. Byrne was robbed of a hit when Isaac stopped his vicious drive over the bag and Dolan was caught between bases. King flied to Ort.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Toronto — Hunt doubled to right centre. Fox made a beautiful pick-up of Ort's smash and threw him out. Hunt going to third. Trout grounded to Belting, Hunt being held at third. Killilea walked. Hunt scored on a double steal. Isaac walked, the fourth being a wild pitch on which Killilea went to third. Isaac stole second. Killilea was out trying to steal home.—One run, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Fox grounded to Ort. Kelly died on a long one which Burrill went back for in great style. Belting lined to Isaac.—No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Toronto — Schultz cracked a hit to short. Burrill bunted to Belting who tried for Schultz at second and lost him. Snell walked. Schaeffer flied to King. Hunt flied to Welsh, who doubled Schultz at the plate. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount flied to Burrill. Welsh singled over second. Dolan walked. Rooney doubled to left, scoring Welsh and Dolan. Byrne fouled to Isaac. King rolled to Killilea.—Two runs, two hits, no errors.

Seventh Innings.

Toronto — Ort singled to right centre. Trout sacrificed, Belting to King. Killilea grounded to King. Isaac fanned.—No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Fox grounded to Ort. Kelly fanned. Belting hit one over Schaeffer. Blount fanned. — No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Toronto—Schultz flied to Rooney. Burrill lifted to Blount. Snell died the same way.—No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro — Welsh sigled through third. Dolan fanned. Rooney forced Welsh, Schaeffer to Killilea. Rooney was out stealing, Snell to Ort. —No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Toronto — Schaeffer fanned. Hunt grounded to Dolan. Ort fouled to Kelly. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Trout grabbed Byrne's long fly. King flied to Burrill. Fox fanned.—No runs, hits or errors.

Tenth Innings.

Toronto — Trout was safe on King's fumble. Roberts ran for Trout Killilea walked. Isaac singled to centre, scoring Roberts and took second on the throw to the plate. Schultz cracked one at Belting, and was out at first. Dolan threw to Fox and had Isaac, but Killilea made a break for home, so Fox threw him out at the plate. Burrill grounded to Fox.—One run, one hit, one error.

Peterborough — Kelly was safe on Killilea's wild throw to first. Belting sacrificed, Snell to Schultz. Blount popped to Isaac. Welsh fanned. No runs, one hit, one error.

NOTES.

Yesterday's game would have been wound up in nine innings if Schultz had slid into the plate in the sixth with the bases full and one gone. Hunt flied to Welsh. Schultz tried to score and came in standing up to be easily tagged out on Welsh's good throw to Kelly. A hook slide would have given the Beavers a run.

Isaac gave Belting the merry ha, ha when he passed him in the fifth. The Swede had his revenge in the seventh when he struck Isaac out with a man on second.

The Beavers scored the second run on a double steal. They really pulled the theft on Belting and not on Kelly, the pitcher letting the base runners get a long lead.

The Petes had a chance in the tenth, when Kelly, first up, got a life on Killilea's bad throw and was sacrificed to second by Belting. It was up to Blount and Welsh, but the former popped up and Welsh fanned.

In spite of his bad ankle, Trout covered a lot of ground in left field. What Manager Joe Kelly is thinking of in not advancing this boy to the International club is not easy to fathom. He has been recommended to several big league clubs, including Cincinnati and Cleveland.

Tickes are on sale at the Oriental, White House, Stenson's, Lynch's Drug Store, and Peterborough Bookstore.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Herald:

There's not a day passes that the wisdom of Jack White's trade with the Brantford club is not more clearly shown, for Ivers has been hitting at a terrific clip since he joined the Hamilton Club. In Saturda's pair the former Brant assaulted the assortments of Schettler and Ken Treacy, the Petes' hurlers, five times in seven trips to the plate, and incidentally increased his hitting figures from .291 to .304. He had a big day, two of his five hits going for extra bases, and being responsible for four of the five local runs in the first game. His fielding, too, was up to the mark and he has already won himself a warm spot in the heart of local fandom.

But while Ivers wrought such havoc with his war club he was forced to take second place to Dolan, the elongated visiting firstbaseman, who went him one better. Anything and everything offered up for inspection by the Hamilton moundmen was just to Dolan's liking, and the result of his exercise was six hits in seven times at bat, including one double. The big fellow certainly looked good on his first apeparance in Hamilton, and showed an easy, graceful style in guarding the initial corner, besides the ability to hit 'em "where they ain't." King, with four hits out of eight, and Red Fisher with three safe ties in four trials, were the runners-up in the hitting contest.

Hamilton Herald:

Both games were featured by sensational defensive tactics by the Blountmen and wretched fielding by the tail-enders. The Athletics had three mis-plays in the first game and an even half dozen in the slaughter, while the Petes erred only twice during th afternoon, once in each game. Jack White, Welsh, Rooney, Ivers and Joe Byrne hogged the fielding honours, Byrne puling off two plays in the second game that were nothing sort of robbery. His first offence was in the first inning, when he pulled Billy Cunnigham's line drive down with one hand. His other crazy stunt was on Baldwin's fast drive into his territory. He scooped it up with one hand and threw him out.

Ottawa Free Press: Baseball fans in Ottawa have aired their opinions as to who is the best pitcher in the Canadian League this season. Records are sidetracked when doping out good twirlers. There are a raft of real good moundmen around the Fitzgerald wheel, namely, Schettler of Peterborough, Heck of London, Dorbeck and Brown of Erie; Dougherty of Hamilton, Wilkinson of St. Thomas, Auld and Kirley of Toronto, and Shocker and Kubat of Ottawa. There is no doubt Louie Schettler of Peterborough is the class of the lot. Heck of London, has been pitching good ball this season, but he is dependent wholly on a spitter, and most spitball hurlers are not as popular as they formerly were. Brown, of Erie, impressed Ottawa fans as being a twirler of real class. Shocker of Ottawa has ben a consistent winner, but he has pitched some bad games in the bargain. Schettler always pitches well. He has smoke and lots of it, perfect control and a magnificent change of pace. Although he has seen big league service, he is good enough to go up there again. He pitched a game in Ottawa ten days ago that woud stand the iGants or Athletics on their heads.

BASEBALL

A very exciting game was played on Monday evening betwee the Lift Lock team and the East City twirlers. The score resulted 9 to 5, in favour of the Twirlers. The batteries for the Lift Lock team were McMahan and Theobald and for the Twirlers McLean and Hamilton. Umpire J May and R. Long.

FOOTBALL

There will be a practice on the Exhibition Grounds Wednesday night, and all the footballers are asked to come out, as there will be two games put on with a team from Toronto, and a return game with the Deloro team.

GOLF.

Following is the draw for the second round of the golf championship. The games must be played on or before Saturday, August 1st:

S. Ray vs. R. Cameron.
W. H. Denham vs. Dr. Gowan.
R. Neill vs. T. D. Mulholland.
A. H. Stratton vs. A. M. Hamilton.

THINGS WORTH WHILE.

(New York Sun)

Life is what we make it and personal success has little to do with material conditions. With keen eyes and a good memory, warm heart and a sense of humour the elevator man has no reason to envy the trade magnate bloated with his dollars, the student soaked with his learning or the Kaiser on his throne. To be oneself and to realize and love one's fellows are the only things really worth while, and any one may lift himself to these heights even without an elevator.

Intervention of Police Chief Set Boy On Right Road Again

Among the boys who passed at the recent Entrance examinations was a bright young chap who, a few years ago, the police and the family at home were ready to hand over to a reformatory, partly in the hope that he might be influenced by whatever corrective methods were employed there, and partly to be rid of him. A few little misdemeanours had incurred the displeasure of the authorities at home and at the city hall. Then the boy was put on his mettle, went back to school with a determination, kept well up with his classes and is now in a position to continue studies at the Collegiate Institute. In other words, he is the boy he should always have been. Had a wise handling been bestowed upon his upbringing there would never have been that lapse when the reformatory seemed imminent.

Chief Thompson had just come to the City to take over his work here. One day the boy was brought before him for a slight offence. The police had their thumbs down and were for sending the lad to Toronto. The home folks possibly did not fully understand just plain boy and were not offering a great deal of sympathy for the youngster. The Chief had a little heart to heart talk with him.

Then he called in the home authorities, presented the case in all its aspects to them and solicited their support. The boy was to report to the Chief once a week and as regularly as the seventh day arrived the lad came with his boy story of how he had been conducting himself, what difficulties he met with, and so on. Only the Chief and the boy know what passed between them. About a year slipped by when the Chief assured his protege that he need not call any longer, that he was looking at things in the right light, and was determined to make good. And since that time there has never been anything heard from the boy but favourable tidings, culminating a few weeks ago when his name appeared in the list of successful entrance students. Chief Thompson casually scanned the list and his eye must have rested for a moment at that particular name.

SEWER RATE IS LOW AT 52 CENTS

Frontage Charge for Construction Work Was Fixed When Cost Was Lower

MAY BE RAISED

It is likely that the frontage rate for sewer connection will be raised by the Board of Works in the near future. The cost of laying a sewer is paid partly by a frontage tax and partly from the general finances of the City. The rate fixed on property some years ago was obtained by taking an average cost of sewer work for several years. But since that time there have been general increases in wages, cost of material and other incidentals entering into the work. Engineer Parsons pointed out at a recent meeting of the Council that the fixed frontage charge of 52c a foot was certainly not in the City's favour, and that the rate should be increased in proportion to the recent increases in the cost of the work. The question is one to be taken up by the Board of Works, and they have already voiced their intention of looking into it.

TORONTO CITY HYDRO SUES PROVINCE

The Question of Control of Rates in Toronto for Hydro Not Yet Settled

Permission has been asked by the local Hydro Board from the Attorney-General's Department to enter a friendly suit against the Provincial Hydro-Electric Commission whether or not the Provincial body has any authority under the law to order the local Board to reduce its rates.

The Provincial Board issued instructions to the Toronto Board to reduce its rates by 10 per cent. This was to go into effect on the first of June. Meantime the penalty of $100 a day adds up to the sum of $5,700.

The permission of the Attorney-General cannot be obtained until the Attorney-General returns to his office. He is ill at present. The Toronto Hydro plead that it is compelled to use its own judgment as to whether or not rates are to be cut.

GENERAL CROP CONDITIONS GOOD IN THE COUNTY

Although a few reports of the army worm have been received from parts of the County, the general crop conditions are said to be decidedly favourable. Fall wheat, oats, barley and roots all promise well. Some of the grains have been cut recently, and the handling of the harvest is beginning to be a problem to some farmers. It was stated to the Examiner that there is no need for experienced farm help being idle while the harvest remains to be taken in. The hay crop was not as heavy as it should have been, but some farmers are not complaining. One man took 75 tons of good hay from a 100-acre stretch, and others have been equally satisfactory. On the whole the farmers are understood to have enjoyed a good year, leaving very little room for complaints.

Water Situation In Port Hope

PORT HOPE, July 27.—Port Hope is stirred to its depths over the water situation. To-day the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board was called on to settle the question of whether or not the town was to be permitted to issue debentures to the extent of $5,000 for waterworks. The debentures were issued in 1911, but they were not placed on the markt until the specified time had elapsed, so this morning the board was asked to extend the time.

The time will not be extended, but sufficient of the debentures will be marketed to cover payments on certain work which has already been done in anticipation that they would issue.

The Medical Officer of Health and his supporters claim that the water served with your meals at Port Hope is dangerous to health, while the Mayor and the members of the local Waterworks Commission are equally certain that this is not the case.

The Provincial Health Department upholds the local Medical Health officer. Dr. McCullough declared that the water is polluted. "We consider that the fact is established that the water is unsafe," he said.

It would appear, however, that already money to the extent of about $2,800 has been borrowed and expended on the system on the guarantee that the debentures should be issued.

"In view of the position the Provincial Board of Health has taken I believe we should stay our hand," said Chairman McIntyre in summing up the decision of the Board. I do not think we should authorize any extensions until they have been approved by the Provincial Board of Health. On proof as to the amount of money expended on the waterworks system on the strength of this by-law we will authorize the issue of debentures sufficient to retire the debt."

Canada Has Passed The Turning Point

Sir Edmund Walker Spreads the Gospel of Optimism and Present is a Time of Waiting.

Discussing conditions in Canada with a representative of a London newspaper, the Financial News, Sir Edmund Walker, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, declared that the Dominion had, in his opinion, reached the turning point toward recovery. He said:

"The present can best be characterised as a waiting time for Canada. We are, as it were, looking round and taking stock, noting the progress made, aiming up future prospects and taking into account the indications of the past.

"The most marked feature, resulting from such a survey, is the knowledge gained that, when Canada was brought face to face with that monetary condition which had been predicted for years past, the country stood the test well. The supreme trial, feared by many and regarded as inevitable by others, has been safely passed through. If you turn your attention to the West to-day, you will observe that the real estate speculation has been completely checked. And this has come about without any serious financial effect from a general point of view. The sudden cessation of activity has on the whole been borne well.

"It is quite useless to speak of the evil of such speculation as recently obtained in our newborn cities. It is pious, of course, to wish that such things might not be, but one might just as well wish that a child would pass through life without ever contracting infantile disease. Although we may hope, we have certainly no right to expect that such exceptions will be made to the general rule.

"The western provinces are after all, only children, liable to all infantile disorders, and certainly the West, with its wonderful future, its sudden opening up, its phenomenal immigration, was the most natural place in the world to be affected by the disease of real estate speculation. Winnipeg in this respect escaped much of the severity occasioned by the epidemic. The city had had previous experience; it had been to a certain extent inoculated, and as a consequence, business in Winnipeg real estate was much more measured and restricted than in any other part of the West.

Tests Begun To Decide If Earth Is Shrinking

NEW YORK, July 25.—Whether the earth is shrinking, as some scientists believe, or is holding its own as to length and breadth, is engaging the serious attention of physicists of Germany and this country. Observations and tests which will be carried on for a month here and abroad, were started recently at Far Rockaway. An observatory has been erected on the ocean front adjoining the new cable station.

At the head of the German party is Professor Albrecht Flotow, superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and leading the American force is Fremont Morse, an assistant superintendent in the same department.

Professor Flotow said many observations are to be made to determine the exact difference of longitude between Washington and Potsdam. Observations in the past, Mr. Flotow said, have suggested that the two continents are coming closer together, the difference in time having become less.

None of the past observations has been direct but Professor Flotow and Mr. Morse feel that those now going on will afford the investigators an opportunity of arriving at a positive conclusion. The present observations compared with those to be made in later years will establish the truth. The immediate practical result will be to determine the exact difference in tiem between the two continents.

Professor Flotow is working in conjunction with Professor Max Schneider, who is now in Potsdam. Professor Flotow will continue his work here until August 110, when he will leave for the other side and Professor Schneider will come here to eliminate errors due to the personal equation.

After twenty nights' more work the scientists will take up the work of a comparison of the records. It will be about one year, Professor Flotow said, before results can be announced.

CHESTERTON'S OPINION OF THE AMERICAN BUSINESS MAN

Standards in This Country Remotely Different From Those in England—Thinks Rockefeller is His Inferior.

G. K. Chesterton does not expect to ever visit America, but he may write a book entitled, "America Unvisited." A chapter on the "American Business Man" may be writen, he says along the following lines:—

"The American business man, as I see him from the advantage of a 3000 mile perspective, is something quite digerent and of great importance. He is in business because that is the great career, and he no more retires before he has to than a soldier leaves the army before he has to. In some curious way, it seems to me that in America, success in business is associated with honour and manliness, and that failure and inability is somehow regarded as dishonourable. I gather from such Americans as I have met, and from the American books and plays that are known to me, and that success in business and fitness for it is in some strange way associated with virlity.

"A strong business man is regarded as a type most appealing to American women. Isn't that true? There is something honourable about the wounds of Wall Street. Isn't there? There is something fine about the fatigue after the battle of business. I am told that the plays and other entertainments are especially designed in honour of this fatigue. It is a remarkable standard to have established itself.

"There is nothing remotely like it in England. That idea of business simply doesn't exist. If young So-and-So undertakes the management of a mine, and makes a dismal failuro, it occurs to no one to think the less of him on that account. 'Dear young So-and-So. Charming fellow! Naturally he wouldn't have made a success of a mine. He is so clever. Did you ever hear what he said last Thursday afternoon?' Why, I doubt if his failure would lower him in any one's eyes, and I am perfectly sure it would not prevent his being given the next mine to manage—especially if it were a Government office. That standard is simply not understood here.

"I imagine that if you penetrated down through all the accumulations to the soul—if it still exsts—of the Hon. Mr. Balfour or any other of our big politicians and English minglers with English men you would find that he judged them by the old standard of the duel. It would be, in the last analysis, a question of whether the man would funk in a fight.

"Of this strange standard I detect in America I would not speak, please unde rstand, in terms of good or bad. But I will say that I believe it to be unfortunate for the state—unfortunate as a commercial substitution for the old manly ambitions. And that is because, with such standards guiding, it seems to me that accident must play too large a part in the affairs of men, too large a part in fixing the grades of influence. Who does not then come to the top and hold away, not by authority, which is something delegated and acknowledged, but, by power which is accidental, unrestrained, and maybe accompanied by more than ordinary human unscrupulousness? Who is this Mr. Rockefeller? Of course, I do not know him and I may, in my idea of him, be unjust. Perhaps he is destined to be a saint in the next world. But from what I gather, I am rather inclined to suspect that he is inferior to me. No, I cannot applaud a standard which would seem to put power in the place of authority—authority, which is the meaning of kings and popes. When power rules in place of authority you have moral disorder. For power, my friend, is the opposite of authority."

He wanted to explain that dictum and he did it with a twinkle in his eyes.

"If a rhinoceros should come in the door of this restaurant, it would have power here, but before it could reach that little glass partition I should hasten to assure it that it had no authority."

BOATING AND CAUTION.

(London Free Press.).....

It would be unfortunate in the extreme if the people were made afraid to avail themselves of the delight and advantages of the water. Better that they should be encouraged in its health-giving pleasures, not discouraged. But first they must be proficient in boating before intrusted with boats where the water is treacherous. And because of the sometimes paralyzing effect of the water upon the human muscles and the frailty of human strength, there should always be the means of rescue at hand for the bather.

Forecast of Autumn Colours

Cubist and futurist colours have had their way, and with the coming of autumn, gowns and hats alike, will become sombre in tone with black and white predominating. Paris has lased the decree and who shall gainsay the rulngs of the Queen of Fashion herself

For those who are not fond of the magpie costumes there are some wondrously rich and beautiful shades that will be much in vogue during the first cool days.

Very deep blue with a lavender cast to it as well as navy blue and a new rich shade of peacock blue will be much in favour according to the great designers of France, while 25 shades of green have the seal of august approval set upon them. These greens range all the way from the pale tint of a primrose stem down to the darkest shade of olive, so that every woman may have a green gown that is becoming. Lime green, emerald, a shimmering greyish green, reseda, hunter's green, the tint of an oakleaf and a strange copper shade will all be much in evidence, though more for afternoon gowns than for street wear.

Two new and very popular shades are named for the homely eggplant rhubarb, the former being a purple very much in favour for older women, while the rhubarb brown is exquisite though its name is a mystery since it does not in the least suggest the delectable plant we eat in the springtime.

Deep wine and garnet shades of red will be far more in favour than the brighter geranium reds of the summer, while terra cotta and a very deep magenta are also to be noted in the autumn costumes just now being displayed in Paris.

There is, of course, the new tango red a very deep copper colour with gold lights in it, and the new steel grey and "graphite" shades that will be much in favour during the winter months.

Black will, however, predominate over all these colours and everyone's wardrobe must have in it at least one black frock and one black hat.

COMPLAINS OF BAD TREATMENT

"Indignant Englishman" Gives Emphatic Voice to Grievance

Dear Editor,—I should take it as a great favour if you would grant me a space in your valuable paper to give voice to a grievance which I think ought to be exposed to the public. I received information that there was work some 60 miles out of Peterborough. I, with a number of others, was sent out with the understanding that there was a season's work for us. After paying our own expense out and walking 25 miles, on letter in which it was stated that old we were not wanted, and so had the pleasure of walking another 25 miles to the boat through the pouring rain. I have since interviewed the employing agent. This man told me he was told to send out as many men as he possibly could. He also showed us the letter in which it stated that old countrymen were not worth their fare and no good at work. Now, sir, as an old country man, together with the rest, I strongly protest, being an experienced man with both axe and saw, and am not afraid to work, no matter what at. I consider it a very unmanly action on the part of the contractor in trailing men out to spend their last couple of dollars on fare and having to walk in the scorching sun during the day and to sleep in the bush during the night, only to find on our arrival at camp that we were not wanted. That meant another 25 miles' walk through the pouring rain to the boat and some who were unfortunate in not having their return fare for boat and train, were compelled to do the 60 miles on foot.

Now, I consider that it only a person without principles whatever who would serve men such a trick. I myself am proud to think that I am an old country man. This contractor says an Englishman is not worth the fare and no good at work. I issue this challenge to him that I will work alongside of him at any work he chooses to prove that an old country chooses, to prove that an old country worthy of some consideration.

AN INDIGNANT ENGLISHMAN.

P.S.—An answer to this letter through this paper will be acceptable.

IN HONOUR OF CHAMPLAIN

A Seasonable Proposal by Dr. G. S. Cameron

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In 1911, when I had the honour of being appointed to the Presidency of the Canadian Club, I brought before that body a matter, which, to some of us, appeared of particular historical importance to this section of Ontario. I refer to the trip which the great explorer, Champlain, made from Lake Simcoe, through the waters of the Kawartha Lakes, through what is now the City of Peterborough and on down the Trent waters to Lake Ontario.

This visit of Champlain was the advent of the white man into this portion of Canada, and was made in the month of Semptember, 1615. Next year (1915) will mark the 300th anniversary.

The thought has occurred to me that as we are going to consider the celebration of the completion of the Trent Canal System we might consider this historical fact and while we mark the consummation of a great commercial enterprise can we not at the same time pay honour to the memory of the original pathfinder.

Our suggestion three years ago was that some suitable tablet be put in some public place.

Yours faithfully,

G. Stewart Cameron.

July 27th, 1914.

NOT A VITAL SPOT.

French soldiers are going to wear grey trousers instead of the present red ones. The idea is that the red ones are too easily seen at a distance, and make a splendid mark for an enemy. Well, mighty few soldiers get killed from being shot in the pants.

SALT FOR SHEEP

Salt is about as necessary to the system of sheep as food. Sheep are best judges of how much salt they need, hence it should be placed where they can reach it at all times. The old time way of regularly salting them is all right, but it is better to give them access to it at will. Where sheep are not salted regularly they are liable to partake of too much of it at a time, and sometimes dropsical conditions are the result.
The ash of the blood of a sheep contains nearly 60 per cent. of salt. The effect of salt on sheep is to give tone to the organism. Its scarcity in the blood means a relaxation of vital energy and an opportunity for the development of parasitic organisms. It is said that in Spain where sheep are kept in the neighborhood of salt hills or sea salt they thrive better than in any other situations. In France in the neighborhood of the sea coast and the salt regions of the north the sheep give more and better wool and the mutton is more highly esteemed than that from other localities. Where sheep are pastured near the sea they naturally do not require so much salt as in more interior regions.—"Shepherd Boy" in Modern Sheep.

SEASON OF WEDDINGS

This is the season for weddings. There is an old adage which runs like this, "Happy is the bride the sun shines on." That may be true or not, but this we all know through rain or shine that bride is happy who knows that all the details pertaining to the wedding are satisfactorily arranged, whether the wedding be an elaborate one or a simple one.

A CHURCH CEREMONY.
If the ceremony is in the church, the ushers must be there before the guests. Pews are reserved in the middle aisle for relatives and intimate friends. The ushers should have a list of those who are to be given special seats. The bride's mother and other members of the families are escorted to the front pews. Pews on the left are for the bride's relatives and the right for the relatives of the bridegroom.

HAIL THE BRIDE.
The bride goes to the church in a carriage with her father. If there is only one bridesmaid she comes with the bride; if several bridesmaids they come in a carriage provided by the bride's father, and they await the bride in the porch of the church.
The groom and his best man arrive at the church shortly before the bridal party. They follow the minister from the vestry, and stand looking towards the door waiting for the bride.
When there are two or three bridesmaids, the ushers lead the procession, two by two, followed by the bridesmaids two and two. The maid of honor walks alone in advance of the bride, who comes up the aisle leaning on the arm of her father, or nearest relative. At the altar steps the ushers separate from right to left; the bridesmaids walk forward going to each side, the maid of honor taking the place at the left of where the bride will stand. The bridegroom receives the bride from her father, who then retires and stands behind the bridal party. When the clergyman asks, "Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?" the father steps forward and places the right hand of the bride in the hand of the clergyman, who places it in the hand of the bridegroom. Having finished his part the father retires to the front seat where the bride's mother sits, and he escorts her from the church.
On leaving the church the newly-married couple lead the way followed by the bridesmaids and relatives. At the house the bridal party stand to receive the congratulations, until all the guests have arrived from the church.
"O, Promise Me," by DeKoven, "All Mine Alone," by Phillips; "Love's Coronation," and "Beloved, it is Morn," by Aylward; "O, Perfect Love," by Ham. These are all suitable songs for either a house or church wedding, while the popularity of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," and the "Wedding March from Wagner's Lohengrin," never seem to wane.

HOUSE WEDDINGS.
At a home wedding the order of entering the room is just the same as in a church. The guests are received by the bride's mother. The father does not appear until he brings in the bride. An aisle may be formed by having two white ribbons fastened at the door way and carried by the ushers to the place of the ceremony. Through this aisle the bridal party may advance.
Simplicity is the chief aim at a house wedding. If cushions are to be used for the bride and groom to kneel upon during the service, they should be put in place before the guests arrive, and quietly removed afterwards. During the ceremony the bridal party stand with their backs to the guests, the minister facing as in the church. After the ceremony the minister congratulates the couple and retires, then they turn around to be greeted by their relatives and friends.

THE TOASTS.
The matter of arranging the toasts is often a serious problem, especially when there are a lot of relatives present. The outline indicated is the order generally followed:
The oldest friend of the family, or the officiating clergyman proposes the toast of the bride and groom.
The groom returns thanks for himself and his wife, and proposes the toast to the bridesmaids.
The "best man" speaks for the bridesmaids.
The same old friend or another proposes the toast of the bride's parents.
The father of the bride returns thanks and proposes the toast to the parents of the bridegroom.
The father of the groom answers the toast.
Other toasts are optional but the officiating clergyman should not be forgotten.
When the repast is ended the bride usually retires and changes her wedding gown for her travelling suit. After the bridal couple are gone the friends linger, looking at the gifts and chatting with the parents and other guests.

PLANS WERE LONG LAID

Germany and Austria Are Apparently Working Together Without a Hitch—Britain in Gloom

LITTLE ENTHUSIASM

LONDON, July 29. — The Austro-Hungarian Government declared war against Servia yesterday by a manifesto which is one of the briefest of momentous documents in history.

Germany paved the way for this declaration by announcing her rejection of the British scheme to bring four powers together in conference for mediation. Germany explained to the public that she could not be expected to submit her acts to an European council as though she were one of the Balkan states.

This announcement preceded the declaration of war by only two hours, and gave an exhibition of the perfectly harmonious working of the partnership between the two nations which stood firm together through the Bosnian crisis of 1909.

The centre of interest has shifted sharply to St. Petersburg, which holds the decision whether an European war which probably would shift the balance of power, if not rearrange the entire map of Europe, is to break out. Negotiations are on foot there between the Russian Foreign Minister, Sergius Sasonoff, and the Austrian ambassador, which are designed to "localize" the conflict.

The nature and progress of these conversations are wrapped in the thickest mystery but they are the last plank the neutral powers are clinging to in face of a war which may wash all under.

There is no doubt in British minds that Austria had fully resolved to utilize the provocation afforded by the Sarayevo murders to wipe the slate clean of all accounts against Servia, and served an ultimatum on her which was designed to have no result save war.

The next news expected is the occupation of Belgrade, and that even now may be an accomplished fact. Reports of small encounters along the front have been permitted to pass the censor, but military experts here believe that mobilization has already been effected and that a thoroughly planned campaign is well under way.

There is absolutely no enthusiasm in England for war—no desire for this particular war which confronts Great Britain—yet there is general belief that her obligations to her partners, in the triple entente, as well as her interests as a great European power, will force her to support Russia and France in any steps they may take.

The dark developments of the day were received without excitement but with the deepest gloom. The immediate effect of the war cloud is likely to lead to the settlement of Home Rule since all parties feel that domestic dissensions must be settled at all costs in the face of peril from without. The fierce demands of the Conservative papers for a general election have been wholly hushed. The Foreign Office has become the most important branch of the Government, and no one wants to risk the possibility of losing Sir Edward Grey, with his exceptional influence in the councils of Europe.

The Government is confronting the situation with perfect calmness. There is no sign of unusual events at the Foreign Office, except that the Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, who seldom visits that office, called there last evening and conferred with Sir Arthur Nicolson, Permanent Under-Secretary, and the Austrian Ambassador, came to make formal announcement of the declaration of war.

The ships of the British fleet are taking on supplies. Soon after it became definitely known that Austria and Servia were at war all the officers ashore at Portland and Weymouth were summoned back to their ships.

Sulman's Majority Thirteen.

CHATHAM, Ont., July 29.—Judge Bell has rendered his decision on the recount in West Kent, and the returns now show that G. W. Sulman, the Conservative candidate, is elected by a majority of thirteen.

Declaration of War Causes Chaos in Various Exchanges

LONDON, July 29. — Expectation of war between Austria-Hungary and Servia, and its subsequent declaration yesterday, demoralized the markets of the world.

War was not declared until after the bourses of Europe had closed, but in London, Berlin and Paris, panicky conditions and severe declines in securities anticipated the announcement. At all three capitals bonds of the Governments of Europe, which have been steadily dropping, registered further losses.

In Vienna the bourse had been closed since Saturday, but there was a heavy run on the Austrian savings bank, the most important in the dual monarchy.

In Paris the commerciale exchange suspended all dealings in grains, sugar and other commodities and exchange on London and discount rates for the first time in years were not quoted.

In Berlin runs on savings banks begun Monday grew heavier.

In London, after the close of the stock market, stocks tumbled on the curb

News of the declaration reached this country while markets were in session. With it came an avalanche of selling of the New York Stock Exchange. Leading stocks slumped from 5 to 20 points and conditions paralleled in their intensity the domestic panic of 1907.

The stock exchanges of Toronto and Montreal suspended their sessions.

On the Chicago Board of Trade there was a tremendous rise in wheat and the wildest trading in many years. This was predicted on the expectation that war in Europe would create a huge market for American grain. Other foodstuffs also advanced. These conditions were reflected in all the produce markets in the country.

On the other hand, smart declines were recorded in cotton futures at New York and New Orleans. Coffee also slumped, due, it was reported, to fears that contemplated financing in Europe of the Brazilian crop would fail.

CROP REPORT GLOOMY.

Drought and Heat Are Threatening Saskatchewan Yield.

REGINA, July 29. — The official crop report of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, based on conditions on July 25, as reported from all parts of the province by telegraph, states that crops that were good at the date of the last report are now not so good, while those that previously were poor are now worse. Very hot and dry weather is the universal report, and rain and cooler weather are needed.

A few districts report conditions as still being very good, while most state that crops are maturing too fast and in consequence are not filling well. Flax, on the whole, is standing the weather conditions best and in some dryer districts will be almost the only crop.

Harvesting will commence in some districts by Aug 5, and will be general by Aug. 10 to 15.

Hail damage has been comparatively light, storms being reported from Vibank, Canora, Dubuc, Manor and Sheho. There is practically no damage from any causes other than drought and hail.

Reports from the southeastern crop district indicate an average yield of 18 bushels of wheat per acre, the east central district reports 17 bushels, the central district 15 bushels and the northern district 20 bushels.

These districts include most of the best crops.

GIRL'S BODY DISCOVERED

Remains of Blanche Yorke Are Found Buried in Cellar of Dr. Robinson's House

HE IS MISSING

TAMWORTH, Ont., July 29. — A revolting crime has been unearthed in the discovery of the body of Miss Blanche Yorke, the dressmaker who had been missing from her home since July 8, in the cellar of the house recently occupied by Dr. C. K. Robinson, who has been missing for some days, late yesterday afternoon.

That the girl met a violent death is practically certain, but whether it was the result of actual foul play or the sad sequence of an operation is yet to be proved, but the position in which the body was found demonstrates that a deliberate attempt was made to dispose of the body after death, or hide it sufficiently to ward off suspicion until the guilty party or parties could show a clean pair of heels.

Yesterday's ghastly discovery was the culmination of a series of searches, and consequent wild-goose chases in pursuit of questionable clues all over the country. The girl had been in the habit of attending Dr. Robinson for treatment, and he was the last person she was known to have visited previous to her disappearance, but he blandly pushed aside any inquisitive questions, although a search of his house was made by Messrs. A. B. Carscallen and Henry Richardson and Provincial Inspector Miller, and the suspicions were temporarily removed.

The levying of a distress warrant was the initial means of the discovery. Messrs. Taylor & Co. and W. B. Richardson, with W. P. Carscallen, the bailiff, were making a seizure of furniture at the vacated Robinson home for non-payment of debt. When proceeding to the bedrooms to remove the mattresses, etc., Mr. Taylor noticed blood stains on the bedrail, and pulling up the blind, saw larger blood stains on the floor.

Messrs. Edward and Samuel Yorke, brothers of the deceased, were immediately informed of the suspicions, and a thorough search of the whole house was made by the party. Reaching the cellar they found charred portions of a mattress, while unburnt sections were seen covered with blood.

Turning over some bones, Edward Yorke noticed a peculiar odor, and immediately exclaimed: "I have found something." The investigators then threw aside a low pile of wood and rags, and commenced digging out the earth, and the body was found three inches below the surface. The news of the discovery soon spread, and a large crowd assembled around the house.

Crown Attorney C. H. Preston and Coroner Cowan, both residents of Napanee, were notified and left for the scene. In the meantime Dr. Wilson of this town was requested by Coroner Cowan to take charge of the remains and see that they were left intact until he arrived.

It was later declared that an inquest will be opened to-day.

Suspicion has now settled on the shoulders of the occupant of the house, Dr. C. K. Robinson, who was last heard of in Kingston after his disappearance from this place two weeks ago. Mrs. Robinson was said to be lying seriously ill in that city. It is understood that their apprehension will be sought, although no definite action can be presaged until after the inquest.

The whole countryside is amazed at the trend of recent events in connection with the tragedy. Dr. Robinson was comparatively unknown in the district, having moved here from Kingston only six months ago. He had been on friendly terms with the residents and his actions, previous to the disappearance of the girl, had never been of a nature to give rise to gossip or scandal. The girl, on the other hand, was well connected and respected, and the nature of her death has cast a gloomy shadow over the whole of the community.

On the 16th Dr. Robinson left town for the purpose, he said, of visiting his wife, who was ill in the Hotel Dieu in Kingston. When he boarded the train he stated that he would return the same night. His continued absence led to enquiries being made in Kingston, with the result that he is not known to have been there at all. Nothing was seen of him at the hospital several days previous to the disappearance of Miss Yorke.

Since then nothing has been seen of him, and it has been established that he did not go to Kingston at all. Robinson is a young man of about 35 years of age, and has just started in private practice, having graduated from Queen's University two years ago. For a time he was house surgeon in St. Luke's Hospital in Ottawa, but left there to take a position in a North Ontario lumber camp, coming from there to Tamworth.

Inspector Miller to Investigate.

TORONTO, July 29.—Immediately on the receipt of the news by the Attorney-General's Department, the case was placed in the hands of Supt. J. H. Rogers of the provincial police. Mr. Rogers despatched Inspector John Miller to Tamworth last night, and he will start a thorough investigation to-day. "Further steps to be taken will be determined on Inspector Miller's report," observed Supt. Rogers in response to inquiries last night.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

CHAPTER V.
EXPLORATION.

Came now the evening, as they sat and talked together, talked long and earnestly, there within that ruined place. Too eager for some knowledge of the truth, they, to feel hunger or to think of their lack of clothing.

Chairs they had none, nor even so much as a broom to clean the floor with. But Stern, first-off, had wrenched a marble slab from the stairway.

And with this plank of stone still strong enough to serve, he had swept all one corner of the office floor free of rubbish. This gave them a preliminary camping-place wherein to take their bearings and discuss what must be done.

"So then," the engineer was saying as the dusk grew deeper, "so then, we'll apparently have to make this building our headquarters for a while.

"As nearly as I can figure, this is about what must have happened. Some sudden, deadly, numbing plague or cataclysm must have struck the earth, long, long ago.

"It may have been an almost instantaneous onset of some new and highly fatal micro-organism, propagating with such marvellous rapidity that it swept the world clean in a day—doing its work before any resistance could be organized or thought of.

"Again, some poisonous gas may have developed, either from a fissure in the earth's crust, or otherwise. Other hypotheses are possible, but of what practical value are they now?

"We only know that here, in this uppermost office of the Tower, you and I have somehow escaped with only a long period of completely suspended animation. How long? God alone knows! That's a query I can't even guess the answer to as yet."

"Well, to judge by all the changes," Beatrice suggested thoughtfully, "it can't have been less than a hundred years. Great Heavens!" and she burst into a little satiric laugh. "Am I a hundred and twenty-four years old? Think of that!"

"You underestimate," Stern answered. "But no matter about the time question for the present; we can't solve it now.

"Neither can we solve the other problem about Europe and Asia and all the rest of the world. Whether London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, and every other city, every other land, all have shared this fate we simply don't know.

"All we can have is a feeling of strong probability—that life human life, I mean, is everywhere extinct—save right here in this room!

"Otherwise, don't you see, men would have made their way back here again, back to New York, where all these incalculable treasures seem to have perished, and—"

He broke short off. Again, far off, they heard a faint re-echoing roar. For a moment they both sat speechless. What could it be? Some distant wall toppling down? A hungry beast scenting its prey? They could not tell. But Stern smiled.

"I guess," said he, "guns will be about the first thing I'll look for, after food. There ought to be good hunting down in the jungles of Fifth Avenue and Broadway!

"You shoot, of course? No? Well, I'll soon teach you. Lots of things both of us have got to learn now. No end of them!"

He rose from his place on the floor, went over to the window and stood for a minute peering out into the gloom. Then suddenly he turned.

"What's the matter with me, anyhow?" he exclaimed with irritation. "What right have I to be staying here theorising, when there's work to do? I ought to be busy this very minute!

"In some way or other I've got to find food, clothing, tools, arms—a thousand things. And above all, water! And here I've been speculating about the past, fool that I am!"

"You—you aren't going to leave me—not to-night?" faltered the girl.

Stern seemed not to have heard her, so strong the imperative of action lay upon him now. He began to pace the floor, sliding and stumbling through the rubbish, a singular figure in his tatters and with his patriarchal hair and beard, a figure dimly seen by the faint light that still gloomed through the window.

"In all that wreckage down below," said he, as though half to himself, "in all that past congeries of ruin which once was called New York, surely enough must still remain intact for our small needs. Enough till we can reach the and, the country, and raise food of our own!"

"Don't go now!" pleaded Beatrice. She, too, stood up, and out she stretched her hands to him. "Don't please! We can get along some way or other till morning. At least, I can!"

"No, no, it isn't right! Down in the shops and stores, who knows but we might find—"

"But you're unarmed! And in the streets—in the forest, rather—"

"Listen!" he commanded rather abruptly. "This is no time for hesitating or for weakness. I know you'll stand your share of all that we must suffer, dare and do together.

"Some way or other I've got to make you comfortable. I've got to locate food and drink immediately. Got to get my bearings. Why, do you think I'm going to let you, even for one night, go fasting and thirsty, sleep on bare cement, and all that sort of thing?

"If so, you're mistaken! No, you must spare me for an hour or two. Inside of that time I ought to make a beginning!"

"A whole hour"

"Two would probably be nearer it. I promise to be back inside of that time."

"But," and her voice quivered just a trifle, "but suppose some wolf or bear—"

"Oh, I'm not quite so foolhardy as all that!" he retorted. "I'm not going to venture outside till to-morrow. My idea is that I can find at least a few essentials right here in this building.

"It's a city in itself—or was. Offices, stores, shops, everything right here together in a lump! It can't possibly take me very long to go down and rummage out something for your comfort.

"Now that the first shock and surprise of our awakening are over, we can't go on in this way, you know—h'm!—dressed in—well, such exceedingly primitive garb!"

Silently she looked at his dim figure in the dusk. Then she stretched out her hand.

"I'll go too," said she quite simply.

"You'd better stay. It's safer here."

"No, I'm going."

"But if we run into dangers?"

"Never mind. Take me with you."

Over to her he came. He took her hand. In silence he pressed it. Thus for a moment they stood. Then, arousing himself to action, he said: "First of all, a light."

"A light? How can you make a light? Why, there isn't a match left anywhere in this whole world."

"I know, but there are other things. Probably my chemical flasks and vials aren't injured. Glass is practically imperishable. And if I'm not mistaken, the bottles must be lying somewhere in that rubbish heap over by the window."

He left her wondering, and knelt among the litter. For a while he silently delved through the triturated bits of punky wood and rust-red metal that now represented the remains of his chemical cabinet.

All at once he exclaimed: "Here's one! And here's another! This certainly is luck? H'm! Shouldn't wonder if I got almost all of them back."

One by one he found a score of thick, ground-glass vials. Some were broken, probably by the shock when they and the cabinet had fallen, but a good many still remained intact.

Among these were the two essential ones. By the last dim ghost of light through the window, and by the sense of touch, Stern was able to make out the engraved symbols "P" and "S" on these bottles.

"Phosphorus and sulphur," he commented. "Well, what more could I reasonably ask? Here's alcohol, too, hermetically sealed. Not too bad, eh?"

While the girl watched, with wondering admiration, Stern thought hard a moment. Then he set to work.

First he took a piece of the corroded metal framework of the cabinet, a steel strip about eighteen inches long, frail in places, but still sufficiently strong to serve his purpose.

Tearing off some rags from his coat-sleeve, he wadded them together into a ball as big as his fist. Around this ball he twisted the metal strip, so that it formed at once a holder and a handle for the rag-mass.

With considerable difficulty he worked the glass stopper out of the alcohol bottle, and with the fluid saturated the rags. Then, on a clear bit of the floor, he spilled out a small quantity of the phosphorus and sulphur.

"This beats getting fire by friction all hollow," he cheerfully remarked. "I've tried that, too, and I guess it's only in books a white man ever succeeds at it. But this way, you see, it's simplicity itself."

Very moderate friction, with a bit of wood from the wreckage of the door, sufficed to set the phosphorus ablaze. Stern heaped on a few tiny lumps of sulphur. Then, coughing as the acrid fumes arose from the sputter of blue flame, he applied the alcohol-soaked torch.

Instantly a puff of fire shot up, colorless and clear, throwing no very satisfactory light, yet capable of dispelling the thickest o fthe gloom.

The blaze showed Stern's eager face, long-bearded and dusty, as he bent over this crucial experiment.

The girl, watching closely, felt a strange new thrill of confidence and solace. Some realization of the engineer's resourcefulness came to her, and in her heart she had confidence that, though the whole wide world had crumbled into ruin, yet he would find a way to smooth her path, to be a strength and refuge for her.

But Stern had no time for any but matters of intensest practicality. From the floor he arose, holding the flambeau in one hand, the bottle of alcohol in the other.

"Come now," bade he, and raised the torch on high to light her way. "You're still determined to go?"

For an answer she nodded. Her eyes gleamed by the uncanny light.

And so, together, he leading out of the room and along the wrecked hall, they started on their trip of exploration out into the unknown.

THE MAN WHO WOULD BE KING

By Rudyard Kipling

RUDYARD KIPLING

IRVIN S. COBB

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Irvin S. Cobb, was "The Man Who Would Be King," by Rudyard Kipling. Three other noted authors think this is the best short story.

PART II.

THE wheel of the world swings through the same phases. Summer passed, and winter there after, and came and passed again. The daily paper continued and I with it, and upon the third summer there fell a hot night, a night insane and a strained waiting for something to be telegraphed from the other side of the world, entirely as had happened before. At 8 o'clock I cried, "Print off!" and turned to go, when there crept to my chair what was left of a man. He was bent into a circle, his head was sunk between his shoulders, and he moved his feet one over the other like a bear. "Can you give me a drink?" he whimpered. "For the Lord's sake, give me a drink!"

I went back to the office, the man following with a groan of pain, and I turned up the lamp.

I looked at him intently. Once before had I seen eyebrows that met over the nose in an inch broad black band, but for the life of me I could not tell where.

"I don't know you," I said, handing him the whisky. "What can I do for you?"

He took a gulp of the spirit raw and shivered in spite of the suffocating heat.

"I've come back," he repeated. "And I was the king of Kafiristan—me and Dravot—crowned kings we was! In this office we settled it—you setting there and giving us the books. I am Peachey—Peachey Taliaferro Carnehan, and you've been sitting here ever since—oh, Lord! Poor, poor, Dan, that would never take advice, not though I begged of him!"

"Take the whisky," I said, "and take your own time. Tell me all you can recollect of everything from beginning to end. You got across the border on your camels, Dravot dressed as a mad priest and you his servant. Do you remember that?"

I leaned forward and looked into his face as steadily as I could. He dropped one hand upon the table and I grasped it by the wrist. It was twisted like a bird's claw, and upon the back was a ragged, red, diamond shaped scar.

"No, don't look there. Look at me," said Carnehan.

"You went as far as Jagdallak with that caravan," I said at a venture. "To Jagdallak, where you turned off to try to get into Kafiristan."

"No, we didn't neither. What are you talking about? We turned off before Jagdallak, because we heard the roads was good. But they wasn't good enough for our two camels—mine and Dravot's. When we left the caravan Dravot took off all his clothes and mine too and said we would be heathen, because the Kafirs didn't allow Mohammedans to talk to them. So we dressed betwixt and between, and such a sight as Daniel Dravot I never saw yet nor expect to see again. That was in a most mountainous country, and our camels couldn't go along any more because of the mountains. They were tall and black, and coming home I saw them fight like wild goats—there are lots of goats in Kafiristan."

"Take some more whisky," I said very slowly. "What did you and Daniel Dravot do when the camels could go no further because of the rough roads that led into Kafiristan?"

"What did which do? There was a party called Peachey Taliaferro Carnehan that was with Dravot. Shall I tell you about him? He died out there in the cold. Slap from the bridge fell old Peachey, turning and twisting in the air like a penny whirligig that you can sell to the ameer.

"And then these camels were no use, and Peachey said to Dravot, 'For the Lord's sake let's get out of this before our heads are chopped off!' And with that they killed the camels all among the mountains, not having anything in particular to eat, but first they took off the boxes with the guns and the ammunition till two men came along driving four mules. Dravot up and dances in front of them, singing, 'Sell me four mules.' Says the first man, 'If you are rich enough to buy you are rich enough to rob.' But before ever he could put his hand to his knife Dravot breaks his neck over his knee, and the other party runs away. So Carnehan loaded the mules with the rifles that was taken off the camels, and together we starts forward into those bitter cold mountainous parts and never a road broader than the back of your hand"—

He paused for a moment while I asked him if he could remember the nature of the country through which he had journeyed.

"I am telling you as straight as I can, but my head isn't as good as it might be. They drove nails through it to make me hear better how Dravot died. We came to a big level valley all among the mountains, and the mules were near dead, so we killed them, not having anything in special for them or us to eat.

"Then ten men with bows and arrows run down that valley, chasing twenty men with bows and arrows, and the row was tremenjus. They was fair men—fairer than you or me—with yellow hair and remarkable well built. Says Dravot, unpacking the guns: 'This is the beginning of the business. We'll fight for the ten men.' And with that he fires two rifles at the twenty men and drops one of them at 200 yards from the rock where we was sitting. The other men began to run, but Carnehan and Dravot sits on the boxes picking them off at all ranges up and down the valley. Then we goes up to the ten men that had run across the snow, too, and they fires a footy little arrow at us. Dravot he shoots above their heads and they all falls down flat. Then he walks over them and kicks them, and then he lifts them up and shakes hands all round to make them friendly like. He calls them and gives them the boxes to carry and waves his hand for all the world as though he was king already. They takes the boxes and him across the valley and up the hill into a pine wood on the top, where there was half a dozen big stone idols. Dravot he goes to the biggest—a fellow they call Imbra—and lays a rifle and a cartridge at his feet, rubbing his nose respectful with his own nose, patting him on the head and saluting in front of it. He turns round to the men and nods his head, and says: 'That's all right. I'm in the know, too, and all these old jimjams are my friends.' Then he opens his mouth and points down it, and when the first man brings him food he says 'No,' and when the second man brings him food he says 'No,' but when one of the old priests and the boss of the village brings him food he says 'Yes' very haughtily, and eats it slow. That was how we came to our first village."

"Take some more whisky and go on," I said. "That was the first village you came into. How did you get to the king?"

"I wasn't king," said Carnehan. "Dravot he was the king, and a handsome man he looked with the gold crown on his head and all. Him and the other party stayed in that village, and every morning Dravot sat by the side of old Imbra, and the people came and worshiped. That was Dravot's order. Then a lot of men came into the valley, and Carnehan and Dravot picks them off with the rifles before they know where they was, and runs down into the valley and up again the other side and finds another village, same as the first one, and the people all falls down flat on their faces, and Dravot says, 'Now, what is the trouble between you two villages?' and the people points to a woman, as fair as you or me, that was carried off, and Dravot takes her back to the first village and counts up the dead—eight there was. For each dead man Dravot pours a little milk on the ground and waves his arms like a whirligig and 'That's all right,' says he. Then he and Carnehan takes the big boss of each village by the arm and walks them down into the valley and shows them how to scratch a line with a spear right down the valley and gives each a sod of turf from both sides o' the line. Then we asks the names of things in their lingo—bread and water and fire and idols and such, and Dravot leads the priests of each village up to the idol and says he must sit there and judge the people, and if anything goes wrong he is to be shot.

"Next week they was all turning up the land in the valley as quiet as bees. 'That's just the beginning,' says Dravot. 'They think we're gods.' He and Carnehan picks out twenty good men and shows them how to click off a rifle and form—fours and advance in line. He takes out his pipe and his baccy pouch and leaves one at one village and one at the other, and off we two goes to see what was to be done in the next valley. That was all rock, and there was a little village there, and Carnehan says: 'Send 'em to the old valley to plant,' and takes 'em there

TO CHECK A COLT

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. ANY DYSPEPTIC CAN GET WELL
By Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Says Capt. Swan

Life is very miserable to those who suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Sour Stomach and Biliousness. This letter from Captain Swan (one of the best known skippers on the Great Lakes) tells how to get quick relief from Stomach Trouble.

PORT BURWELL, ONT., May 8th, 1913.

"A man has a poor chance of living and enjoying life when he cannot eat. That was what was wrong with me. Loss of appetite and indigestion was brought on by Constipation. I have had trouble with these diseases for years. I lost a great deal of flesh and suffered constantly. For the last couple of years, I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" and have been so pleased with the results that I have recommended them on many occasions to friends and acquaintances. I am sure that "Fruit-a-tives" have helped me greatly. By following the diet rules and taking "Fruit-a-tives" according to directions, any person with Dyspepsia will get benefit".

REV. J. J. HARE, PH.D., Principal.

"Dravot gives out that him and me were gods and sons of Alexander and past grand masters in the craft and was come to make Kafiristan a country where every man should eat in peace and drink in quiet and specially obey us. Then the chiefs came round to shake hands, and they was so hairy and white and fair it was just shaking hands with old friends. We gave them names according as they were like men we had known in India—Billy Fish, Holly Dilworth, Pikky Kergan that was bazaar master when I was at Mhow, and so on, and so on.

"The most amazing miracle was at lodge next night. One of the old priests was watching us continuous and I felt uneasy, for I knew we'd have to fudge the ritual, and I didn't know what the men knew. The old priest was a stranger come in from beyond the village of Bashkai. He fetches a whoop and a howl and tries to overturn the stone that Dravot was sitting on. 'It's all up now,' I says. 'That comes of meddling with the craft without warrant!' Dravot never winked an eye, not when ten priests took and tilted over the grand master's chair—which was to say the stone of Imbra. The priest begins rubbing the bottom end of it to clear away the black dirt, and presently he shows all the other priests the master's mark, same as was on Dravot's apron, cut into the stone. Not even the priests of the temple of Imbra knew it was there. The old chap falls flat on his face at Dravot's feet and kisses 'em. 'Luck again,' says Dravot across the lodge to me; 'they say it's the missing mark that no one could understand the why of. We're more than safe now.' After that Peachey and Dravot raised such as was worthy—high priests and chiefs of faruff villages.

Empty Bags.

Andrew Carnegie once gave a clergyman a donation for his church and at the same time another gift for a brother clergyman who had fallen into destitution.

"But I doubt if he will take this money, Mr. Carnegie," the clergyman said doubtfully. "He is very proud."

"Oh, he'll take it," said the ironmaster. "Poverty destroys pride. How can an empty bag stand upright?"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Two Opinions From the Same Source

A Story For Commencement

By MARGARET C. D... AUX

When a college phenomenon—one of those fellows who stand at the head of their classes and take the prizes—graduates he is seized upon by the faculty for material to supply the waste in their own ranks. Professor Plympton was one of these pieces and from a student was naturally developed into a professor. He went into the world even for a scratch for himself, as most young men are obliged to do. He had passed from one intellectual circle to a higher one.

Professor Plympton was appointed to the chair of mental philosophy at a woman's college. The college is a large one, involving many branches. The professor was fond of dwelling on those features of it that were most capable of exploiting his own original ideas. One day he was lecturing to his class, composed of young ladies from eighteen to twenty-two, when he spoke as follows:

When an idea recurs with the presence of the object remembered it is called remembrance. This brings us to consider memory one of the most important mental faculties. Sometimes this is divine gift of all our sensations, love is to be dependent on the faculty of memory. There are different kinds of love. In this instance I refer to love between sexes—indeed, to that love which endures till death. When a loving husband and wife are parted by death memory alone keeps it alive.

Naturally such discourse attracted the attention of the class. Miss Kitty Werner, who was ready to take advantage of those serious professors to engage the attention of professors with a view to turning it to ridicule, arose and, having been recognized by the professor, asked:

"How do you know that, professor?"

"We know it from cases of the destruction of memory by an injury to the brain. Men have been known to be attacked with this trouble who have forgotten wife and even children."

"But has not the love returned when the brain has been relieved?"

"Certainly."

"Then why do you infer that memory is all that keeps love alive? Has not the love lived during the loss of memory?"

"The condition is peculiar," replied the professor haltingly. "What you refer to is a suspension of memory, not a loss. When memory is restored it goes on working as usual."

"In other words, begins where it left off, I suppose."

"Yes."

"And the love goes on where it left off too?"

"Certainly."

"Then why may not a broken love be reunited, not only in this world, but in another existence?"

The professor colored and said this was but one of a great number of objections that arose in the presentation of any subject. To reply would require much time and his lecture must remain unfinished. With this he proceeded with his subject.

Ten years from the date of the delivery of that lecture Professor Plympton, now a mature man, was sitting beside a lady some ten years his junior, whom he was endeavoring to persuade to become his wife. Neither had been married.

"I have always believed in one love in a lifetime and one love only," said the lady. "I would wish to be convinced that my husband would love me not only through life, but for all eternity."

"I cannot conceive of my ever ceasing to love you."

"Suppose you should meet with an injury to the brain and lose all memory of me. Would that end your love?"

"No; if relieved of the cause of the loss of memory my love would begin again where it left off."

"How about death?"

"The same reasoning would pertain. I would continue to love you though disembodied."

"What has memory to do with love?"

"Nothing. Love is something superhuman; a matter of soul."

The lady made no reply to this at once. On the corner of her lips there was a quirk and in her eyes, which were bent on the floor, a twinkle.

"You thinkers," she said presently, "are apt to think for the time being. These were not your opinions ten years ago."

"Not my opinions ten years ago! What were my opinions ten years ago?"

"You believed that love, or its continuance, rather, was dependent on memory."

"How do you know that I held to such a proposition?"

"Because I was a member of a college class to which you lectured. You said in your lecture that love was broken in upon by loss of memory, and I took issue with you."

A light broke in upon the professor's remembrance. He saw himself a youngster of twenty-five, full of theory and ignorant through inexperience.

"You are the young lady who showed me the fallacy of my reasoning," he exclaimed. "Never in my life have I met with such overwhelming evidence of the superiority of the feminine brain to that of man. It was you who changed my intellectual deductions and it is you who have convinced me through the heart. I love you and shall love you always, both in this world and in the world to come."

She burst into a laugh, but she accepted him.

Humor and Philosophy

PER PARAGRAPHS.

THE very minute we have a case we see that it is different from all others and that no rules apply.

Serenity is the consolation a man has for having reached the condition of indifference.

But, then, a perfectly wise man wouldn't fit conditions, and he would have a most wretched time of it.

There are abundant reasons why all of us should do as we ought, but some of us aren't on speaking terms with them.

It is hard to convince a man that he is it when a bigger man is sitting on him.

Maybe we can't discover the north pole because some Norseman of long ago found it and used it for fuel.

There are people who are nothing if not spectacular, and rarely that.

The canning season being at hand, general nuisances should walk circumspectly.

Why it should be necessary to be uncomfortable in order to be comfortable is one of the inexplicable things.

People usually like to be on the ground when their special form of amusement is going on, but dynamiters are the exception.

No Bond of Sympathy.

An earthquake I have never met
While strolling down the pike,
But am I curious as yet
To know what they are like.
I wouldn't care to call one down
Or try its wrath to stem.
If they will just let me alone
I'll do as much for them.

Some foolish people might desire
An earthquake for a pet,
But that would not appear to me
To be the one best bet.
I'd rather have a poodle dog
To follow me around
Than have the very finest quake
That ever shook the ground.

An earthquake is so very rude;
Ill mannered is no name
For all the capers that it cuts
In working out its game.
When it has in a reckless mood
Mussed up some special spot
The owner of the place observes
His house won't fit his lot.

Experience is very fine—
It helps a man along—
But I will pass the earthquake up
And take some not so strong.
If in advance I can but know
Where it will run amuck
I'll take my family and my grip
And make a graceful duck.

No Visible Supply.

"Do you question my sanity?"

"Well, I might under some circumstances."

"What circumstances?"

"If I were ever to see enough of it to point a question at."

Caustic.

"They say she married a poor man."

"I can well understand that."

"Why?"

"Anybody would feel like exclaiming 'Poor man!' when speaking of the man she married."

Answered.

What statesman large would truckle
Or list to a suggestion
From common people coming?
That low, suggestive chuckle
Is answer to the question,
The situation summing.

When the kidneys fail to purify the blood the poisons left in the system cause pain and suffering, such as backache, lumbago and rheumatism. Read how this skeptic was cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. F. W. Brown, Kingsbury, Que., writes:—"I have been completely cured of backache and lame back by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I also recommended the pills to a man who was a cripple from rheumatism. He was skeptical, as he said that he had tried nearly everything on earth. WAR IS NOW IN FULL SWING

Servian Forces Trying to Cross River Drina Are Vigorously Opposed by Austrians

VIENNA CONFIDENT

VIENNA, July 29.—The Militaerische Rundschau reports sharp fighting along the River Drina, Servian volunteers attempting to cross the river being resolutely opposed by Austrian frontier troops. It also reports that the Servians fired on their own river transports by mistake, killing and wounding a number of Servian soldiers.

It is with a feeling of intense relief that the people in the dual monarchy look forward to the war with Servia, which for several days has seemed inevitable, and which was yesterday announced by formal declaration.

Whether the war will be confined to the two countries cannot yet be said, but the feeling on this point in high official circles is optimistic. Even the certain knowledge, however, that Russia would intervene, would not cause Austria to hesitate a moment or alter her course in the slightest.

The news of the formal declaration of war r through the city before the extra editions of the papers could reach the vendors' hands and was everywhere greeted with a spirit which might be described as close to religious exaltation.

Vienna is absolutely without news of the movements of the troops which the papers are naturally forbidden to print. A sharp censorship has been established over the press, and all means of communication. A great, quiet crowd, which constantly increased in numbers, assembled before the War Ministry, and cheers greeted the appearance of military officers and the Ministry officials. The evening papers published the following inspired statement:

"In well-informed circles the view is held that so far as Sir Edward Grey's proposal is to localize the conflict between Austria-Hungary and Servia, the former can declare herself entirely agreed with Sir Edward Grey's remarks, but regarding what he has said concerning the suppression of military operations, things have proceeded much too far to allow anything to be done in this direction."

Advices from Belgrade say that the Servian capital is now located at Nish, where the Skupshtina (national assembly) met yesterday. All Servians between 18 and 60 years of age, able to bear arms, have been called out, and mobilization is proceeding rapidly, although the peasants who will have to leave their harvesting are reported to be much discontented.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs has addressed a verbal note to the foreign representatives informing them of the declaration of war and declaring that Austria will, on the assumption of similar observances on the part of Servia, adhere to the provisions of The Hague Conference of Oct. 15, 1903, and the declaration of London, of Feb. 26, 1909.

Servian Troops Active.

VIENNA, July 29. — The Militaerische-Rundschau reports active operations of both Servian and Montenegrin troops, which are in close touch at Prizoj, near the frontier of Bosnia.

Demonstration In Diet.

BUDAPEST, July 29.—A great patriotic demonstration took place in the Hungarian Diet yesterday when the royal rescript was read, proroguing Parliament. The Deputies cheered for the king, the country and the army. Speeches were made by prominent deputies during which every patriotic word was loudly applauded.

Italian Warships Recalled.

GLASGOW, July 29.—Three Italian warships visiting the Clyde were ordered yesterday to return immediately to Italian waters.

Demands on Roumania.

ROME, July 29—Authoritative advices received here from Bucharest state that Germany asked for positive assurances from Roumania of her intentions in connection with the Austro-Servian situation.

French Ministers To Confer.

PARIS, July 29. — Rene Viviani, the French Premier, is on board, the battleship La France, in the North Sea to-day, kept in frequent wireless communication with the Foreign Office here. He is returning to France as rapidly as possible.

Abel Ferry, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, left Paris immediately after the Cabinet meeting to meet President Poincare and Premier Viviani at Dunkirk.

A Safe Background.

A man rather untidy in his personal habits was discussing the question of a new waistcoat with a friend.

"What color would you advise?" he asked the friend.

"Why," said the friend, "I'd get one of soup color!"—Saturday Evening Post.

HOW THIN PEOPLE CAN PUT ON FLESH

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are—sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets. Omit the flesh cream rub-ons. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of these a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh, new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flesh stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant, harmless and inexpensive, and all druggists sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back.

HEAD GOT BALD IN PLACES

Very Itchy. When Brushed, Dandruff All Over. Hair Came Out in Great Bunches. Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment Cured Head in Three Weeks.

15 Hallam St., Toronto, Ont.—"About two years ago the dandruff began. My head got worse and scabs formed on it which made it bald in places. It was very itchy and gave me a tendency to scratch it which made it worse. I always had to wear my hat whether in the house at work or out. Whenever I brushed my hair it sent the dandruff all over. The hair came out in great bunches until I was nearly bald and when it was at its worst it came out roots and all.

"I tried —— which made it worse than before. I tried several things after that but they were no good. After nine months like this I had hardly any hair left when one day I happened to see the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment in the paper. I straightway sent for a sample. After first washing with the Cuticura Soap I applied some Cuticura Ointment and I could feel a great relief. After finishing the sample I went and got a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. In three weeks they had cured my head." (Signed) B. Horn, May 16, 1913.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment do so much for poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin and falling hair, and cost so little, that it is almost criminal not to use them. A single set is often sufficient. Sold everywhere. For liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 28.—The wheat market was again in a wild and excited condition, following the announcement that war had actually broken out between Austria and Servia. Another factor, which added to the bullish feeling was the continued high temperatures over the Canadian west and northwest states. The weather map shows extremely high temperatures everywhere prevailing over the west, excepting Northern Alberta.

At Winnipeg 92 was registered and at other points they were all higher, reaching 101 at Brandon and Moose Jaw. The average was around 96 degrees.

Opening prices were ½c to ¾c higher for wheat, and gradually advanced until prices were 2½c to 3⅝c higher, easing off about 1c later. About 1 o'clock shorts had covered and excitement subsided, prices declining in part all round. On the close there was another wild jump in prices over the previous high points. Closing figures for wheat were 4⅝c to 6⅝c higher.

The cash demand for contract grades of wheat was good, and all offerings were eagerly picked up. Oats of No. 2 and No. 3 feed grade were also in urgent demand. Flax was also wanted, but few offerings. Cash grain closed: Wheat, 4½c higher; flax, 3c to 3c higher.

Cash prices: Wheat—No. 1 northern, 96½c; No. 2 northern, 94c; No. 3 northern, 91c.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, July 28.—The wheat markets were again very excited today on war being declared and exporters here withdrew from the market and made no offers over the cable. Last night business in this respect was very quiet.

The strong feeling which developed in the market for oats yesterday was more pronounced today, and prices scored a further advance of ½c to ⅝c per bushel with a good demand for car lots. The improved demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour was renewed again today, and as prices were fully 2d to 6d per sack higher, a fair amount of business was done for both prompt and future shipment.

There was also a better demand from local and country buyers and business on the whole was more active. The trade in mill feed continues fairly active. There was no further change in the butter situation, the feeling being strong with a good enquiry from Vancouver at bids of 24½c for finest creamery, which were refused in some cases. The trade in cheese over the cable was quiet. Demand for eggs is good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 28. — Close: Wheat—July, 97⅞c; Sept., 93⅝c; No. 1 hard, $1.04⅝; No. 1 northern, 89⅝c to $1.04⅝; No. 2 northern, 87⅝c to $1.02⅝. Corn—No. 3 yellow, 70½c to 71½c. Oats—No. 3 white, 35½c. Flour—Fancy patents, $4.70; first clears, $3.75; second clears, $2.80. Bran—$19.

BODIES LYING IN STATE.

Police and Troops Keep Out of Sight of Dublin Populace.

DUBLIN, July 29.—The bodies of the four victims of Sunday's riots were taken from the morgue to the Marlborough Street Cathedral last night. Thousands of persons in procession followed the hearses and great crowds lined the streets along the route of the funeral. Not a single policeman nor soldier was to be seen, all having been ordered to remain away from the vicinity of the funeral cortege in order not to excite the emotional populace. Absolute silence marked the progress of the solemn procession.

At the cathedral the clergy received the coffins, which will lie before the altar until this morning when a high requiem mass will be celebrated. After mass the funeral procession will proceed to Glasnevon Cemetery, where the bodies will be buried.

Gains New Complexion By Peeling Her Skin

"Keep still, and heart, and nerve reposing; behind the clouds is the sun still shining." I was forcibly reminded of these lines, when, after months of fretting over my ugly complexion, I found how easy it was to remove the cloudy, muddy skin and bring forth a bright, new complexion. I got an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at my druggist's and used this like cold cream every night for two weeks, washing it off mornings. Lo and behold! That old skin had all peeled off! The healthy young skin underneath gave me a complexion as pure, white and soft as a young girl's. I experienced no discomfort, the skin came off so gradually and gently. Several friends have been similarly benefitted. I'm sure anyone whose skin is soiled, tanned, withered, blotchy, pimply or freckled, can acquire the loveliest complexion imaginable by using this remarkable treatment.

Another treatment that brought more sunshine was one to remove wrinkles. A face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2 pint witch hazel, soon erased every line. It's wonderful.—Julia Orff in The Queen.

MORE PAPERS STOLEN.

Montreal Official Documents Had Bearing on Coming Probe.

MONTREAL, July 29. — The discovery of the stealing of the official documents connected with the Notre Dame de Grace sewer scandal, at the City Hall, was followed yesterday morning by the announcement that other documents, which related to the Domenville street land deal, have disappeared. In connection with both the Notre Dame de Grace and the Domenville street affairs serious charges are now being investigated by the courts.

As a result of the latest developments, the charges against former Engineer Etienne Pelland, who was arrested some time ago and is now out on bail in connection with the Notre Dame de Grace scandal, may be interfered with, and another case in which an alderman respecting the Domenville street deal is affected.

Mayor Martin issued a proclamation yesterday warning heads of departments of the need of keeping a strict eye on the documents placed in their charge.

Halifax Has Hindu Scare.

HALIFAX, N.S., July 29—"If Hindus have $200 in cash each and are physically and mentally fit, they would, we believe, be admissible under the existing laws and regulations."

This extract, taken from the letter of S. J. Robins, acting Minister of the Interior during the absence of Hon. Dr. Roche, received by City Clerk Monahan in regard to the Hindu question, has caused quite a sensation in civic circles.

Brockville Resident Dead.

BROCKVILLE, July 29. — Edwin Abbott, 69, a retired manufacturer, who had been in failing health for many years, died yesterday at his home here. He was a life-long resident of the town and up to the time of his retirement was the senior member of the firm of Abbott, Grant & Co., which still bears his name. He was actively connected with local institutions, financial and otherwise, and was held in the highest regard by all classes of citizens. Mrs. Abbott survives, but has no family. Prof. A. H. Abbott of the University of Toronto is a nephew.

A WONDER WORKER

"It heals like magic," is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barbers' itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

MME. CAILLAUX ACQUITTED

Wild Scene Ensues Upon Verdict of French Jury.

PARIS, July 29.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux was last night acquitted by the jury in the Court of Assize of the wilful murder, on March 16 last, of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro. The jury brought in its verdict after 50 minutes' deliberation, and the announcements was followed by the wildest tumult.

Mme. Caillaux tottered and fell upon the neck of he. counsel, Fernand Labori, and embraced him. Her hair was undone and fell over her shoulders, her hat dropped to the floor. The spectators stood upon desks and chairs. "Caillaux, Labori," and cries of "Caillaux, assassin," merged into one.

The din was deafening. Several groups of barristers came to blows and the Republican Guards, in an endeavor to separate them, joined in the melee. The spectacle of Labori and Chenu, the latter counsel for the Calmette family, embracing each other, calmed the tumult for a moment, but it was redoubled when they left with Mme. Caillaux.

Failing to make himself heard, the presiding judge, followed by the other judges, marched out of the room. The advocates took complete possession of the court, some of them mounted the judge's desks and harangued the crowd. The guards then cleared a portion of the court, and comparative quiet being re-established, Judge Albanel returned and read the judgment, ordering the release of Mme. Caillaux.

This ended the most sensational trial that a Parisian court has had to deal with in years. Each day provided its dramatic thrill, and, although the verdict has been pronounced, the outcome cannot be foretold.

ARMS ARE POURING IN.

One Day's Gunrunning In County Wicklow Totals 5,000 Weapons.

DUBLIN, Ireland, July 29. — A consignment of 4,000 rifles for the Irish Nationalist Volunteers was landed during the night at Newcastle on the coast of County Wicklow. The gun-runners evaded the coast guards and police and conveyed the weapons to Dublin in motor cars. Two gunboats were in the bay at the time flashing their lights about.

Another 1,000 rifles was landed near Kilcool, also in Wicklow.

The coroner's inquest on the victims of Sunday's fighting between the King's Own Scottish Borderers and the mob was adjourned till Thursday at the request of the lawyers representing the soldiers, who asked for time to prepare their evidence.

RUSSIA WILL MOBILIZE AT ONCE IF AUSTRIA SHOULD INVADE SERVIA

Czar Nicholas Has Personally Communicated to the Kaiser Position of Russia in the Conflict--First British Fleet Reported to Have Sailed But its Destination is Unknown

PANIC IN MANY OF THE STOCK EXCHANGES

LONDON, Eng., July 29.—Czar Nicholas has personally communicated to the Kaiser the position of Russia in the Austro-Servian conflict informing him that any invasion of Servia would be immediately followed by Russian mobilization. It is learned to-day from a most authentic source that a telegram to this effect had been sent by the Czar to the Kaiser. Orders for the mobilization of Germany's army were drawn up and signed to-day to be promulgated at the first official information of a warlike movement by the Czar. German banks, owing to the critical financial situation, have announced the suspension of their monthly settlements on the request of the governors of the bourse.

BRITISH FLEET SAILS.

LONDON, Eng., July 29.—Unofficial reports from Portland to-day declared the British fleet had sailed from that port. Information as to the reported departure of the warships could not be obtained at the Admiralty office as the destination of the ships was unknown.

RUSSIANS MOBILIZE.

LONDON, Eng., July 29.—According to despatches received here the partial mobilization of the Russian troops in the southern and southwestern districts, has taken place in accordance with war office instructions.

BUSINESS AT STAND STILL.

VIENNA, July 29.—Austria is being stripped of its male population for the war with Servia. The shops are closed and business is all but paralysed because of the exodus of all reservists to the front. Patriotic demonstrations have been in progress constantly. All foodstuffs have advanced to prohibitive prices, and food riots broke out. Then the government stepped in and fixed the rates that merchants may charge for supplies.

CONSOLS AWAY DOWN.

LONDON, Eng., July 29.—British Consols dropped at one time to 69½, the lowest point reached since the early years of last century on the London Stock Exchange to-day, thus showing the seriousness of the situation. Following this drop the broker began to buy all he could at 70½. Five failures were reported to-day, none of big importance, but more were fearing during the day. The market was in a condition of animated suspension.

NO PANIC AT NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, July 29.—With panicky conditions at every stock exchange in Europe that still remains open, the New York Stock Exchange to-day was the only one in the world offering unlimited trading in securities. Though heavy losses have been sustained in many stocks, the volume of trading has been greater than at any time since 1907. There was nothing approaching a panic. There seemed to be plenty of buyers.

TORONTO EXCHANGE CLOSED.

TORONTO, July 29.—The Toronto Stock Exchange closed for the day and the committee will hold a meeting and discuss the situation. The Montreal Exchange is closed, while the Berlin Bourse is allowing limited business.

LONDON, Eng., July 29.—Germany, Russia and Belgium have partially mobilized. The Powers are still trying to concentrate the trouble in Servia and Austria. These were the developments in the critical situation in European Europe to-day. Austria has not struck the first blow in any concerted warlike design. So far as could be learned with a rigid war censorship in force at Vienna, no Austrian troops have set foot on Servian soil. In Berlin it was reported unofficially and generally credited that the Kaiser had ordered Emperor Franz Josef to withhold the invasion of Servian territory by Austrian troops until the word is given from Potsdam. Meanwhile the Kaiser and Czar Nicholas are in constant communication which is unlimitted by the German Foreign Office. At noon two telegrams, one from the Czar, and one from the Kaiser crossed each other on the route. It is thought that the Kaiser was using every personal effort to limit the conflict to Austria and Servia. Until satisfied of failure to induce Russia's neutrality, the Kaiser will continue to hold the Austrian army back. The first advance of Austria would force Russia to mobilize. To localize a general European war would then be difficult.

In the Commons to-day Asquith said: "This is a moment of extreme gravity to the British Government. Everything possible with the powers of Europe led by Great Britain working to prevent trouble, it was intimated in the House being done to circumscribe the war area.

A MORE HOPEFUL TONE.

BERLIN, Germany, July 29.—Hope was given by the peaceful tone to the North German Gazette, the official organ of the German government, which says: Germany shares the wish of Russia to avoid hostilities.

GERMANS ON THE MOVE.

BERLIN, Germany, July 29.—An extensive movement of the German troops toward the Russian frontier was ordered to-day. The troops are all under service and moving immediately. Berlin papers were not permitted to print this news.

BOMBARD CAPITAL.

LONDON, July 29.—The Servian capital has been bombarded and the bridge over the river blown up, according to a despatch from Belgrade.

AUSTRIA'S STATEMENT.

PARIS, July 29.—Russia was informed this afternoon that Austria will respect the territorial integrity of Servia, and wishes even to abstain from occupying Belgrade, according to a local paper.

BERLIN, Germany, July 29.—A rumour in circulation here this evening which cannot be confirmed at the foreign office, has it that the interchange of messages between the Czar and the Kaiser, have resulted in the latter pledging that Austria will guarantee the territorial integrity of Servia in the event of Russia holding aloof and permitting the localization of the war.

MORE OPTIMISTIC.

LONDON, July 29.—Late editions of the evening papers voice a much more optimistic tone to-night. The impression prevails that the Czar and the Kaiser's personal negotiations would better the situation. St. Petersburg dispatches gave more hopeful tone to-night.

FIRE DUMP.

Some curbing adjacent to the Quaker Oats Company's plant caught fire yesterday afternoon, necessitating a call to the Brigade. The use and extinguishers laid a line men quished the flames before any damage was done.

SOCIAL POSTPONED.

The social scheduled for to-night under the auspices of the combined classes of St. John's Church, has been unavoidably postponed, owing to the absence from the City of a number of the members.

THE FOREST CONSERVATION CONVENTION

OTTAWA, Ont., July 29.—Mr. James Lawler, Secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association, has returned to Ottawa from a month's visit to the Maritime Provinces, where he made preparations for the forthcoming Canadian Forestry Convention at Halifax, September 1 to 4. Mr. Lawler visited Prince Edward Island and lectured in fifteen of the principal cities and towns of Nova Scotia. The attendance at these lectures indicated very general interest in the subject of forest conservation and there is every prospect of a successful convention in Halifax. The number of leading men from Canada and the United States who will attend insures that the papers and discussions will be valuable and full of interest. Mr. Lawler will now remain in Ottawa about a month before returning to Nova Scotia to complete the work there.

One point that is now attracting attention, is that while Nova Scotia does not depend mainly on lumbering, yet her coal mining, fishing and agricultural industries require pit props, apple barrels, fence posts and fish barrels by the million feet, and consequently, people interested in these industries are discussing how the timber may be preserved to provide for these industries in perpetuity.

CHANCE FOR FANS TO LEND A HELPING HAND

A very large proportion of the population of Peterborough is interested in baseball. They like to follow the fortunes of the Petes and they realize that representation in organized baseball is a splendid advertisement. They should also understand that the financing of a Class B team in a town of 23,000 is not the easiest matter in the world. To-morrow and Saturday the fans have a chance to show their willingness to help. Thursday and Saturday are Booster Days. The admission to the grounds is the same as usual, 25c, but everyone sitting in either stands will be asked for an additional 25c. The admission money is shared with the visiting club, but the grandstand money all goes to the Peterborough management. Crowded stands will therefore be a big help to the club and it is up to the fans to turn out. Tickets may be secured at the Oriental, White House, Stinson's Lynch's, or the Peterborough Book Store.

AGREEMENT NOT PASSED

Manufacturers' Committee Discussses Proposition to Take Over Old Chemong Track From G. T. R.

QUESTION OF COST

The Manufacturers' Committee met last evening to discuss a proposition whereby the City should take over the old Chemong track from the G. T. R. and turn it over to the Canadian General Electric Company for the purpose of testing new electric locomotives. It is said that the Electric Company, being granted this convenience, would spend $150,000 in a new plant. The Chairman, Ald. Duffus, read a memorandum made of the proposal as discussed by City Clerk Armstrong and Messrs. Fitzsimmons and Donald of the G.T.R. at Montreal.

It was proposed that the City should lease the Chemong track, commencing at a point adjacent to Smith Street to Chemong Lake, including the extra lands owned at Chemong, for a period of 21 years, with the option of renewal. The G. T. R. would reserve the right to use the track in return for payment of half the cost of the erection of the new track and maintenance, and charge $5 each way for the running of new locomotives. The City would pay taxes. As consideration for the giving of the lease and entering into the agreement, a by-law would be passed by the City with the assent of the ratepayers, fixing the assessment of all the G. T. R. property for the term of the lease at the present assessment valuations, namely $68,280, this sum not to include school taxes, but new lands might be added. On the other hand, if the Company should sell any portion of the property the valuation would be deducted, the fixed assessment to cover all renewals, and the City to pay to the Company a nominal rental for the said privilege.

On the motion of Ald. Stratton the City Clerk was instructed to write the Railway Company to the effect that the agreement could not be entered into, the chief reason being that it could not be ascertained how much it would cost the City, and asking a fixed rate for rental of two or three miles of the track.

FULL BAND PRACTICE TO-NIGHT

There will be a full practice of the 57th Regimental Band to-night and after it the question will be decided as to whether the Band will enter the Band contest in Lindsay to-morrow in which it is said fifteen or twenty bands will take part. The local band has had no definite idea of entering the contest, but, including the practice to-night, will have had three or four rehearsals. Even if the Band does not go to Lindsay the benefits of their extra practice will be demonstrated at the Park concert Friday night.

TAXES COMING QUITE FREELY

Unbroken Line of Citizens Have Been Turning Thousands Into City's Coffers

ENCOURAGING FEATURE

Tax Collector Green must be wearied of money. During the past few days there has been a constant flow of coin—tax coin—which most of the citizens regard as simply going out with no equivalent coming in but a receipt. However, the citizens must have a high regard for the City, or want to make sure that they make their payment on time, for up to the present the amount recived is higher than at a similar time in former years. At times the citizens have been two and three deep around the receiving wicket, and although it may not be the brightest year in the history of the country, the residents seem to be eager or anxious to square matters with the Tax Collector. Possibly it is the fact that most citizens regard taxes as inevitable that they are usually prompt in paying them. In any case the tide of money has been steadily maintained and the authorities are not anticipating many payments in arrears.

An Explanation From Secretary Of The Barbers

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Kindly allow me space for a few words of explantion in reference to the statements which appeared in last evening's Examiner regarding the new price of shaving recently adopted by barbers of this City. Your reporter has doubtless been mislead by some one with a grouch when he authorized the following: "Some time ago a few of the bosses decided that ten cents a shave was not commensurate with the high cost of ivng and they tacked on an extra nickel. The others declared that it was a lean year, that they were quite satisfied to take ten cents in the same old way and, incidentally they picked up a few new customers."

In order that you and your readers may know how misleading the above statements are, it will only be necessary for me to state that more than two-thirds are now charging the prices already set and decided on. And every one is living up to the said new scale of prices. I would also mention that the statement in last night's issue accusing one boss barber of having two prices for a shave is absolutely incorrect. May I also be permitted to add that the Bakers' milk dealers, meat venders and others have raised their prices. Surely the barbers are quite justified in demanding more money for their work.

Thanking you, Sir, for correcting a false statement, I remain,

Yours sincerely,

George A. Campbell,
Secretary.

MANY AUSTRIAN OFFICERS ARE BEING CALLED BACK

Preparations Made in New York to Transport Several Thousand Reservists When Needed.

SERVIANS GOING TOO

Examiner Special:

NEW YORK, July 29.—The announcement that Austria had declared war upon Servia gave impetus to-day to the activities that for the last three days have kept the members of the two Consulates in this city working early and late transacting official business and keeping their respective countrymen informed as to the situation, and as to what is expected of them in the event of a call to arms.

Acting under instructions from the War Office in Vienna, the Austrian Consul-General made preparations to transport the several thousand reservists in this country who are expected to answer the call to the colours within the next two weeks. More than a score of officers who have been called back by cable are expected to sail before the end of the week. No instructions came to the Servian Consul, and he was kept busy informing enquirers not to get excited until events have worked themselves out to some extent. Prof. Michael I. Pupin, of Columbia University, who is the acknowledged leader of the 100,000 Serbs in this country, motored to this town from his summer home in Connecticut and immediately entered into consultation with Paul M. Pavlovitch, who is in charge of the Servian Consulate. It is understood that Prof. Pupin has already sent hundreds of telegrams to his countrymen asking them for funds to equip and maintain additional troops.

Cablegrams informed Acting Consul-General Charles Winter that no general mobilization of Austrian troops is contemplated at this time.

CLEANLINESS OF STREET CARS WILL BE MUCH ENHANCED

Floors Will Be Frequently Treated With a Special Preparation Which Is Antiseptic and Facilitates Cleaning Operations

AHEAD OF DEMANDS

Mr. W. H. Munro stated to the Examiner that the street car floors will be treated with an antiseptic preparation which will leave a wax finish, permitting a cleaner and more easily cleaned condition of the floors. The attention of the management is apparently directed to little details, which wil contribute to the comfort of patrons. Citizens could have little or no fault to find with the street car service on the point of cleanliness in the past. It is now evident that the Company is changing its policy in some particulars. Formerly a service would be given when the traffic was heavy enough to demand it. As far as line extensions are concerned this may still be adhered to but on the points of cleanliness, faster service, exact adherence to the schedule, etc., the Company is getting away ahead of the citizens; all of which is decidedly satisfactory. It may have been observed that in some parts of the city where two streets are close together signs are posted with the information that a stop is made at one or the other street.

Policemen With Hearts To Fill And Money To Give

TORONTO, July 29—When Detectives Newton and Leavitt called at 372 Windermere Avenue, last night, to place Charles Boyce under arrest on a charge of stealing $157 from the Matthews-Blackwell Company, wholesale provision merchants, they found Mrs. Boyce and her two children in a starving condition.

Moved by the scene of a scantily-furnished house and the family without a morsel of food in the place, the officers generously handed the woman some money with which to buy food for herself and children. Then they escorted the husband to police headquarters.

Boyce is employed as the driver by the complainant company. According to the police, he is alleged to have failed to make returns for the full amount of his collections. Boyce told the officers that he was not short in his collections and that he turned in every cent collected.

HITTING BELOW THE BELT.

Considerable comment has come to the Examiner's hearing upon the bitter partisan attack on Police Magistrate Dumble in the Review of last Saturday. Mr. Dumble, as a public official, is open to criticism; but it should be fair; should be founded on facts, and associated with some decent regard for the virtually judicial position he occupies. The chief ground of attack was the alleged action of the Magistrate in "sentencing"—giving the gang of gypsies the option of going to jail or leaving town. There is not a word of foundation in fact for this charge. Magistrate Dumble had nothing to do with the gypsies. Chief Thompson handled the whole case, and handled it well, too. He secured the return of the money dishonestly obtained, secured the departure of the gypsies, and saved the city and county the expense of maintaining them in jail. On the main count the attack of the Review is gratuitously malicious. It is based upon an assumption of fact that is contradicted in its own news pages, where in the same issue a report of Chief Thompson's exclusive charge of the gypsy case appears. But the anxiety to make a case against the Magistrate apparently overcame considerations of truth. As to the case of the woman, taken, so to speak, red-handed in theft, the justice of her treatment is a matter of opinion; and the Magistrate, who knew all the facts as to her crime and record, both proven at the trial, was as likely to be right as a newspaper whose anxiety to make a point, to serve a purpose, played fast and loose with truth. The Examiner has no retainer to defend Mr. Dumble, but he is certainly entitled to fair treatment, and to be exempt from "penny-a-liner" criticism, founded upon false statement. Surely the organ of a Premier "bold enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold," with a majority behind him of between fifty and sixty, with the power of official life and death in his hands, need not take liberties with the truth in order to serve a partisan purpose. Even in the prize ring, hitting below the belt is penalized.

SAVE THE TREES.

With the continued dry weather some of the fine, thrifty young street trees show signs of dying, or of suffering seriously and injuriously as to their future, from lack of water.

It is certain that the hose sprinkling that would serve to keep grass growing is not enough for the trees. The trees are much more deeply rooted than the grass, and this season the dryness extends far down. Notice excavations for cellars and the earth will be seen to be dust a distance down of three or four feet.

Under such conditions, how can the roots of trees be expected to draw the moisture necessary for the nourishment and growth of a tree from soil so utterly lacking in water—soil from a cubic yard of which a powerful hydraulic press couldn't squeeze a drop of water?

The trees should, as they can be easily, saved. Surface watering does no good whatever; the water does not get within reach of the fibrous roots that do the pumping.

An easy way, and a certain way, is to take a narrow-pointed spade, or strong garden trowel, and scoop out a funnel a foot or more in diameter, according to the size of the tree, with the trunk as the centre of the funnel. The funnel can be of any convenient depth—short of reaching the fibrous roots; the supporting roots do not matter; they can be exposed without danger.

Having the funnel prepared to hold a few gallons of water, then, with a hose with the nozzle removed, or some other way, fill the excavation till it ceases to absorb the water, and then return the earth and the tree is saved, if the work has been thoroughly done.

But the work must not be too long delayed. If done in time the effects are, for the moment, sometimes magical. A small tree on a boulevard was treated in the manner described, and before the watering was finished the drooping leaves revived, and took on the healthy complexion of thrifty growth.

The plan suggested requires a little care and time, but it is worth while to save tree that are well rooted, and, with a fair chance, marked for long life. An hour's work on the two or three trees in front of the ordinary residence will suffice.

Of course it is the duty of the city authorities to attend to the street trees; but unfortunately in the past the City authorities, which have never planted a street tree, have shown an unholy zeal in the vandal work of cutting down splendidly grown and majestic trees.

A year ago this spring the School Board planted trees on the north side of the Queen Mary School grounds. In the first place they were improperly treated, not sufficient top pruning done to compen- were not watered—and the result was not watered—and the result was that nearly all of them died. This spring more trees were planted and the same fault repeated—lack of top pruning—so many branches left on that the reduced root system exhausts itself in the struggle to maintain more foliage than it can support; and besides, unless the trees are occasionally well watered death is the result.

If money is to be spent to plant trees, the planting should be properly done by somebody that knows—and what is more important—cares; and the trees should be helped by watering, especially in a dry summer like last summer and this.

Nothing, as a rule, is done without some trouble, and nothing permanent or effective can be done without doing it right and taking care. The popular idea that planting a tree is in the same class with planting a fence post has been shown so many times to be wrong, that it is a surprise that a body of Solomons as a school board is supposed to be, should even vicariously put the idea into practice.

In conclusion, if you want to save your trees that are threatened with destruction from drouth, water them thoroughly in a way that will make certain that the water reaches the fibrous roots. Surface watering, continued for days, won't penetrate the hard soil like a few gallons well directed—in the manner described above, or in some similar way. It is worth doing. To adapt the language of Scripture, to point the moral: He that saveth a tree from death shall save a blessing and shelter with shade a multitude of passers-by, and contribute his share to the collective beauty of the city, and the comfort and delight of the citizens.

MUSTY ASSESSMENT LAW.

A friend of the Whig has sent it the Houston Plan of Taxation, as enforced in the city of Houston, Texas, and a careful perusal of it shows how worthy it is of consideration. The foundation of the plan is the Somers system of equalising values. Under it the value of one foot of land, fronting on a street and running back 100 feet, is determined, and if becomes the basis for the valuation of all the land in the block.

The buildings and improvements, including machinery, are assessed at twenty-five per cent. of their value. Public Franchises are assessed at a price which represents the value of that portion of the streets which is used by them. All cash deposits in the banks and all personal property are exempted.

And yet in one year (1912) the assessment showed an increase of $33,000,000 and the rate was reduced from $3 per $100 to $1.50. The general result of the plan of assessing and taxing is approved by eighty-eight per cent. of the taxpayers.

The great advantage to the municipality in the United States is the freedom which it has to alter or amend its constitution or charter. In Canada the municipality is helpless. It cannot do what the provincial government does not permit, and the Whitney administration is opposed to all tax reforms.

Sooner or later this obstruction to municipal progress will cease. For the present, however, a city must put up with some very musty laws regarding assessment.—Kingston Whig.

THE OVER-SEAS INTEREST.

Some of the British papers seem to have taken offence at th phrase in the King's speech to the members of the Home Rule conference in which he says: "You also have a deep interest in my Dominions—over-sea, which are scarcely less concerned in the prompt and friendly settlement of this question." These papers take the position that the Dominions have no interest one way or the other on the Home Rule question, and do not or need not care whether the very heart of the Empire is rent in pieces by civil war. As a matter of fact, the over-sea dominions are very nearly concerned in the matter. The whole world is concerned in it, for that matter, for, "as no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself." So it is with nations. A war in the Balkans or a revolution in Mexico effect us all in a hundred ways and, if any calamity such as civil war were to overtake Britain, civilization at large would receive a blow from which it would take centuries to recover. But especially are British Dominions and their citizens intimately concerned in the peaceful solution of the Irish difficulty. A large proportion of our peoples hail from Great Britain or Ireland. Their friends and relations are there. They follow "Home politics" with an interest almost greater than that which they give to the affairs of the country of their adoption.

Even those of us who were born in these newer countries are proud to call ourselves British, and think of the Old Land as "Home"—as a sort of "Jerusalem who is the mother of us all." Besides, if a blow to Britain would hurt the world at large it would hurt the Daughter Nations of the Empire ten times more. We are sturdy branches of the proud British oak, and what should we do if that parent trunk became divided against itself? —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

A BANISH-THE-BAR ASSOCIATION FOR CONSERVATIVES

The Proposal of a Temperance Conservative Who Votes as He Prays

That a Conservative Banish-the-Bar Association should be formed in which only those who had voted in the last election to banish the bar and those who pledged themselves to vote at the next election for candidates who promised to banish the bar, should be eligible for membership, was the suggestion made in Bathurst Street Methodist Church last night by W. R. Plewman, a Conservative who resigned his position during the recent campaign in order to work for the temperance cause. Mr. Plewman, in the opening of his address, said he had not changed his politics nor would he change his principles. The greatest sacrifice any man could make for his party was to abandon his principles.

Mr. Plewman thought that the association, if formed, should first ask the Whitney Government to abolish the bar, and failing that, that it should remove the three-fifths clause which threatens to prevent many additions being made to the "dry" area under the local option law. Should the Government refuse these requests they should then be made on the Liberal party, and at the next election in ridings where neither party put a banish-the-bar candidate in the field, the association should run an independent candidate.

"But the association," said Mr. Plewman, "should insist with all the force at its disposal that the Liberal party should not abandon its present temperance plank, that Liberal papers be urged to turn down lipuor advertisements, and that no liquor be allowed in any club connected with the party."

Were the Liberal party to prove its sincerity by suffering, without whining, the losses resulting from its advocacy of the temperance cause, and by keeping the banish-the-bar plank in its platform, it could appeal with some confidence at the next election for the support of temperance Tories, was Mr. Plewman's opinion.

MONEY TO LOAN

Did You Ever Figure This Way

To purchase a modern house with furnace at $1900 and pay $200 down on same and balance at 6 per cent and taxes and insurance, what this really costs on monthly basis.

Purchase at $1900 pay $200 down

Balance $1700 at 6 per cent is $102 per year.

Taxes for one year is $30.

Insurance for one year is $2.50, $134.50 for the year or in other words $11.21 per month for a modern house. Now if you are paying $15 a month rent what do you save out of your rent money, just $11.21 from $15 leaves $3.79 per month or $45.48 per year saved out of ordinary rent money this applied on the principal will gradually pay it off and you will have a home of your own clear of debt in a few years you have to pay rent anyway, why not be paying on a home of your own. Petes Win Snappy Battle 2-1 Sterling Pitched a Fine Game

Toronto Scored Only Run in First Innings, After Which Sterling Held Them to Three Hits and No Runs.

SOME BRILLIANT FIELDING

The Petes opened up with Geo. Ort's Beavers yesterday, beating the Torontos 2 to 1 in one of the snappiest games staged at the Riverside Ball yard this year. Bob Sterling did the heaving for the local interests and the big fellow twirled a grand game of ball. The Torontos bunched three singles, one of them a lucky one, in the first inning for their only run, but after that Sterling had their number, allowing only three hits in the last eight innings. One of these came in the second when, with one gone, Snell doubled and went to third on a wild pitch, but Sterling fanned Roberts and Hunt, saving the situation. Trout singled in the third and Roberts beat out an infield hit in the fifth, and that was all.

Roberts, in the gun-pit for the invaders, was also mighty stingy with his hits, allowing the home brigade only seven blows. It was a pitcher's battle all the way, with both teams showing flashing form in the field. The only error of the day was a muff by Burrill of a fly by Sterling. Fox was on third at the time and counted, but the error had no effect on the play as Burrill would not have had a chance in the world to throw Fox out if he had caught the ball.

The Petes showed a lot of pepper yesterday and their defence work was clean cut. Byrne, Fox, King and Blount, all tore off good plays, while Trout and Ort did some nice fielding for the visitors.

The Petes won the game in the fourth when Biddy Byrnan combed one of Roberts' curves for a triple to deep right. With no one out the infield moved in and Rooney supplied the needful with a dash past Killilea, sending the winning run in.

First Innings.

Toronto—Hunt singled to right. Ort sacrificed, Kelly to Dolan, a nice play by he catcher. Trout dropped a single along the left field foul line. On the hit and run play Killilea singled to right, scoring Hunt and sending Trout to third. Isaac died on a smash at Sterling. Schultz grounded to Fox. One run, three hits, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount fanned. Welsh grounded to Ort. Dolan died the same way. No runs, hits or errors.

Second Innings.

Toronto—Blount made a nice catch of Burrill's short high fly. Snell doubled on a line to left. Roberts fanned. Snell went to third on a wild pitch. Hunt fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Rooney rolled to Isaac. Byrne flied to Burrill. King walked and was out stealing, Snell to Killilea. No runs, hits or errors.

Third Innings.

Toronto—Ort was out on a tap to King. Trout singled like a bullet past Byrne. Trout was out at second when Killilea failed to come through with the hit and run. Killilea walked. Killilea was out stealing, Kelly to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Fox doubled to right, Hunt failing to get in for his high fly, which the wind got hold of. Kelly sacrificed, Isaac to Schultz. Sterling boomed a high one which Burrill dropped, Fox scoring and Sterling going to second. Blount grounded to Ort, Sterling going to third. Welsh lifted to Killilea. One run, one hit, one error.

Fourth Innings.

Toronto—Isaac grounded to Byrne. Schultz popped to Dolan. Byrne made a nice catch of Burrill's high foul. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Dolan tripled to deep right. Rooney dribbled past Killilea, scoring Dolan. Trout made a grand catch of Byrne's hard smash to left. King also flied to Trout. Rooney stole second. Fox lifted to Ort. One run, two hits, no errors.

Fifth Innings.

Toronto—Snell bounced one to Byrne. Roberts beat out a grounder to Dolan. Hunt forced Roberts, Fox to King. Ort grounded to Byrne. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Kelly fanned to Hunt. Sterling fanned. Blount flied to Trout. No hits, runs or errors.

Sixth Innings.

NOTES.

Dolan's triple in the fourth was a mighty smash, far over Hunt's head. Roberts hit one almost in the same place in the fifth but the ball was foul by a small margin.

Killilea failed to hit at the ball with a hit and run play on in the third and Trout was out a city block when he tried to go down on the play.

Kelly threw out two men at second and Snell nailed one.

Trout did some fine fielding, grabbing five chances in good style. He ran with a perceptible limp at that.

Blount travelled a long way for Burrill's high fly in the second.

King handled seven chances around the keystone station in snappy fashion.

Schultz, the Toronto first-sacker is as noisy as one of Knut Belting's ties.

Sterling had his hook well under control yesterday. He broke third strikes over for several batters.

Burrill's muff of Sterling's long fly had no effect on the play. Fox would have scored anyway unless he broke a leg on the way in.

Dolan and Rooney, the ex-Indianapolis Feds, are stinging the ball hard.

Sterling was getting better all the way, not a Leaflet got on in the last three innings.

Red Caps Beat De Laval 9-5

The Red Caps and De Laval played off their Mercantile League game at Riverside Park last night, the Red Caps winning after an interesting six innings' battle by 9 runs to 5. Bill Shaw was a very efficient umpire, and the teams were as follows:

Red Caps—Swanston, c.; Flaherty, p.; Rahmel, 1b.; McDougall, 2b.; Kendry, s. s.; Primeau, 1b.; Wing, l.f.; Heenan, m.; Pilling, r.f.

De Laval — Taylor, c.; Carson, p.; Fallon, 1b.; English, 2b.; Callahan, s.s.; Pearson, 3b.; Bob Pilling, l.f.; Kenneally, m.; Spratt, r. f.

BASEBALL

In an interesting game between the "Upstairs" and "Downstairs" department of the Matthews-Blackwell Co. the "lowers" won by 19 runs to 4. The teams were:

Downstairs —G. Matthews, 1b; S. Lowe, 2b.; J. Gibson, 3b.; L. Chambers, s.s.; Wm. McWilliams, c. f.; M. Shaw, r.f.; M. Pringle, l. f.; H. Bradbury, c.; A. Dryand, p.

Upstairs — H. Lefave, 1b.; G. Dryland, 2b.; H. Maher, 3rd b.; S. McCabe, s.s.; J. Ball, c.f.; J. Ranger, r.f.; Wm. Downer, l. f.; H. C. Legrove, c.; F. Lefave, p.

Mathewson and Rudolph have pitched more full games than any other National League moundmen—sixteen for Matty and fifteen for Rudolph. Only twice has it been necessary to relieve Matty, and in that respect he leads the league. Rudolph has been relieved four times. The other twirlers who are prominent with the stamina to go the full route often — a conspicuous attribute in these days of frequent changes in the box — Jim Vaughan has pitched twelve full games and been relieved in six, and Alexander has stuck out thirteen full games and been relieved in four. It is something of a relief to run against pitching performances such as these four.

Hamilton Spectator:—Bill Schaefer, the Toronto catcher, is the Canadian League's best fisherman, but Jack Pendry, Hamilton's new third sacker, is out to put Bill back in the ordinary class. Pendry claims to know something about the art, and can hardly wait until the team strikes Peterborough next week. He has some new lure which he thinks will play havoc with the finny ones in the Otonabee.

DON'T FORGET TO BE IN LINE AT RIVERSIDE TO-MORROW

First of the Big Booster Days---Every Fan in Peterborough Should Be Out There To-morrow--The Hams Will Be the Attraction.

With to-morrow a Thursday half-holiday and Booster Day as well, a grand crowd should see Johnny White's Hamilton Hams, beg pardon, Athletics, clash with the Blountmen at Riverside Park. The Hams, with two International Leaguers, Cunningham, ex-Montrealer, and Pitcher George Shears, late of Jersey City, have an atractive looking ball club, in spite of their low position in the League standing, and they will provide the Petes with plenty of opposition. Cunningham, who is Captain of the team, was formerly with Washington, and came to Montreal in the Gardil trade. He is said to be not only one of the best infielders in the League, but also one of the highest priced men.

Shears is a big left-hander, who was with the Skeeters until a short time ago. With the Hams also is Gabby Ivers, ex-Red Sox player, who has been stinging the pill at such a clip that Rube Deneau turns ill every time he looks at a box score.

If he does not pitch to-day Louie Schettler will be on the mound for the homesters for to-morrow's game, which will be called at 3 o'clock.

Remember to-morrow is Booster's Day. The Petes have been playing good ball. Show your appreciation by being there to-morrow. By doing so you will be helping next season's prospects as well. Tickets are on sale at the Oriental, White House, Stinson's, Lynch's, and the Peterborough Bookstore.

And you fans who can't attend to-morrow, keep in mind that there is another Booster Day on Saturday. Show the Hams what a good ball town this is by jamming the stands tomorrow and Saturday.

ATHLETICS WELL IN FRONT BUT GIANTS HAVE FIGHT

The two world's series contenders of last year struck their strides in the wee just closed, each playing for the first time this season at a real pennant-like clip. The New York Nationals breezed through the week with a clean record of five games' won and none lost. The Philadelphia Americans went their old-time rivals one better, scoring six victories, meeting no reverses and running their first sustained winning streak of the year up to ten straight.

The brilliant work of the Athletics and setbacks for four of the teams that were pressing them closely less than a fortnight ago, has resulted in a lead for the Mackmen that the trailing clubs will find it difficult to overcome. In the National league, however, the situation is materially different.

Playing just as consistent ball as in the palmiest days of their notable past, the Chicago Clubs have succeeded in keeping the National League race at a pitch of tense interest. In the past two weeks they have matched the Giants' victory for victory and even gone a trifle beyond this. The fortnight's record shows Ol'Day's men to have won ten games and lost two, as against nine victories and three defeats for the New Yorks. The result of the stick-to-itiveness of the Cubs is that a bare two and a half games separate them from the league champions:

GIANTS DARE NOT SLUMP.

Going down the line, St. Louis is not to be left out of the calculation. Huggins' men had won seven straight games up to Saturday, when the Philadelphias downed them, and are playing consistently well. Neither Giants nor Cubs can afford to slump to any extent with the Cardinals, only three games behind the second place team, and five and a half from the top.

Boston's spurt which carried the team from the cellar position up to fourth place within less than a week, has been a notable feature of the league race. None of the last four teams has shown much of anything recently but pronounced ability to drop ball games. Three of them, however, broke prolonged losing streaks Saturday— Philadelphia winning after its eighth straight defeat, Brooklyn also after its eighth, and Cincinnati after its seventh.

Pennant aspirations of several clubs were further blighted in American league play during the week. Detroit came to New York and was conquered. Washington, beaten by Cleveland in three out of four games in the series completed early in the week, only broke even on the week's play, but pushed Chicago further down by beating Callahan's team two in three games. St. Louis, which broke even in New York, by winning a double-header on Monday, was set back as far as it had advanced by losing both ends of a double header to Boston.

RED SOX CLIMBING.

New York proved about the worst stumbling block for all the western visitors on their trip, none of them taking a series where notable percentages had been counted upon. As for the Bostons, their recent climb has caused them to be picked by some observers as the most likely rivals of the Athletics in the home stretch of the race. They jumped from fourth to second place during the week and started their western auspiciously by taking two in succession from the Clevelands.

The White Sox pitching staff seems to have regained its fine form, but the club is doing little against opposing boxmen. St. Louis has been unfortunate in running into a series of postponements, and has won only two games in the last two weeks, meanwhile dropping four. Detroit has been losing consistently and Washington is doing indifferently.

IN THE FEDERAL LEAGUE.

In the Federal league Chicago maintained its lead, but Indianapolis, erstwhile pace setter, suffered enough reverses at the start of its eastern trip to drop from second to fourth place on Saturday. Finding St. Louis easy, Baltimore advanced to second place, while Brooklyn, batting with Chicago, took three games out of five, and advanced to third place.

Second division teams among the outlaws with the exception of St. Louis, showed a flash of winning form. Buffalo remained about stationary, recovering somewhat from recent reverses, but Kansas City and Pittsburg improved, the latter winding up a splendid week with a double victory over Indianapolis.

Old Country Cricket.

LONDON, July 28. — Yorkshire beat Somerset by an innings and 155 runs. Hirst for Yorkshire, made 107; Booth 60, Denton 32. Booth took 5 wickets for 30 runs, and Drake four for 25.

ASK FOR WAIVERS ON JOHNSON'S CONQUEROR

Boston Recruit Pitcher May Become Property of the Tigers.

BOSTON, July 28.—A. Rankin Johnson, the Boston recruit who has gained considerable fame this season because of his ability to give Walter Johnson of Washington a struggle, may become a Detroit Tiger within the next few days.

It is reported that the Red Sox asked for waivers on Johnson, Del Gainer and Catcher Thomas. Gainer was sold to Boston by Detroit early in the year, and has played only a few games with the Red Sox.

Jennings has been impressed with Johnson's work. The big youngster gave Detroit an argument when Boston visited Tigerland on its first trip West, and Hughie figures the pitcher as a good prospect.

INDIAN BATTERY IS PROCURED BY MACK

PHILADELPHIA, July 28.—Connie Mack has an Indian battery in the incubator. If he ever gets to spring it he will have a battery unique in the majors, as the Indians are brothers.

Connie's young redskins are John and Joe Graves. Joe, eighteen, is a pitcher: John, twenty, is a catcher. They are fellow tribesmen of Chief Bender.

The Graves brothers played ball on the reservation and later at Flandrau School. Joe attracted Mack's attention while pitching for Brainard, Minn., where Joe Bush got his start.

Drumming up Business

WHEN the hot weather comes, wise business men will add to their selling efforts rather than reduce them.

They will do extraordinary things to stimulate trade, and will make their offerings exceptionally attractive as to both kind and price.

The merchants of this community whose business will keep up this summer will solicit business by the most expeditious and least expensive of all known methods—newspaper advertising. Advertising is a drum, an instrument of attention and incitement; a resonant thing that calls to action.

Buyers wait on the call of advertising to spend their money. They look for the summons to them in the columns of their newspapers. The newspaper is the instructor and director of the public. For a merchant to shut his eyes to this fact is costly blindness.

Tell the public of this community about your offerings and service for the summer months. Tempt them in various ways. They have as much money to spend in summer as at other times, and are willing to spend, but they must be shown what to spend on and for.

The supreme medium of appeal is the daily newspaper.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of THE EXAMINER.

SOME ENCOURAGING SASKATCHEWAN NEWS REGARDING CROPS

Latest News Places the Crops at What Might Be Termed an Average Season's Production

SASKATOON, Sask., July 27.—During the past week, heavy and frequent rains have fallen all over the Province, and the well-defined pessimism recently characteristic, has now disappeared. The latest official estimate places Saskatchewan's crop at about 84.5 per cent of what might be termed an average season's production. However, the fact remains, that the improvement which the much needed rains have so swiftly brought about in crop conditions seems likely to enable results surprisingly ahead of present anticipations; and, it almost looks as though we cried out a little before we were really hurt,—which, as a mattr of fact, we generally do at this time of the year. The West is a land of amazing agricultural recuperative powers. The passing of unfavourable and the advent of the favourable growing conditions involves a change that is at once swift and astonishing. The field which yesterday seemed gone beyond hope, to-day rises on another lease of life and verdant, luxurious growth. The cessation of adverse conditions that checked growth would seem to bring about an extra effort on the part of plant life to regain the time lost. Regarding the foregoing, as the outcome of their experience old-timers have been very conservative in expressing full view with regard to the coming harvest. As a matter of fact, the most pessimistic crop reports which appear in the press about this time each year, almost invariably emanate from sincere yet ill-informed and inexperienced sources in which confidence is not justified. At the same time, it is certain that a good deal of crop throughout this and other important grain growing districts was discouraging to look upon a week ago.

MILLIONS OF ARMY WORMS TREKKED ACROSS C.P.R. EAST OF CITY

The extravagance in the lower orders of nature was illustrated on Monday by millions of army worms struggling across the C.P.R. tracks about two miles east of the city. They had wiggled through a dry swail on the south side of the line, advanced up the gravel roadbed to the difficult barrier presented in the rails. For a distance of one-quarter of a mile their forces extended down the track, the stragglers on the wings and the main forces scrambling over each other in the centre of the line. The first rail presented difficulties and was almost insurmountable. Many of the worms crawled underneath and went on to the north rail, but the mass of the crawlers tried to gain the top of the first only to fall back on the gathering forces below. Their numbers were simply countless, and if they survived the dry passage over the railway there seemed but little promising material in the immediate neighbourhood.

Police Court Cases To-day

George Balmer was arraigned before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of vagrancy. It is said that the prisoner had procured two weeks' board on the strength of certain stories and the Chief asked for a week's remand in order that he might make some investigations. The remand was granted.

Shook Hands.

Thos. Coratcho, who a day or two ago, laid a charge of assault against Dan Thomas, appeared in court this morning and asked to withdraw the charge. They had shaken hands, he said, and their grievances had been adjusted. The Magistrate allowed him to withdraw the charge on payment of the costs, 65c.

Trains that weigh 700 tons are being hauled at a speed of 75 miles an hour over level track by a new German locomotive.

Would Give Bad Impression

Magistrate Dumble Makes a Timely Suggestion

Magistrate Dumble remarked this morning that on looking at the buildings at the rear of the Police Station he thought how poor an outlook it was for the visitors to the Empress Hotel which will shortly be reopened. Now, it is anticipated that many more or less distinguished visitors will visit the renovated hotel, and it would be a pity, he thought, should they go away with a bad impression on account of the dilapidated state of the buildings presented to view when such a state could be remedied by a little paint and labour. He thought the structures might be given a coating of some uniform colour.

A TRIP TO MONTANA INTERESTINGLY DESCRIBED

I wonder if it would interest the readers of the "Examiner" to know of the recent trip of the writer to the Far West?—Montana.

I left Indian River station on June 10th expecting to catch the express at Toronto, but instead laid over in Toronto until next morn., when I left that city by the C.P.R. for Detroit. Thence by Wabash to Chicago, by the Soo line to St. Paul, and Northern Pacific o Cardwell, Montana, where I visited for four weeks with my sister, Mrs. John McConnell. Mr. and Mrs. McConnell own a large ranch and had plenty of work at this time of the year, haying being under way.

Cattle, hay and grain are the agricultural industries. With Mr. McConnell I visited Butte City, one of the greatest mining cities of the world; for it is said there is ore enough in sight to keep the plants running for the next fifty years. And strange as it may seem the miners are busy directly underneath the city. Some of the shafts reach a distance of 4,000 feet and more underground. The population of this busy city is over 80,000. Leaving Cardwell station by Northern Pacific to Butte one crosses the Great Continental Divide, where the altitude rises to 6,345 feet. This divide is marked (by way of trains) by long poles resembling flag poles. And if one does not know they are very apt to ask, "What are these long poles for?" However, I was fortunate enough to be fully acquainted with the circumstances, and seated on the observation platform of the last coach, just watched.

Just here I want to go back to the rattle and noise of Chicago, that great city, for to me it just seemed there was no outlet, and nothing but drays, elevated cars, automobiles, street cars, and noise. I was glad to shake the dust off my feet and get started for St. Paul. St. Paul is a lovely city. Here I checked my suit case after finding I had a lay over of five hours, and started out to see, rather than sit in the depot. What interested me most of all was the bridges across the Mississippi river 100 feet high. It was my pleasure to witness some boat races, but of course from that distance boats and men looked very small. I was fortunate to pass through the "Bad Lands" of North Dakota in daylight. Here and there one finds these are little craters of a few weeks, and upon making enquiry one finds that it is little craters of a minor volcanic nature. I was told they have been smouldering there for years and years.

Passing through the Rockies where at times there just seems room for the railroad through a canyon or along a river, one is ready to exclaim, "O Nature, how great is thy handiwork."

Leaving Cardwell again on my return, we spent a day in Yellowstone National Park, the "Wonderland of the American Continent," and truly it is a wonder, and must be seen to be appreciated, for no person can describe it. This place is reached on a branch of the Northern Pacific from Livingston to Gardiner, which is the entrance to the great Park. I then started east again to Billings, and made a stop of a week at the home of my nephew, Joe McConnell. I met some of my old Canadian school fellows, Messrs. Ben and John Stewart, formerly of Asphodel, and John Waddell, of Percy, with whom I attended school as little bare-footed boys in Hastings.

Uncle Sam has been good to them all, and they are prospering financially under the Stars and Stripes. Billings is a beautiful city and promises to be a great central distributing point between St. Paul and Seattle. It has a population of about 15,000. In 1882 it was only a stopping place for the overland stage coach. Four railroads run into the city. There is one of the very nicest and finely equipped Union depots.

I had the pleasure also of seeing and going through one of the fine buildings, namely Elk Club, of which that organization may be justly proud. Also the Yellowstone County Court House and City Hall, each of which are beautiful buildings and in every way most modern. I found the county officials all affable and generous to the stranger. In fact all people whom I met impressed me that they want to "live and let live." Leaving Billings on Saturday morning, July 18, I journeyed directly home, which takes about three to four days, while I regretted shaking hands and saying the farewells to my relatives and friends, I was glad to get back to Otonabee again, after a trip I shall never forget and must be allowed to be appreciated.

Germany and Austria Are Determined to Make Dash For Aegean Sea Says Columbia Professor

BRITAIN HOLDS BALANCE

Prof. M. I. Pupin of Columbia University, a native of Servia, gave the New York Times his opinions on the forces behind the break between Servia and Austria. England, he said, was the power to prevent a great European war. His statement follows:

"No sensible person believes that Servia has any connection with what happened at Sarajevo, but what matters as long as this lamentable tragedy supplies a plausible excuse for slapping Servia and her friends in the face, and thus throwing a firebrand into the peace palace of Europe? Austria is longing for war, and so is Germany. The 'Drang nach Osten' policy of Austria and Germany of last forty years must now yield some fruit. Too much has been invested in armament to wait any longer.

"The annexation of Bosnia and Hersegovina six years ago was meant to start the flame of war, but it failed. The Triple Entente was too young and untrained. During the Balkan wars Austria furnished enough provocations to start several wars, but clever diplomacy prevented it. The Triple Entente was not ready, and preferred to wait. Austria's arrogant ultimatum to Servia and the Triple Entente is the last straw.

Why Servia Has Friends.

"But why should the Triple Entente, that is, Russia, France and England, back up Servia and defend her against Austrian arrogance and greed? Certainly not for love. Why, the Triple Entente was formed, not because Russia, France and England love each other, but because they have vital interests in common which were threatened in the Austro-German League. Official Italy, but not the Italian people, has been hypnotized into joining the league, which is reaching out for the Aegean Sea, and the supremacy of the Mediterranean. Servia is the bridge which this league must cross before it can reach its goal. Can Russia permit itself to be bottled up forever? Can France permit itself to be cut off from its African possessions, and can England give up her control of Egypt and the Suez Canal, and bid goodbye to all her eastern possessions? If Servia falls, Greece will fall, and the Teuton will settle down in Salonika and rule the Aegean Coast.

"Will the Triple Entente permit that? If it does it will do so because it is not yet prepared to meet the Teuton, who is ready. 'We are ready' said a high German military official in Berlin two days ago. Ready for what? What else can he be than to make a dash for the Aegean coast? Russian diplomats were hypnotized by the German Emperor into war with Japan. I was told nine years ago by the Russian commanders who were returning to Russia through New York after the fall of Port Arthur. When I asked them what scheme the German Emperor had when he pushed Russia into a disastrous war with Japan they said that he wanted to eliminate Russia from the struggle for supremacy in the Mediterranean.

Many grave political incidents have occurred since that time which bore out the statements of the Russian commanders at that time.

Aware of the Scheme.

"The Morocco incident is one of them. The fact that the Triple Entente was formed a short time after the termination of the Russian-Japanese war demonstrates that England and France are aware of the German Emperor's schem. The war enthusiasm displayed by the Berlin and Vienna crowds is due to their belief that Germany and Austria are ready and the Triple Entente is not. It is not resentment against poor little Servia, which has kindled up that enthuiasm. It is the outburst of furor germanicus against the Slav, who is blocking Teutonic progress to the Mediterranean and the East, the Slav who intereferes with the Teutonic policy described by the words 'Drang nach Osten.'

Britain Holds Balance.

"England holds the balance of power. If England is firm there will be no war; the Teuton dreads the British Dreadnoughts. But the diplomats of Berlin and Vienna with their efficient press bureaus have worked upon the feelings of the sentimental and gullible Englishman. If he really believes that Servia is in any way connected with the assassination at Sarajevo he will not call down Austrian arrogance and German bluff, and there will be war; probably the most disastrous war which the world has ever seen.

"England erred in 1908; will she err again to-day? She consented then to the Austrian occupation of Bosnia and Hersegovina, and thus opened the door to Teutonic progress toward the Aegean Coast; will she consent to-day to the Austrian occupation of Servia and thus permit the Teuton to lay his iron hand upon Salonika and ultimately upon Constantinople?"

WEBER'S NEW DRUG STORE

Rapid progress is being made with Weber's new drug store in the new Braund Block, Charlotte Street. It is expected to be ready for occupation by the middle of August. The metallic ceiling is now being put on. It is a stylish pattern of the latest modern designs, and will lend ornamental effect to the interior. The plumbing, heating and lighting are making good progress and the carpenters are rushing the remainder of their work. The basement is all complete and ready for the reception of new goods, several tons of which is now in transit. Mr. Weber is making every preparation for a grand opening as soon as his new store is completed.

New Governor General Coming In Short Time

LONDON, Eng., July 29—It is intimated the Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck and family propose to leave for Canada towards the end of August which is earlier than originally intended. The Duke of Connaught's departure is fixed for the middle of August. Prince Teck and the Duke of Connaught will discuss Dominion matters at Rideau Hall.

Coldsprings Union S. S. To Hold Picnic

About three miles south of the City is a Sunday school of which many of the citizens of Peterborough know very little. Nevertheless, "Coldsprings Union Sunday School," for such it is called, is doing very satisfactory work along the line of Sabbath school work. There are about one hundred members on the school roll and the average attendance is kept up just as well in the summer months as when it is cool. There is also a Bible class and cradle roll. There is an efficient staff of officers and teachers, and they are meeting with success. The school contributes to several societies besides its regular missionary funds. There is a good library from which the best literature for old and young alike may be obtained. The school is holding its annual excursion on Wednesday, August 5th, per steamer Stoney Lake to Bewdley. A record attendance is expected as this is the first trip to Bewdley. A good programme of sports has been arranged and will be announced in detail later. Tickets may be obtained at the wharf on the morning of the trip. The friends and members of the school are invited to come and make the outing a success.

ANOTHER FINE TRIP

The Stoney Lake Navigation Co. have perfected arrangements for another splendid water and rail excursion to Lindsay and return. The commodious "Steamer Stoney Lake" will again be retained for the trip, which will take place on Friday, August 7th, leaving the George Street Wharf at 7:30 in the morning.

The sail will be up through the Kawartha Chain of Lakes, passing all the principal places of interest, and arriving at Lindsay about 6 o'clock in the evening, returning to Peterborough by G.T.R. at about 9 o'clock same evening. Watch for announcements.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Dr. Greer wishes to announce that his office will be closed during July and August, except each Saturday, from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. 56 d-4

Mr. Gillespie Is Moving to the New Aylmer St. Building

Mr. George A. Gillespie is moving from the store on Simcoe street, which he has occupied during the past four years, to his new offices in the enlarged Peterborough Creamery building on Aylmer street. The former premises will likely be vacated by Thursday, and will be occupied by a real estate broker. Mr. Gillespie will discontinue handling groceries, but will offer a complete department of dairy accessories in the new building.

HANDSOME NEW AMBULANCE HERE

(Messrs. Comstock and Sons' new auto ambulance, which was brought to the city yesterday, is the only auto ambulance between Toronto and Ottawa. It is a McLaughlin, the body being made by Fitzsimmons, of Lindsay. The exterior of the car is of grey aluminum, and the interior of polished magohany. The kittings certainly are in keeping with the general structure of the vehicle, and altogether it presents a very handsome appearance.

FUNERAL OF LATE CHARLES RUTHERFORD

The remains of the late Charles Rutherford were conveyed from the residence of his sister, George street, Omemee, to the 8.57 G.T.R. train last evening. Interment took place at Midland this morning.

A Woman Is Not A Person

Interesting Question of Law in English Court of Appeal

A very interesting question of law recently come up for decision in the English Court of Appeal, when Miss Gwyneth Marjorie Babb appealed from the judgment of Mr. Justice Joyce in the Chancery Division, who ruled that a woman is not a "person" within the meaning of the Solicitors Act 1843 and the Acts amending the same, and rules and regulations made thereunder dealing with the qualification, admission, and enrolment of persons as solicitors of the Supreme Court.

The Court which finally decided the question was composed of Cozens-Hardy, Master of the Rolls, and Lords Justice Swinfen Eady and Phillimore, each of which affirming the previous judgment, took the position that according to the common law of England, which had not been changed by statute, it was not "considered possible that a woman should be an attorney or a solicitor." As a witness of what the common law of England has always been on this point much reliance was placed on the testimony of Sir Edward Coke (commonly called Lord Coke) who three hundred years ago write: "Now what manner of men attorneys ought to be, or rather what they ought not to be, hear what Antiquity hath said, 'Femi ne poient etre attorneys (women cannot be attorneys')." This observation was taken to be a declaration of "usage through the centuries without departure in any instance," and it was held that there had been no modification made at any time by statute.

In the judgment of Lord Justice Phillimore a nice point is raised for consideration in Ontario where we have a number of feminine practitioners of law. Obiter, he says: "A difficulty—I only mention it incidentally—at once arises if a woman is to be admitted an attorney or solicitor, because it is clear that married women, not having an absolute liberty to enter into binding contracts, binding themselves personally, would be unfitted either for entering into articles or for contracting with their clients. Well, it is true that that difficulty does not apply to single women. But every woman can be married at some time in her life and it would be a serious inconvenience if, in the middle of her articles, or in the middle of conducting a piece of litigation, a woman was suddenly to be disqualified from contracting by reason of her marriage." In Ontario "a married woman is capable of entering into and rendering herself liable in respect of and to the extent of her separate property and of suing and being sued, either in contract or in tort or otherwise, in all respects as if she were a femme sole (unmarried woman)." R.S.O. 1914, Sec. 4. The question arises whether the remarks of Lord Justice Phillimore would apply here.

In view of the fact that his family have for years been the champions of special privilege in England it is curious to notice that the brief for the appellant, Miss Babb, was held by Lord Robert Cecil, K.C., whose address to the court was described as a "very able and most interesting argument." In refutation of the contention that a solicitor, being an officer of the court, held public office and that the common law denied this privilege to women, he cited the fact that in 1253 Queen Eleanor acted as keeper of the seal, that in 1569 a woman held by deputy the office of Lord High Constable, that she has been governor of a workhouse, overseer, and sexton, all public offices in England at the time.

A tribute to the fair appellant was paid by the Master of the Rolls, who said in the course of his judgment: "We have been asked to hold what I for one quite assent to, that, in point of intelligence and education and competency women—and in particular the applicant, who is a distinguished Oxford student—are at least equal to, a great many, and probably far better than many of the candidates who will come up for examination."

In view of the decision that according to the common law of England it is not considered possible for a woman to hold the position of attorney, it may be mentioned that some of the most eloquent and successful attorneys in France during recent years, have been members of the sex barred by the laws of England.

Tourists Salaamed Indian Chief At Chemong Village

Special to The Examiner:

INDIAN VILLAGE, Chemong, July 28.—The Morgan party, of Cleveland, left the Chemong House on Sunday for their home after an enjoyable two weeks. As they were departing they met the Chief of Chemong Village, and all of them dropped to their knees, making a deep salaam to him. The Chief responded by holding up both hands and also beckoning with them, giving signs to the Cleveland people to come again. They enjoyed the fishing so much that they are coming back during the first week in September.

The House has had all it could easily accommodate in the way of tourists since the opening of the season. The other day a baseball team composed of American visitors at Burleigh came down to the village and played the Indian ball team. The Chemong boys trimmed them by the score of 14—2. Everyone is having a good time up here and August should be a fine month.

PEST LOSS $1,000,000.

And Army Worm in Michigan Is Not Yet Killed Off.

DETROIT, Mich., July 28.—Losses totalling more than $1,000,000 have been sustained by Michigan farmers as the result of the army worm pest, according to an estimate made a few days ago by Prof. Rufus H. Pettit, head of the Department of Entomology of the Michigan Agricultural College. He explained that he based his estimate on letters received from farmers in the affected districts.

"Although preventive methods are checking the deadly work of the pest, the crop loss is bound to be much greater before the worms are all killed off," said Prof. Pettit.

MORE BODIES FROM THE EMPRESS

RIMOUSKI, Que., July 28. — A search was made yesterday of the promenade deck of the wrecked Empress of Ireland. Divers Tremblay and Davis found just aft of the saloon the bodies of a man about 35 years old, wearing a gold wedding ring; another man of about the same age, whose pyjamas bore the initials "H. R." and a fair haired boy about two years of age.

Divers Chinchen and Lutz, in the same locality, found the body of a man about 25 years old with dark hair and the initial "M" on his pyjamas. He carried a Yale lock key.

Divers Divine and Tuck, near the second cabin saloon, found the bodies of a man with dark hair, 40 years old, and two others, one probably a steward.

"ISCH TABIBBLE"

The "mother of a family" on Gilmour Street
Is slumbering, boys, so muffle your feet,
When homeward you're bound, and the moon is quite high;
But don't, by a jugful, don't whisper good-bye.

For a whisper, believe me, she surely will hear,
And 'mad as a hatter" get up on her ear.
Spend the rest of the time, till it's quite broad daylight,
Doing lines to the "Dailys," to be printed next night.

And the people, her neighbours, all wear a broad grin;
They jolly each other: "It's sure time you're in,
"Or you'll stir up the trouble, from the verandah retreat";
Say, boys, do they have one on each city street?

It's considered quite rude as we surely all know,
To have our sleep broken, as you try to show.
But don't think for a moment, as you seem to demand,
We are going to creep home with our shoes in our hand
(If you ARE sleeping).

Now, just before closing, please take it from me,
You can't sway the public, as doubtless you'll see.
So, when you're awakened, don't sit up and scribble,
Turn quietly over and say "Isch Tabibble."

SOME THINGS AND A FEW OTHERS

Calmette was only a newspaper man, anyway.

The acquital of Madame Caillaux may not be a subversion of justice, but you can't make a lot of folks around this town believe it.

While on the subject it might be remarked that the histrionic display of Dorothy Donnelly in the court scene of Madame X must have been flatly insipid in comparison with the lurid dramatics affected or effected by the assassin of Calmette.

A little further east the German eagle is spreading its pinions, and one hears in imagination "Deutschland Ober Alles."

At this distance it looks as if the Teutons are simply aching for a fight.

Nearer home it is just drab taxes that at present arouse some of the people.

Others have been road rollered to perfection by the stock slump.

Trials and tribulations follow one upon another, but it is to be hoped that the 57th band brings home the bacon from the Lindsay discord tournament.

The band practicing the Blue Danube last night was considerably above concert form. A purse of $200 may explain the zest.

The locals will not be able to take their full band. They have to keep to the numbers of other competitors.

It is almost compensation for the accident nowadays when you are conveyed to the hospitals in a big grey quiet car.

A certain lady of the city says: "I told you so" to-day with some satisfaction. She had maintained that the Tamworth disappearance would be cleared up by a thorough search of the house, especially the cellar.

The war dogs are just as hungry for blood as they were centuries ago. The last two days' events give us a little idea of "the good old days." And for the bellicose, the future promises even better.

If there had been no mention of a band for King Edward Park, and no money set aside for it, there would be no cause to crab those who are supposed o have taken up the matter.

Mexico and Ulster have been given the hook. The stage had to be cleared for the headliners.

Word comes from Stoney Lake that our exchange editor is dallying among the dancers. That's another good man gone with the great majority.

There's a bunch around town that want to get work on street paving, if there is going to be anything doing in that direction.

The lambs were sheared in great shape yesterday. It was surely a killing, Evangeline.

A united front from the Empire, that is the duty of those who have been squabbling among themselves.

TALC INDUSTRY GROWS

Report of Prof. Miller Shows Wonderful Development.

The statistics regarding talc, prepred by the Bureau of Mines, show that some 40,000 tons of the material valued at $266,577, have been mined during the years 1890-1913, inclusive, almost all of which came from the Henderson talc mine, at Madoc. The balance was obtained from deposits at Eldorado and Gananoque. It was not until September, 1908, that the material was ground in Ontario. In that year the talc mill began operations at Madoc under the management of George H. Gillespie, and the increase in production was rapid from that date. It may be added that in 1911 a plant for grinding talc was erected at Eldorado by the Canadian Talc and Silica Company, Limited, which is now producing the crude talc being obtained near the village.

Market Easier While Mars Marked Time

Grains, Rails and Industrials Made an Effort to Regain Natural Poise After the Panic of Yesterday —Leading Markets Closed

The stock market rallied to-day or rather showed a tendency to settle down to a level more in keeping with actual conditions than yesterday's record showed. There was too much hysterics in yesterday's proceedings, and to-day the various stocks began to look around after the Tuesday scare. Not that a great deal in the way of adjustment to conditions has been accomplished. The London, Toronto and Montreal markets were closed to-day, and as far as could be learned New York alone was doing business with something like 600,000 sales up to 1 o'clock. Re-adjustment could not have been far advanced for the reason that the danger situation has not been relieved. The saving factor of to-day's proceedings was the simple fact that there were no new developments in yesterday's declaration. But the danger remains, viz., the embroiling of the first nations of Europe in the threatened hostilities. If this should eventuate or should be more strongly threatened the market is almost bound to reflect the difficulty. However, there is no use going into these possibilities until they more nearly approach probabilities. At present the market is as unsettled as is the relations of the European nations involved or likely to be involved in the Austrian-Serb trouble.

MURDERER GIVES UP.

Young Man Who Slew Brakesman Overcome by Remorse.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 30.—"Always the ghost of the man I killed was before me. It would rise up in the night and keep me from sleep; it would appear before me in the daytime when I tried to work, and I couldn't get away from it a moment."

Thus did Charles Whetley, 19 years old, who gave himself up to the police, describe the pangs of a guilty conscience which has tortured him since the time of his crime. He declared he had killed Lee Thompson, a brakesman on a train in Arkansas. Whetley said the killing was on the night of March 14 on a freight train between Gilbert and Harrison, Arkansas.

He was "bumming" a ride, he said, and the brakeman tried to put him off.

Abandoned Servian Capital Suffers From Heavy Bombardment at Hands of Austrians

SERVIANS RETREAT

SEMLIN, Hungary, July 30.—Early yesterday morning the Austrians began hostilities by bombarding Belgrade. Three monitors took up positions at the confluence of the Danube and the Sava, and when close to shore opened fire. The monitors' guns were directed on the Belgrade barracks, and no pains were taken to avoid hitting the public buildings, some of which seem even from here to have been damaged. The Servians made no reply to the Austrian gunfire, but they have destroyed the railway bridge. The bombardment is bloodless as far as the Imperial forces are concerned.

Servians Retreated.

VIENNA, July 30.—The Servians at 1.40 yesterday afternoon blew up the bridge spanning the River Sava, between the Austrian town of Semlin and Belgrade. The Austrian infantry and artillery stationed at Semlin, in conjunction with monitors on the Danube, fired on the Servian positions beyond the bridge. The Servians retreated after a short engagement with trifling losses.

A small detachment of pioneers, in co-operation with the customs officers, Tuesday captured two Servian steamers laden with ammunition and mines. The pioneers and revenue guards, after a short, sharp encounter, overcame the Servian crews and took possession of the vessels and their dangerous cargoes. The captured ships were towed away by one of the Danube steamers.

VICTIMS ARE BURIED.

Huge Funeral Cortege Passes Through Streets of Dublin.

DUBLIN, July 30. — More than 200,000 persons, standing bareheaded and silent in the street last night, witnessed the funeral procession of the three persons killed last Sunday when the King's Own Scottish Borderers fired into a mob during an attempt by the police and the soldiers to seize arms which were being brought into Dublin for use by the Irish Nationalist Volunteers. All shops were closed for the occasion.

Three processions, which started from the cathedral, was a mile and a half long. The mayor and the city council and other public bodies and battalions of Nationalist volunteers followed the hearses. As the funeral cortege passed the scene of the shooting the bands played dirges.

Burial was in Glasneven cemetery and the volunteers fired a volley over the graves.

Preferred Death To Disgrace.

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 30.—S. R. Schmidt, 42 years old, of Huntington, who has been in the Erie county jail since July 16 on the charge of defrauding a local hotel, committed suicide by diving from the third gallery to the cement floor. A note found in Schmidt's clenched fist declared that he was innocent of any crime and could not stand the disgrace of arrest. He was to be sentenced yesterday.

STAGES HELD UP.

Yellowstone Park Proves Happy Hunting Ground For Bandits.

GARDINER, Mont., July 30.—Stage coaches of four of the largest transportation companies operating in Yellowstone Park were held up yesterday by two men. The 165 passengers on the stages were robbed of their money and it is reported the robbers obtained a total of $3,000.

The hold-ups occurred at different times at Spring Creek Canyon, four miles from Old Faithful, a geyser, and 54 miles from Gardiner.

Lt.-Col. L. M. Brett has a large force of men pursuing the robbers, who were reported to be heading toward the Jackson Hole country in Wyoming. Only one robber participated actively in the hold-ups, the second man remaining behind trees as a lookout.

The highwaymen had the advantage, because Government regulations prevent any person except those with permits from carrying arms in the park.

COL. MAYBERRY LOSES.

Result of Recount In South Oxford Is Majority For Sinclair.

WOODSTOCK, Ont., July 30.—V. A. Sinclair of Tilsonburg, Conservative candidate for South Oxford in the last provincial election, was declared elected by a majority of five by Deputy Judge Wallace yesterday following the recount, which took place last week. Mr. Sinclair's official majority following the election was four, and the recount was demanded by Col. T. R. Mayberry of Ingersoll, defeated Liberal candidate. Judge Wallace had forty-seven disputed ballots placed before him at the recount, and out of this number he allowed seventeen for Mr. Sinclair and fifteen to Col. Mayberry. Fifteen ballots were disallowed altogether.

DUBLIN QUAYS, WHERE SCOTTISH BORDERERS WERE ATTACKED.—The Customs House is shown to the right of the quays. It was on these quays that Scottish Borderers on bicycles were attacked and their "wheels" thrown into the water. The other picture of Dublin shows the last known avenue, Sackville Street. The Scottish Borderers' costume is correctly depicted in the drawing.

PEACE CENTENARY STAMPS.

U. S. Will Issue Two Designs Early In the Fall.

WASHINGTON, July 30. — As its contribution to the celebration this year of the centenary of peace between Great Britain and the United States, the Postoffice Department was preparing yesterday to issue two special stamps, the designs for which have been approved by Postmaster-General Burleson.

The stamps of two and five cents denominations will be ready for issue early in the fall. The words "Peace; 1814-1914," will be on each. The two-cent stamp will have on it a hemisphere with a female figure on the left holding an American flag and on the right a figure bearing a British flag, the two clasping hands across the hemisphere. On the five-cent stamp will be a winged figure typifying the spirit of peace and with a dove of peace flying before it.

Canada May Not Imitate.

OTTAWA, July 30.—At the Postoffice Department yesterday it was stated that no official representations have been made concerning the issue of peace centenary stamps.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The Roman Catholic Church at Centerville, near Kingston, was saved from being destroyed by fire yesterday by the vigorous work of the people of the village.

Twelve Polish miners were blown to pieces by the explosion of eighty pounds of dynamite while they were sinking a shaft in the Krajali mine near Cassel, Germany.

Hon. Geo. H. Perley gave a luncheon yesterday in London in honor of Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck. It was attended also by several prominent Canadians.

Lightning struck the home of J. W. Bain at Murillo, near Port Arthur, burning him seriously. His wife was also burned. The terrified family spent the night in the rain.

In a battle with natives near Taskra last Sunday, the French forces lost 56 men killed, among them three officers, and 90 men wounded. The tribesmen had 150 men killed.

Gen. Carranza before his departure yesterday for Monterey emphatically stated no molestation of persons or property would follow the march of the Constitutionalists into Mexico City.

Harry Pringle, aged 56, died yesterday morning after an extended illness. He was twice the Liberal candidate for the Legislature in West Hastings. A wife and one daughter survive.

Guy Rogers, son of Lieut.-Col. Rogers, former postmaster of Peterboro, has been appointed to a professorship in the Royal Military College at Kingston. He is at present in England.

OTTAWA GETS DESPATCHES.

War Office Sends Coded Communications to Dominion.

OTTAWA, July 30. — Code despatches from the British Government were received late last night bearing on the war situation in Europe, and it is possible that Sir Robert Borden and the other members of the Cabinet may be hurriedly summoned back to the capital this week.

Of course, no information is available as to the contents of the confidential communications. The Minister of Militia was not expected back till the end of the week, but will probably return at once, as the Canadian Department of Militia and Defence will naturally have to take prompt action if Great Britain is drawn into the conflict. There are a number of British officers now in Canada, as well as thousands of reservists, and the British War Department will have to be advised at once as to the amount of assistance which can be relied upon from here.

There now are nine telephones to every 100 inhabitants of the United States.

INQUEST IS BEGUN

Several Witnesses Testify at Probe Into the Tamworth Tragedy —Medical Testimony

DETECTIVE LEAVES

TAMWORTH, Ont., July 30.—That the death of Blanche Yorke, the dressmaker, whose body was found in Dr. Robinson's house, resulted from hemorrhage and loss of blood, caused by an illegal operation, was the finding of Prof. W. T. Connell, of Kingston, who performed the post-mortem examination at the inquest held here yesterday.

Shortly before the inquest opened Provincial Detective Miller slipped away quietly and is now supposed to be on the trail of Dr. Robinson.

Bruce Richards, one of the men who first discovered traces of the crime, told the jury of his visit to the Robinson house with J. Taylor and the bailiff to seize furniture. He outlined the manner in which the discovery of blood stains on the bed ruffling and floor was found. He volunteered the information that after a search of the house he and his companions located in a laundry bag a blood-stained towel and clothing. His evidence was corroborated by the other members of the party.

"She told me she was going to Dr. Robinson's office to get some medicine," said Miss Walsh, one of the last persons to see Blanche Yorke before her disappearance. She also told of a visit to the office of Dr. Robinson the evening when Miss Yorke was last seen. She waited in the doctor's office for fully ten minutes while he was working in his small office. She saw a telescope grip passed in and out by the doctor, but saw or heard nothing of a third party behind in the office.

A few minutes later Mrs. Irwin came into the doctor's office and the doctor talked to them both for a time quite easily. This was about 8.30 the evening on which Miss Yorke disappeared. Mrs. Irwin's story followed along the same lines, but she also saw a satchel said to have belonged to Miss Yorke. The witness made two trips to Dr. Robinson's office that evening and on both occasions saw the hand satchel.

Two days after Miss Yorke's disappearance, Mrs. Wagar, the next witness, who lives across the road from the Robinson house, saw black smoke coming from the furnace chimney. She remarked to her husband that the doctor must be cremating [illegible] as it was unusual to see such smoke in July.

Mrs. Gertrude Redden, who lives east of Dr. Robinson's house told of seeing a light between 9 and 10 o'clock in what was probably the cellar room in which the body was found. The same day she saw smoke issuing from the furnace chimney. This was the night before the doctor's disappearance.

The inquest then adjourned until to-day.

At eleven o'clock yesterday morning the partly dismembered and badly mutilated body of Blanche Yorke was dug up in the cellar of the home of Dr. Clarence Robinson by Provincial Inspectors John Miller and Greer, following its recovery Tuesday night.

After searching the house thoroughly the detectives located two partly burned limbs together with burned clothing and personal effects in the furnace.

The only theory that the provincial police have as to why the body of Blanche Yorke was not located when the house was diligently searched on Dr. Robinson's request two weeks ago is that it must have been sewn up in the bed mattress, parts of which were scattered around in the transfer to the cellar.

Towing Disabled Ship.

WASHINGTON, July 30. — Captain Johnston of the revenue cutter Seneca, reported yesterday that he was towing into Halifax the new British steamer Sable I. from Glasgow for Halifax, picked up ten miles off Cape Race, Nfld., totally disabled by the bursting of a high pressure cylinder.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON

The blood must be filtered, otherwise you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also ensure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are an ideal family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

ANXIETY INCREASES

Russia's Plans Are Still a Mystery to European Powers—London Awaiting News

BRITAIN STILL HOPES

LONDON, July 30. — The day's events brought no relief to the suspense nor any diplomatic achievement to restrict the Austro-Servian war to those two nations. The feeling throughout England and the continental feeling as reflected by the correspondents of the London papers yesterday is distinctly more anxious than on Tuesday.

Two events have made for pessimism. The direct negotiations between Russia and Austria, which gave the other Governments hope of a compromise, have failed, and are ended. Russia is mobilizing against the Austrian frontier four army corps in each of four districts, consisting of 1,200,000 men. Russia's resolve to stand by Servia appears to be fixed, and the Russian censor has approved despatches declaring that Russian sentiment is all for taking up arms.

A manifesto by the Russian Emperor making his policy clear is expected hourly. The diplomatic representatives have not yet despaired. They all say there is still hope, and base their belief on the fact that Germany, France, Great Britain and Italy—the two last named most of all—do not want war, and do not think the Austro-Servian quarrel important enough to justify it.

St. Petersburg messages say that Russia has asked Austria for a direct exchange of views, and that Austria refused this offer.

Sir Edward Grey, the British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to whom all look as the foremost conciliator of Europe, is attempting, it is said, to frame fresh proposals for a settlement. The diplomatic world of London clings to the belief that a means can be found whereby Austria may satisfy Russia that she can attain her ends without recourse to measures which the Russian Government and Russian public opinion cannot accept.

There is the greatest anxiety as to whether Russian mobilization will be confined to the Austrian boundary or proceeding secretly against Germany, but between mobilization and war there is a gap which the two nations bridged in 1909, and may again.

Lord Kitchener, who is now in London on leave, has been in daily attendance at the War Office, giving the benefit of his counsel to the general staff, and it was said yesterday that he assisted in giving the finishing touches to a scheme for landing an expeditionary force of a hundred thousand men in Belgium in case it becomes necessary for Great Britain to assist France. British officers who are home on leave from abroad have all been ordered to report themselves at the War Office and not to leave the country without permission.

The gloom and danger of the situation was most strikingly reflected on the Stock Exchange, where, as a defence against an avalanche of selling orders from home and abroad, there was a tacit understanding that no business should be done. The only real business transacted was in consols at 70 1-4, and the only reason that the committee decided not to shut the exchange was that this might cause a bigger panic still.

In the House of Commons Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George said after the conference at the Bank of England he found no justification for adopting any panic measures. This announcement the House received with obvious relief. There were seven failures on 'change yesterday. Two important failures and several more are anticipated before the settlement is through.

Councils of state were held yesterday at St. Petersburg, Berlin and Paris. The British Government continued the attitude that the crisis does not yet concern Great Britain save as a spectator and peacemaker. An official statement issued last night says:

"No measures have been taken by the military authorities, which are of the nature of mobilization. The only orders which have been given are of a purely precautionary and defensive character. The naval measures are also precautionary. No mobilization has been ordered."

In the face of what so calm a minded statesman as Viscount Morley called in the House of Lords last night "the possibility of a vast catastrophe," the politicians and the press have become sobered to an extent that this country has never before known. Not a word inciting to international or domestic hostilities comes from any quarter.

Connaughts Not In Peril.

OTTAWA, July 30. — The report published in New York papers that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught narrowly escaped drowning at Kenora on Saturday is a wild exaggeration. Their Royal Highnesses were attending a motor boat parade in their honor, and Hon. Robert Rogers' craft, in which they were traveling, bumped on a log.

Stopped There.

"No, but my hopes were raised several times," [illegible]

THE POISON FIEND AGAIN ON THE RAMPAGE

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Permit me through the medium of your valuable paper to warn all persons who have dogs they value, that the dog poisoning fiend has broken out again; the latest victim to this innocent (?) form of sport being a pure bred collie belonging to myself. I have strong suspicions as to how the poisoning took place, and will endeavour to bring home the act to the right party. It's a well known fact that collie dogs are not guilty of the crime of chicken stealing. This dog in particular was as docile an animal as you would wish to see, was a great favourite with the family, and was a nuisance to no one. It was never let out at night, and why anyone should have the brutality to destroy it in this way makes me think he cannot be human — a dog that had done no one any harm, and had a wag of the tail for everyone who treated it kindly—the only way it could show any gratitude! I would rather have trusted that dog of mine than a lot of so-called friends around. In concluding I would like to say that if I could just meet the callous brute for about ten minutes without gloves, I think I could show him what my feelings are in the matter.

Yours truly,
ANIMAL LOVER.

The Borden government with all its many changes of front and shifting of policies, is establishing a record for consistency in one respect at least. Under Borden administration the national debt continues to increase, the national expenditures continue to advance, and the national revenues to fall away.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

CHAPTER VI.

TREASURE - TROVE.

Never before had either of them realized just what the meaning of forty-eight storeys might be. For all their memories of this height were associated with smooth-sliding elevators that had whisked them up as though the tremendous height had been the merest trifle.

This night, however, what with the broken stairs, the debris-cumbered hallways, the lurking darkness which the torch could hardly hold back from swallowing them, they came to a clear understanding of the problem.

Every few minutes the flame burned low and Stern had to drop on more alcohol, holding the bottle high above the flame to avoid explosion.

Long before they had compassed the distance to the ground floor the girl lagged with weariness and shrank with nameless fears.

Each black doorway that yawned along their path seemed ominous with memories of life that had perished there, of death that now reigned all-supreme.

Each corner, every niche and crevice, breathed out the spirit of the past and of the mystic tragedy which in so brief a time had wiped the human race from the earth, "as a mother wipes the milky flips of her child."

And Stern, though he said little save to guide Beatrice and warn her of unusual difficulties, felt the sombre magic of the place. No poet, he; only a man of hard and practical details. Yet he realized that, were he dowered with the faculty, here lay matter for an Epic of Death such as no Homer ever dreamed, no Virgil ever could have penned.

Now and then, along the corridors and down the stairways, they chanced on curious little piles of dust, scattered at random in fantastic shapes.

These for a few minutes puzzled Stern, till stooping, he stirred one with his hand. Something he saw there made him start back with a stifled exclamation.

"What is it?" cried the girl, startled. "Tell me!"

But he, realizing the nature of his discovery—for he had seen human incisor tooth, gold-filled, there in the odd little heap—straightened up quickly and assumed to smile.

"It's nothing, nothing at all!" he answered. "Come, we haven't got any time to waste. If we're going to provide ourselves with even a few necessaries before the alcohol's all gone, we've got to be at work!"

And onward, downward, ever farther and farther, he led her through the dark maze of ruin, which did not even echo to their barefoot tread.

Like dishevelled wraiths they passed, soundlessly, through eerie labyrinths and ways which might have served as types of Coleridge's "caverns measureless to man," so utterly drear they stretched out in their ghostly desolation.

At length, after an eternal time of weariness and albour, they managed to make their way down into the ruins of the once famous and beautiful arcade which had formerly run from Madison Avenue to the Square.

"Oh, how horrible!" gasped Beatrice, shrinking, as they clambered down the stairs and emerged into this scene of chaos, darkness, death.

Where long ago the arcade had stretched its path of light and life and beauty, of wealth and splendour, like an epitome of civilisation all gathered in that constricted space, the little light disclosed stark horror.

Feeble as a will-o'-the-wisp in that enshrouding dark, the torch showed only hints of things—here a fallen pillar, there a shattered mass of wreckage where a huge section of the ceiling had fallen, yonder a gaping aperture left by the disintegration of a wall.

Through all this rubbish and confusion, over and through a score of the little dustpiles which Stern had so carefully avoided explaining to Beatrice, they climbed and waded, and with infinite pains slowly advanced.

"What we need is more light!" exclaimed the engineer presently. "We've got to have a bonfire here!"

And before long he had collected a considerable pile of wood, ripped from the door ways and window casings of the arcade. This he set fire to, in the middle of the floor.

Soon a dull, wavering glow began to paint itself upon the walls and to fling the comrades' shadows, huge and weird, in dancing mockery across the desolation.

Strangely enough many of the large plate glass windows lining the arcade still stood intact. They glittered with the uncanny reflections of the fire as the men and women slowly made way down the passage.

"See," exclaimed Stern, pointing. "See all these ruined shops? Probably almost everything is worthless. But there must be some things left that we can use.

"See the post office down there on the left? Think of the millions in real money, gold and silver, in all of the safes here and all over the city—in the banks and vaults! Millions! Billions!

"Jewels, diamonds, wealth simply inconceivable! Yet now a good water supply, some bread, meat, coffee, salt and so on, a couple of beds, a gun or two and some ordinary tools would outweigh them all!"

"Clothes, too!" the girl suggested. "Plain cotton cloth is worth ten million dollars an inch now."

"Right," answered Stern, gazing at him with wonder. "And I offer a bushel of diamonds for a razor and a pair of scissors." Grimly he smiled as he stroked his enormous beard.

"But, come, this won't do. There will be plenty of time to look around and discuss things in the morning. Just now we have got a definite errand. Let's get busy!"

Thus began their search for a few prime necessities of life, there in that charnel-house of civilization, by the dull reflections of the firelight and the pallid torch glow.

Though they forced their way into ten or twelve of the arcade shops, they found no clothing, no blankets or fabric of any kind that would serve as coverings or to sleep upon. Everything at all in the nature of cloth had either sunk back into mouldering annihilation or had at best grown far too fragile to be of the slightest service.

They found, however, a furrier's shop, and theis they entered eagerly.

From rusted metal hooks a few warped fragments of skins still hung, moth-eaten, riddled with holes, and ready to crumble at the merest touh.

"There's nothing in any of these to help us," judged Stern. "But maybe we might find something else in here."

Carefully they searched the littered place, all dust and horrible disarray, which made sad mockery of the gold-leaf sign still visible on the window: "Lange, Importer. All the Latest Novelties."

On the floor Stern discovered three more of those little dust-middens, which meant human bodies, pitiful remnants of an extinct race, of unknown people, in the long ago. What had he now in common with them? The remains did not even inspire repugnance in him.

All at once Beatrice uttered a cry of startled gladness.

"Look here! A storage chest!"

True enough, there stood a cedar box, all seamed and cracked and bulging, yet still retaining a semblance of its original shape.

The copper bindings and the lock were still quite plainly to be seen, as the engineer held the torch close, though green and corroded with incredible age.

One effort of Stern's powerful arms sufficed to tip the chest quite over. As it fell it burst. Down in a mass of pulverized, worm-eaten splinters it disintegrated.

Out rolled furs, many and many of them, black, and yellow, and striped—the pelts of the grizzly, of the leopard, the chetah, the royal Bengal himself.

"Hurray!" shouted the man, catching up first one, then another, and still a third. "Almost intact. A little imperfection here and there does not matter. Now we've got clothes and beds.

"What's that? Yes, maybe they are a trifle warm for this season of the year, but this is not time to be particular. See, now, how do you like that?"

Over the girl's shoulders as he spoke, he flung the tiger's skin.

"Magnficent!" he judged, standing back a pace or two and holding up the torch to see her better. "When I find you a big gold pin or clasp to fasten that with at the throat you'll make a picture of another and more splendid Boadicea!"

He tried to laugh at his own words, but merriment sat ill there in that place, and with such a subject. For the woman thus clad had suddenly assumed a wild, barbaric beauty.

Bright gleamed her grey eyes by the light of the flambeau; limpid and deep, and earnest, they looked at Stern. Her wonderful hair, shaken out in bewildering masses over the striped, tawny savagery of the robe, made colourful contrasts, barbarous, seductive.

Half hidden, the woman's perfect body, beautiful as that of a wood-nymph or a pagan dryad, roused atavistic passions in the engineer.

He dared speak no other word for the moment but beat beside the shaggy chest again, and fell to looking over the furs.

A polar-bear skin attracted his attention, and this he chose. Then, with it flung across his shoulder, he stood up.

"Come," said he, steadying his voice with an effort, "come, we must be going now. Our light won't hold out very much longer. We've got to find food and drink before the alcohol's all gone; got to look out for practical affairs, whatever happens. Let's be going."

Fortune favoured them.

In the wreck of a small fancy grocer's booth down toward the end of the arcade, where the post office had been, they came upon a stock of goods in glass jars.

All the tinned goods had long since perished, but the impermeable glass seemed to have preserved fruits and vegetables of the finer sort, and chipped beef and the like, in a state of perfect soundness.

Best of all, they discovered the remains of a case of mineral water. The case had crumbled to dust, but fourteen bottles of water were still intact.

"Pile three or four of these into my fur robe here," directed Stern. "Now, a few of the other jars—that's right. To-morrow we'll come down and clean up the whole stock. But we've got enough for now."

"We'd best be getting back up the stairs again," said he. And so they started.

"My nerves were very bad, and I could not sleep at night, nor could I control my arms or legs," writes Mrs. Robert Bustard, Maxwell, N.B. "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cured me of what I believe was the early stage of locomotor ataxia or paralysis. I cannot described what I suffered but now I am entirely cured."

Her Congratulations.

An Evanston lady was telling the other day about a rather lugubrious aunt who seemed to see everything through blue spectacles. Her greatest pleasure in life was in attending funerals, and in case of a friend's illness she would console the patient with gloomy forebodings and with tales of others who had met untimely deaths through similar afflictions.

Her sister, who, though in good health, was by no means young, was celebrating her birthday, and it fell to the melancholy one to send congratulations.

"My dearest sister," she wrote, "you have passed another milestone in life's journey. Do you realize that you are a year nearer the grave? I wish you many happy returns of the day."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Strained.

They were discussing Bessie's wedding.

"Usually it is the bridegroom who is nervous, while the bride is self possessed," commented one of the bridesmaids, "but Bessie's voice sounded as though she were frightened. It sounded rather strained."

"Oh, there's a reason for that," explained one of the ushers. "You see, she was talking through her veil!"—Lippincott's.

Neuralgia of the Heart

This Letter Tells of Wonderful Change Effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mr. James G. Clark, Fosterville, York County, N.B., writes:—"I have been a great sufferer from what the doctors said was neuralgia of the heart. The pain started in the back of the neck and worked down into the region of the heart. Though I had taken a lot of medicine of one kind and another, I could not get anything to help me until I used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"When I began this treatment I could not rest in bed, except by sitting upright, on account of the dreadful pains about the heart and the quick, loud beating. The change which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made in my condition is wonderful. It has entirely overcome these symptoms, and is making me strong and well. If this statement will help to relieve the suffering of others, you are at liberty to use it."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a true tonic and the greatest of nerve restoratives, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited Toronto.

THE MAN WHO WOULD BE KING

RUDYARD KIPLING

By Rudyard Kipling

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Irvin S. Cobb, was "The Man Who Would Be King," by Rudyard Kipling. Three other noted authors think this is the best short story.

PART III.

"I CAN'T tell all we did for the next six months, because Dravot did a lot I couldn't see the bang of, and he learned their lingo in a way I never could. They were afraid of me and the army, but they loved Dan. He was the best of friends with the priests and the chiefs, but any one could come across the hills with a complaint, and Dravot would hear him out fair and call four priests together and say what was to be done. They sent me with forty men and twenty rifles, and sixty men carrying turquoises, into the Ghorband country to buy those handmade Martini rifles that come out of the ameer's workshops at Kakul, from one of the ameer's Herati regiments that would have sold the very teeth out of their mouths for turquoises. We got more than 100 handmade Martinis, 100 good Kohat jezails that'll throw to 600 yards, and 40 manloads of very bad ammunition for the rifles.

"Dravot was too busy to attend to those things, but the old army that we first made helped me, and we turned out 500 men that could drill and 200 that knew how to hold arms pretty straight. Even those corkscrewed, handmade guns was a miracle to them. Dravot talked big about powder shops and factories, walking up and down in the pine wood when the winter was coming on.

"'I won't make a nation,' says he. 'I'll make an empire! These men aren't niggers; they're English! Look at their eyes, look at their mouths. Look at the way they stand up. They sit on chairs in their own houses. There must be a fair 2,000,000 of 'em in these hills. The villages are full o' little children. Two million people—250,000 fighting men—and all English! When everything is shipshape I'll hand over the crown—this crown I'm wearing now—to Queen Victoria on my knees, and she'll say, 'Rise up, Sir Daniel Dravot.' Oh, it's big! It's big, I tell you! But there's so much to be done in every place—Bashkai, Khawak, Shu and everywhere else. It's a big country, and somehow you can't help me, Peachey, in the way I want to be helped.'

"'Go to your blasted priests then!' I said, and I was sorry when I made that remark, but it did hurt me sore to find Daniel talking so superior when I'd drilled all the men and done all he told me.

"'Don't let's quarrel, Peachey,' says Daniel without cursing. 'You're a king, too, and the half of this kingdom is yours, but can't you see, Peachey, we want cleverer men than us now—three or four of 'em, that we can scatter about for our deputies. There's another thing, too. The winter's coming and these people won't be giving much trouble and if they do we can't move about. I want a wife.'

"'For Gord's sake leave the women alone!' I says. 'We've both got all the work we can do, though I am a fool. Remember the contract and keep clear o' women.'

"'The contract only lasted till such time as we was kings, and kings we have been these months past,' says Dravot, weighing his crown in his hand. 'You go get a wife, too, Peachey.'

"'Don't tempt me!' I says. 'I will not have any dealings with a woman, not till we are a dam' site more settled than we are now. Let's lie off a bit and see if we can get some better tobacco from Afghan country and run in some good liquor, but no women.'

"'For the last time of answering I will,' said Dravot, and he went away through the pine trees looking like a big red devil.

"But getting a wife was not so easy as Dan thought. He put it before the council and there was no answer till Billy Fish said that he'd better ask the girls. Dravot d—d them all round. 'What's wrong with me?' he shouts, standing by the idol Imbra. 'Am I a dog or am I not enough of a man for your wenches?' He walked out of the council room, and the others sat still, looking at the ground.

"'Billy Fish,' says I to the chief of Bashkai, 'what's the difficulty here? A straight answer to a true friend.' 'You know,' says Billy Fish. 'How should a man tell you who know everything? How can daughters of men marry gods or devils? It's not proper.'

"'A god can do anything,' says I. 'If the king is fond of a girl he'll not let her die.' 'She'll have to,' said Billy Fish. 'There are all sorts of gods and devils in these mountains, and now and again a girl marries one of them and isn't seen any more. Besides, you two know the mark cut in the stone. Only the gods know that. We thought you were men till you showed the sign of the master.'

"I wished then that we had explained about the loss of the genuine secrets of a master Mason at the first go off, but I said nothing. All that night there was a blowing of horns in a little dark temple halfway down the hill, and I heard a girl crying fit to die. One of the priests told us that she was being prepared to marry the king. 'The girl's a little bit afraid,' says the priest. 'She thinks she's going to die, and they are a-heartening of her up down in the temple.'

"'Hearten her very tender, then,' says Dravot, 'or I'll hearten you with the butt of a gun so that you'll never want to be heartened again.'

"I got up very early in the morning while Dravot was asleep, and I saw the priests talking together in whispers and the chiefs talking together, too, and they looked at me out of the corners of their eyes.

"'What is up, Fish?' I says to the Bashkai man, who was wrapped up in his furs and looking splendid to behold.

"'I can't rightly say,' says he, 'but if you can induce the king to drop all this nonsense about marriage you'll be doing him and me and yourself a great service.'

"That I do believe,' says I. 'But sure, you know, Billy, as well as me, having fought against and for us, that the king and me are nothing more than two of the finest men that God Almighty ever made. Nothing more, I do assure you.'

"'That may be,' says Billy Fish, 'and yet I should be sorry if it was.' He sinks his head upon his great fur cloak for a minute and thinks. 'King,' says he, 'be you man or god or devil, I'll stick by you today. I have twenty of my men with me, and they will follow me. We'll go to Bashkai until the storm blows over.'

"A little snow had fallen in the night and everything was white except the greasy fat clouds that blew down and down from the north. Dravot came out with his crown on his head, swinging his arms and stamping his feet and looking more pleased than Punch.

"'For the last time, drop it, Dan,' says I in a whisper. 'Billy Fish here says there will be a row.'

"'A row among my people!' says Dravot. 'Not much. Peachey, you're a fool not to get a wife too. Where's the girl?' says he with a voice as loud as the braying of a jackass. 'Call up all the chiefs and priests and let the emperor see if his wife suits him.'

"There was no need to call any one. They were all there leaning on their guns and spears round the clearing in the center of the pine wood. A deputation of priests went down to the little empire to bring up the girl, and the horns blew up fit to wake the dead. Billy Fish saunters round and gets as close to Daniel as he could, and behind him stood his twenty men with matchlocks, not a man of them under six feet. I was next to Dravot, and behind me was twenty men of the regular army. Up comes the girl, and a strapping wench she was, covered with silver and turquoises, but white as death and looking back every minute at the priests.

"'She'll do,' said Dan, looking her over. 'What's to be afraid of, lass? Come and kiss me.' He puts his arm round her. She shuts her eyes, gives a bit of a squeak, and down goes her face in the side of Dan's flaming red beard.

"'The girl's bitten me!' says he, clapping his hand to his neck, and sure enough his hand was red with blood. Billy Fish and two of his matchlock men catches hold of Dan by the shoulders and drags him into the Bashkai lot, while the priests howls in their lingo, 'Neither God nor devil, but a man!' I was all taken aback, for a priest cut at me in front, and the army behind began firing into the Bashkai men.

"I tried to give some sort of orders to my men—the men o' the regular army—but it was no use, so I fired into the brown of 'em with an English Martini and drilled three beggars in a line. The valley was full of shouting, howling creatures, and every soul was shrieking, 'Not a God nor a devil, but only a man!' The Bashkai troops stuck to Billy Fish all they were worth, but their matchlocks wasn't half as good as the Kabul breechloaders, and four of them dropped.

"'We can't stand,' says Billy Fish. 'Make a run for it down the valley. The whole place is against us.' There wasn't more than six men, not counting Dan, Billy Fish and me, that came down to the bottom of the valley alive.

"My own notion is that Dan began to go mad in his head from that hour. He stared up and down like a stuck pig. Then he was all for walking back alone and killing the priests with his bare hands, which he could have done. 'An emperor am I,' says Daniel, 'and next year I shall be a knight of the queen.'

"'All right, Dan,' says I, 'but come along now while there's time.'

"'It's your fault,' says he, 'for not looking after your army better.' I was too heartsick to care, though it was all his foolishness that brought the smash.

"'I'm sorry, Dan,' says I, 'but there's no accounting for natives. This business is our Fifty-seven. Maybe we'll make something out of it yet, when we've got to Bashkai.'

"'Let's get to Bashkai then,' says Dan, 'and when I come back here again I'll sweep the valley so there isn't a bug in a blanket left.'

"We walked all that day, and all that night Dan was stumping up and down on the snow, chewing his beard and muttering to himself.

"'There's no hope o' getting clear,' said Billy Fish. 'The priests will have sent runners to the villages to say that you are only men. Why didn't you stick on as gods till things was more settled? I'm a dead man,' says Billy Fish, and he throws himself down on the snow and begins to pray to his gods.

"Next morning we was in a cruel bad country—all up and down, no level ground at all and no food either. The six Bashkai men looked at Billy Fish hungrywise as if they wanted to ask something, but they said never a word. At noon we came to the top of a flat mountain all covered with snow, and when we climbed up into it, behold, there was an army in position waiting in the middle!

"'The runners have been very quick,' says Billy Fish, with a little bit of a laugh. 'They are waiting for us.'

"'We're done for,' says Dan. 'They are Englishmen, these people, and it's my blasted nonsense that has brought you to this. Get back, Billy Fish, and take your men away; you've done what you could, and now cut for it. Carnehan,' says he, 'shake hands with me and go along with Billy. Maybe they won't kill you. I'll go and meet 'em alone. It's me, the king, that did it.'

"'Go!' says I. 'I'm with you here, Billy Fish, you clear out, and we two will meet those folk.'

"'I'm a chief,' says Billy Fish, quite quiet. 'I stay with you. My men can go.'

"The Bashkai fellows didn't wait for a second word, but ran off. It was cold—awful cold. I've got that cold in the back of my head now. There's a lump of it there.'

"Carnehan was shivering, and I feared that his mind might go. I wiped my face, took a fresh grip of the pitifully mangled hands and said, 'What happened after that?'

"'What was you pleased to say?' whined Carnehan. 'They took them without any sound. Not a little whisper all along the snow, not though the king knocked down the first man that set hand on him—not though old Peachey fired his last cartridge into the brown of 'em. There was a man called Billy Fish, a good friend of us all, and they cut his throat, sir, then and there, like a pig; and the king kicks up the bloody snow and says: 'We've had a dashed fine run for our money. What's coming next?' But Peachey—Peachey Taliaferro, I tell you, sir, in confidence as betwixt two friends—he lost his head, sir. No, he didn't neither. The king lost his head, so he did, all along o' one of those cunning rope bridges. Kindly let me have the paper cutter, sir. It tilted this way. They marched him across that snow to a rope bridge over a ravine with a river at the bottom. You may have seen such. They prodded him behind like an ox. 'D— your eyes!' says the king. 'D'you suppose I can't die like a gentleman?' He turns to Peachey—Peachey that was crying like a child. 'I've brought you to this, Peachey,' says he. 'Brought you out of your happy life to be killed in Kafiristan, where you was late commander-in-chief of the emperor's forces. Say you forgive me, Peachey.' 'I do,' says Peachey. 'Shake hands, Peachey,' says he. 'I'm going now.' Out he goes, looking neither right nor left, and when he was plumb in the middle of those dizzy dancing ropes, 'Cut, you beggars!' he shouts. And they cut, and old Dan fell, turning round and round and round, 20,000 miles, for he took half an hour to fall till he struck the water, and I could see his body caught on a rock with the gold crown close beside.

"'But do you know what they did to Peachey between two pine trees? They crucified him, sir, as Peachey's hand will show. They used wooden pegs for his hands and his feet; and he didn't die. He hung there and screamed, and they took him down next day and said it was a miracle that he wasn't dead. They took him down—poor old Peachey, that hadn't done them any harm—that hadn't done them any"—

He rocked to and fro and wept bitterly, wiping his eyes with the back of his scarred hands and moaning like a child for some ten minutes.

"They was cruel enough to feed him up in the temple, because they said he was more of god than old Daniel that was a man. Then they turned him out on the snow and told him to go home, and Peachey came home in about a year, begging along the roads quite safe, for Daniel Dravot he walked before and said: 'Come along, Peachey, it's a big thing we're doing.' The mountains they danced at night, and the mountains they tried to fall on Peachey's head, but Dan he held up his hand, and Peachey came along, bent double. He never let go of Dan's hand, and he never let go of Dan's head. They gave it to him as a present in the temple, to remind him not to come again, and, though the crown was pure gold and Peachey was starving, never would Peachey sell, the same. You know Right Worshipful Brother Dravot. Look at him now!'

He fumbled in the mass of rags around his bent waist, brought out a black horsehair bag embroidered with silver thread and shook therefrom on to my table the dried, withered head of Daniel Dravot! The morning sun that had long been paling the lamps struck the red beard and blind, sunken eyes; struck, too, a heavy circlet of gold studded with raw turquoises, that Carnehan placed tenderly on the battered temples.

"You behold now," said Carnehan, "the emperor in his habit as he lived—the king of Kafiristan with his crown upon his head. Poor old Daniel, that was a monarch once!"

I shuddered, for, in spite of defacements manifold, I recognised the head of the man of Marwar Junction. Carnehan rose to go. I attempted to stop him. He was not fit to walk abroad. "Let me take away the whisky and give me a little money," he gasped. "I was a king once. I'll go to the deputy commissioner and ask to sit in the poorhouse till I get my health. No, thank you, I can't wait till you get a carriage for me. I've urgent private affairs—in the south."

He shambled out of the office and departed in the direction of the deputy commissioner's house. That day at noon I had occasion to go down the blinding hot mall, and I saw a crooked man crawling along the white dust of the roadside, his hat in his hand, quavering dolorously after the fashion of street singers at home. There was not a soul in sight and he was out of all possible earshot of the houses. And he sang through his nose, turning his head from right to left—

"The son of man goes forth to war,
A golden crown to gain.
His blood red banner streams afar.
Who follows in his train?"

I waited to hear no more, but put the poor wretch into my carriage and drove him off to the nearest missionary for eventual transfer to the asylum. He repeated the hymn twice while he was with me, whom he did not in the least recognize, and I left him singing it to the missionary.

Two days later I inquired after his welfare of the superintendent of the asylum.

"He was admitted suffering from sunstroke. He died early yesterday morning," said the superintendent. "Is it true that he was half an hour bareheaded in the sun at midday?"

"Yes," said I, "but do you happen to know if he had anything upon him by any chance when he died?"

"Not to my knowledge," said the superintendent.

And there the matter rests.

When the Liver Gets Torpid

There is Nothing Like Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to Set it Right.

Mrs. C. L. Cook, 246 Tenth street, Brandon, Man., writes:—"I have used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for the last four years for liver trouble, and can say that I have had great satisfaction and help from them. I find that I do not need any doctor if I use them when the liver gets torpid, and believe that they are exactly suited for my case. My husband has used them for kidney trouble with good results, and my daughter in Winnipeg has been helped a great deal by the use of these pills. We say we can't keep house without them, and have cheated the doctors here out of a good many visits. I think Dr. Chase's medicines are just the thing, and have recommended them to many people who have used them with good results."

By keeping the liver active and the bowels regular Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills prevent and cure such disorders as biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and headache. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1.00; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

The members of a church choir not a hundred miles from Glasgow Cross are responsible for the following: "Allegro moderato—a famous Italian composer who wrote a large number of pieces; poco crescendo—a little swell; locomotive—an express sport diverted from locomotive); staccato—stick to the notes; presto—turn over; interval—a short name for refreshments; con due pedale—with cold feet!" Not so long ago, adds the Glasgow News, we heard a young lady in raptures over what she called Chopin's "Boeuvre," and it took us some time to discover that she meant Chopin's "Hercuvre."

Forest of Yellow Pine Is Dying of Sheer Old Age.

A civil engineer has returned from an exploration trip to the extreme north of the Province of Quebec where he went in the interests of a firm of land speculators anxious to take advantage of projected railway enterprises in that vast, practically unknown, wilderness of woods.

The story he tells would afford abundant material for one of Jules Verne's idealistic novels.

There are, it appears, at the northwestern fringe of the white pine district, miles and miles of magnificent looking pine forests of very large trees ranging from 30 to 60 inches in diameter. These, when cut into, were found to be of the somewhat rare variety known in the trade as yellow pine, but were invariably hollow or badly rotted at the heart.

The trees were fairly uniform in size and were apparently dying from extreme old age. It was a huge forest of living skeletons with just enough vitality remaining to present a decent appearance of life. Good specimens of the uncommon blue oak abounded, but were also unsound and therefore of no value.

Lakes were abundant and were generally teeming with fish. Sometimes these were red speckled trout and were easily caught with a bit of pork or of red flannel. No small ones were taken, their weight generally ranging from 3 to 7 pounds. They were unusual poor fighters, however, and in their habits unlike the vigorous trout of more southern lakes. The languor and decrepitude of age appeared to have mastered them to!

Generally, however, the fish of these waters was the grey trout, or lunge, which is notoriously hard to catch with a hook everywhere. From an Indian of that section the party learned to take them in the aboriginal manner, which was very successful.

A hole was cut through the ice on a bright day—the lakes were frozen over in early October—and a triangular piece of bright metal or of a shining clam shell was let down by a line and speedily drawn towards the surface.

The operator lay on his stomach with his eyes just over the hole, grasping a short fish spear or long gaff in his right hand. Curiosity appears to be a natural trait of all kinds of fish, for sooner or later a trout would appear inquisitively, and lazily, following the lure upwards. Then a quick thrust transfixed the victim, and it was speedily landed. Some of the fish taken in this manner went up to 30 pounds in weight, and it was the exception to catch anything under 10 pounds.

But it is generally thought that experience pointed to the use of some attractive scent with which the natives surreptitiously anointed their glittering lures, as the explorers never succeeded very well with their spearing unless the Indians were of the party.

The discovery was made that these hunters used their little yelping dogs to tree partridges so that they could be approached closely enough to kill them with stones, or throwing sticks and also to assist in taking the moose.

The big deer, it seems, greatly dislikes being barked at by these insignificant mongrels, and instead of running, indignantly stands and strikes at them with his mighty forepaws. So small and active a creature is however not easily caught by this ponderous weapon, and while engaged in the attempt and driven to the utmost fury by its persistency, the hunter draws near enough to the moose to put in a bullet from his clumsy Hudson Bay gun.

Beyond the Horizon.

Of Interest to Maid and Matron

Edited by Virginia Sloane

STATUS OF WOMAN IN MEXICO

By Cassie Moncure Lyne.
Author of "The Fight with Mexico."

POLITICAL unrest and revolution in Mexico are confined to men only, for in this land of to-morrow there is no such anomaly as militant suffragette, or female soldier. What is more, the women have no ambition in this direction. The Mexican matron and maiden are too Moorish in ideals ever to care to be other than the señora, the lover of home; or the señorita, content with love and religion, in the rôle of sweetheart.

Mme. Calderon de la Barca, wife of the first Spanish Minister to Mexico, writes of the revolution of 1840 against Bustamente, when the rebels held the National Palace and the government occupied the Ciudadela:—

"The tranquility of the people is astonishing. In what other city in the world would they not have taken one side or the other? Shops shut down, thousands out of employment, idle people—existing Heaven knows how! Groups collect about the doors, speculate about the probabilities, but await decision of military chiefs as if it were a judgment of Heaven from which it were both useless and impious to appeal!"

As she is to-day, so will the woman in Mexico be to-morrow, and perhaps later centuries will find her much the same—gentle, beautiful, bewitching, with a little knowledge of music and French. Higher education for women has not yet received the stamp of Mexican approval. The question of women's rights has not been agitated in this province of procrastination.

Woman's Sphere.

The home is still woman's sphere in Mexico. Here domestic life savors of the East, with Moorish manners rather than those of American ideals. In the City of Mexico the wealthy women ride in closed carriages in the balmy air, and, though a veil is not considered absolutely necessary, it is generally worn, and no young woman with proper self-respect is seen on the streets unattended. The duenna accompanies the señorita, who is never allowed to go to the theatre alone with her lover. Strict rules these, perhaps, but the mothers of families consider no man trustworthy. Their home life and restrictions have been inherited from their Spanish ancestors. The social circle among the higher classes is strictly guarded and their houses of thick walls, barred windows, and massive doors serve to prevent intrusion.

The Mexican vocabulary, sibilant with softest Spanish, is the language of love, and yet their dictionary does not chronicle the word home. Their equivalent, casa, means house, but this implies, to the fullest, the idea that a Mexican's home is his castle. In his casa the proud Mexican is free from prying eyes, for, though the Castilian be submissive to priest and King, his descendant in Mexico enjoys the refuge of home, where as head of the house his rule is absolute. Never does there come a time when children do not know parental authority, and reverence of parents increases with the passing years. Though all respect is shown the father, a man never becomes too old or distinguished to kiss the hand of his mother.

Divorce Unknown.

Mexico can claim innocence of divorce, though its absence does not always indicate domestic felicity. A man and his wife often live under the same roof and do not speak for years, each admiring the silent grit of the other. The very pattern of their homes, with prison-like windows, seems to foster exclusiveness. Domestic freedom, as understood by Americans, is absent. Harmony does not always prevail even among the nearest of kin, and family feuds often lead to stabbings, duels and deaths.

Marriage with the Mexicans is a formidable undertaking, since two ceremonies are necessary if one wishes the blessing of the Church as well as the civil service, without which the union can not be legalized. Despite the fact that the bridegroom must supply the entire bridal outfit, the house and its furnishings, bachelors are not numerous. Marriage in the higher classes or among the Creoles is arranged by the parents. The principals in the affair are rarely if ever consulted.

Among the peons the girls are usually mated, if not married, at thirteen, and, though poverty prevents a priest's blessing, the couples manage to remain faithful without it.

Mexicans make better lovers than husbands, for they are ideal in their extravagant homage to sweethearts, and carry their wooing to an extent that would be deemed insane in America. Delicate and elaborate compliments characteristic of Latin races, the music of guitar and the balcony play an important part in their courtship.

"Hacer el oso," as the Mexicans call it, is the main feature of popular wooing. The phrase takes its name from the lover's restless walking like a caged bear before the casement of his inamorita. Back of her curtain the coquettish señorita watches, and, if favoring the suit of her wooer, flirts with the wordless telegraphy of eyes and fan, or, perhaps, as a special encouragement, drops him a flower, which he cherishes. It is an elaborate code, that includes smuggled letters conveyed by the charcoal vender or water carrier. Romeos sigh in the moonlight or thrum their guitars with passionate melody, while their Juliets listen above in the balconies, answering with the coquetry of mantilla and fan.

Social Relations with Americans.

The aristocracy of the City of Mexico cares for no social relations with Americans. Whether this is due to aversion or jealousy it is hard to decide. They are loath to admit Americans to the privacy of their homes, for the American in Mexico is usually a mercenary, engaged in commercial strife and the race for dollars. The impulsive nature of the Mexican makes it hard for him to stand the American's matter-of-fact temperament. This is true of the relation also between American women and Mexican men. The women of the United States find the ideas of the races so radically opposed that marriage with Mexican señors seldom spells happiness or even harmony. The Mexican husband does not give his wife either the companionship or confidence the American woman craves and expects. However, there are exceptions, as in all cases, where Americans and Mexicans have seemingly enjoyed connubial bliss. Bowie, the hero of the Alamo, whose name has been bequeathed to a murderous knife, married a señorita; as has also many another frontiersman, for the beauty of these women when they are young, even among the plainer classes, far exceeds that of the average American girl. Occasionally, also, a Mexican weds an American woman, for the late Princess Iturbide, mother of Don Agustin, the adopted son of the ill-fated Maximilian, was a Miss Green, of Washington. Señor Don Martias Romero, a distinguished diplomatist, married Miss Lola Allen, of New York, when he was Minister from Mexico to the United States.

The truth remains, though, that Mexicans distrust Americans far more than Americans distrust them. Since the acquisition of the 600,000 square miles ceded by Mexico to the United States after the victories of Scott and Taylor the Mexicans have secretly feared the dominance of Americans. The lesson of the Alamo taught them the disaster that follows American colonization in Mexican provinces. Their land satisfied in the traditions of centuries, loves as little for American people as it does for American push. Progress with the Mexican is a nuisance, a bore; for it holds for him the charm of living rather than of amassing wealth. Nature supplies his needs with prodigal liberality—then why worry? That is his philosophy. The Mexican women are not like those of the United States, but long for the seclusion of their own homes and the congenial company that discusses fancy work rather than politics.

The Mexican Wife.

The married Mexican lady does not go much into society, as custom keeps her from mixed assemblies, and her horizon does not extend beyond husband, home and children. Such is their maternal devotion that they cannot endure for their sons to leave them to enter business in cities, and much of the lack of progress in the land so rich in undeveloped wealth, is due to the unwillingness of the Mexicans to sever ties of home and mothers' tears at separation.

The Mexican wife does not lose her identity as in America by marriage, but retains her own name, adding that of her husband. For instance, President Diaz married, when a widower, the beautiful and charming young Romero Rubio, whose name became then "Señora Doña Carmen Romero Rubio de Diaz." Such was her sweetness of character and philanthropy that as a term of endearment the Mexicans called her "Carmelita." Her charities to the old and the helpless won her a warm place in the affections of the people whom her husband ruled as a despotic President, and among whom she lived unostentatiously, riding unguarded with her husband in his automobile or walking by his side to church. Every one knew her to be the friend of the working girl and the weak.

Education of Women.

With the ascendancy of Diaz a system of public education was inaugaurated that has continued since 1876. About one-half of the population can read and write, for, as Diaz expressed it, "We have learned from Japan that education is one thing needful to a people." The convicts are also given this opportunity to improve their minds, and, when faithful to studies, when they graduate, if their behavior is good, they are liberated from the penitentiaries. Few of the soldiers, who mostly come from the Indian population, can read or write.

The public schools of Mexico, however, as a rule, have no playgrounds, and are housed in old church properties that, with the disestablishment, reverted to the government.

There are separate schools for the sexes, more largely patronized by boys than by girls, for the Mexicans who are able prefer to employ teachers and keep their daughters at home. Primary instruction is compulsory.

Religion is not taught in the schools, for that, says Diaz, "is for the family to do. The State should teach only scholarship, industry and patriotism." As parents prefer private tutors for their girls or continue to patronize church schools, foreigners have few opportunities to judge of their intelligence, though most of them appear as sprightly as the men. Mexican women have always been capable with the needle and shuttle and their embroideries and weaving have excited the admiration of women of other lands. Their linen drawnwork is remarkable and is praised everywhere for the intricacy of its patterns and its perfect neatness. Little do the American women realize or appreciate when buying Mexican mats and tablecloths on the Boardwalk at Atlantic City that such marvels of linen spider webs come from hands accustomed to drudgery. They are the work of humble and ignorant women of the poorest classes, made in the floorless adobe and bamboo huts of the improvident children of old New Spain to deck the tables of Americanos, whose pet Chihuahua dogs enjoy more luxuries than these poor souls have ever seen.

Love and religion are supposed to satisfy the life of the Mexican woman, but they do not always suffice, for her interest in jewelry and dress is even more intense than that of her American sisters in their tailor made dresses.

Fashions from Paris.

Few women in the United States realize that when it comes to fashion the City of Mexico is far nearer the styles worn in Paris than any other community this side of the Atlantic. In the elegant Plaza, planned by poor Carlotta, one sees a magnificence of dress that is as beautiful as astonishing when compared with the coarse cotton rebozos worn by the peon women, who are not allowed to crowd the avenues intended for the rich, but are made to promenade in walks set aside for their class. At the Corrida de Toros the Mexican ladies have the same opportunity for displaying finery as is afforded by the opera in other lands. There is an old proverb imported from Madrid that runs, "Six days shalt thou do nothing, but on the seventh shalt thou go to the bull fight." This command for the observance of the Sabbath is rigidly in favor still in the City of Mexico, for no sport holds as strong a claim in the affections of the Mexican people as the fiesta de toro.

Here one sees the bright sparkling eyes and clear olive skin that have made the Mexican beauty famous the world over. These mestizas are a fine type of the Spanish American. The racial characteristics of Aragon and Castile show with vital distinctness, despite the lapse of time since Spain claimed the adopted fatherhood of Mexico.

The United States can bring these people little or nothing. Their civilization existed before Cavalier or Puritan ever dreamed of setting sail on unknown oceans. Our so-called conveniences, the Mexicans neither desire nor will adopt. This was shown when an American housewife bought for her Mexican servant an iron bedstead, explaining its use, but the Mexican continued to sleep on her mat on the floor, and when questioned as to her preference, replied, "Yes, the bed is nice to keep one's clothes on."

The same tendency to stick to the custom of the country, simply because it is such, leads the Mexican cook to prefer her earthen oven to our finest American range. "No es costumbre," she will explain and vows that cooking food otherwise "upsets the liver."

Thanks to the religion and conservatism of the country, though the Mexican dona is human and errs sometimes, she is not gross. Mexico contributes fewer recruits to outcasts than any civilized nation. The men extravagantly admire the beauty of their women and most of them marry early in life.

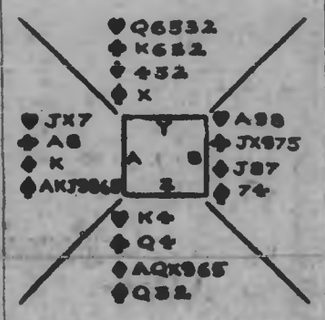
Since Aztec days the land has reverenced womanhood in worship and though the heathen ideal deity, called "Tonantizia" or the "Mother of Gods," has given way to the Virgin of Guadalupe as the patron saint of Mexico, the civilization of the country protects her daughters with chaperons until the Mexican husband becomes the guardian of his wife's honor. The Mexican women are not too pious to make cigarettes in their boudoirs or to exclaim words that sound very sacrilegious to unaccustomed ears. They are very human, very lovable, with their Christian name of Mary, to which are often affixed words like Conception and Annunciation. The word "Jesus" is frequently used, both as an exclamation and also as a given name. It looks peculiar on pews marked with it in cathedrals, and when it is addressed to a lame beggar it startles the American.

The Mexican women sustain the religion of the country, for few men, except Indians, are ever seen at mass, and the Mexican mothers can be counted on to instruct their children in church principles. Superstitious and signs and omens, women doctors prevail, whose meagre knowledge of herbs spell as the healing power of whitpas and omens is giving way before the advancement of modern medicine. Belief in the "evil eye," that especially dooms the fate of children, is still, though, a popular superstition. Yet Mexico may well be proud of her women, for nowhere is the wife's heart truer or the mother's love greater than in the land of Montezuma.

Though the women covet no part in politics or revolution, yet they are the moral fibre of the country. La Patria, an allegorical figure in white marble, keeps her vigil day by day by the grave of Juarez in the ancient cemetery of San Fernando, in the City of Mexico. The full blooded Indian, coming from the humblest tillers of the soil and knowing no word of Spanish until twenty years of age, wrested Mexico from despotism and gave independence to the nation. May La Patria call his spirit back from the past to quell the doubt of present conditions, so that Mexico, blessed by nature with a wealth of sunshine and minerals, may enjoy the peace that makes life beautiful and that will bring gladness to the sad hearts of the wives and mothers of the revolutionists.

AUCTION BRIDGE---By Prospero

READERS who have followed these articles will wish to know the solution of Query No. 1. Supplementary to it was Query No. 3—now the whole is given. Score:—First game, love all. The hands were:—



The bidding: Z, a diamond; A, a royal; Y, minus 2; B, 2 royals; Z, minus 3.

This was a risky bid, on 7 major and free-lance cards, and mainly intended to force the opponent to a higher bid in royals, which Z hoped to set. A, nothing daunted, goes to 3 royals, which Y has to top by minus 4; closed.

It being the first game, Y was willing to risk a penalty. The following table portrays the game:—

Bidding rests with Y at minus 4—that is, Y Z are not to take in excess of 3 tricks. Z is dummy, B leads with the jack of diamonds, the suit of adversary's strength. Tricks are underscored. Result, 3 tricks for Y Z, contract made game.

Will any of my readers try to defeat Y Z on minus 4? It should be possible with Z's hand before you on the table. Try it.

Dummy's hand—No. 2—I held prophesied a result better than minus 3.

C. M., Scranton, reported it at 2 royals and lost. It was played as follows on second trial:—

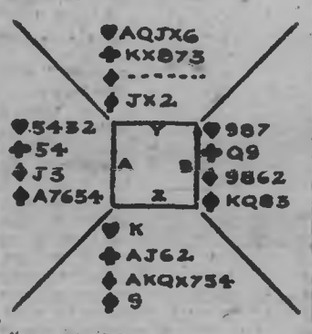
The bidding:—Z, a spade; A, minus 1; Y, a heart; B, minus 2; closed.

A B must not take more than 5 tricks (7-3) to fill contract. Result, but 3 tricks for A B; that is 2 better than contract. Score, 4 x 8=32, takes game and rubber.

These talks having to be prepared several weeks in advance, I intend to give responses to inquiries sent. The delay may task the patience of correspondents, but I regret it is unavoidable.

"A Student," of this city, writes: "I have grown to look for the three absorbed bridge players at the head of the weekly articles in your paper. The suggestion that honors should not be counted in conjunction with odd tricks who won the tricks should score the points, and points or penalties alone should score.

Mrs. H. G. C., Brooklyn, sends a very interesting hand; it is this:—



Score not given.

"The bidding was Z diamond; A minus 1; Y heart; B minus 2; Z 2 hearts; A minus 3. Result, set." Mrs. H. G. C. accompanies this play by the question "Suppose A had bid minus 1, what can partner B do to induce A of his having only suits to encourage A to go one bid? There should be a rule governing this situation."

To reply: Here we have A bidding minus 1. If that declaration or any higher negative declaration obtain the play, B's hand would lie open on the table, ready to obvious attack from right and left. B, to be in safe position, should have one suit blank to be able to discard high cards. No blank in B's hand. Then let B count, face and free lance cards—there are ten of all certainties, it is not a proper hand to raise a negative bid. Here Y has overcalled A by saying "heart." B should be glad of it and remain silent, being taken out of the hole. If B does not go over Y's bid, that is clear notice to partner A that negative no trumper does not sound to B's liking. That silence conveyed a distinct warning. So the rule has been observed, that a negative raise must come from partner from the hand that to play will be exposed. After that suppose encouragement can negative bidding go higher?

In this deal Y Z have it all their own way, no matter what A trumps. As B cannot continue to partner's preliminary bid, they might as well give over, remembering that not every hand leads itself to successful play. In actual play, the third hand, Y, a heart, barred all other bids. It should have closed. Y Z will win in every combination even if A B had ventured to raise.

To reply: Here we have A bidding minus 1. If that declaration or any

On a subject it was been my intention to enlarge, the London Globe recently made some well-aimed and pointed remarks. I ask pardon for quoting:—

"Whist was used by the American lords, which removed the game to a system of conventions in which one partner informed the other of the contents of his hand. Auction bridge is now in danger of the same fate from the American calls, and we are surprised that the Portland Club committee has definitely decided those to be unfair. A convention to be justified must be the most an extension of natural play. But there is no conceivable connection between natural play and a call of five spades to indicate that the caller wishes his partner to call his best red suit. It would be simpler and more honest to say at once: 'Call your best red suit.' The adversaries would then, at any rate, be placed under no such disadvantage as they are if they [illegible] unacquainted with the code employed.

There is a [illegible] way to avoid, effectually to stop, [illegible] conventional calls, [illegible] every mode of fairness. [illegible] bidding upon rank only, [illegible] from our trick to a bid of two [illegible] in successive order, will cure this [illegible] in the simplest [illegible]

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Jack Rose And Violets

A Story of a College Commencement

By EDITH V. ROSS

Fred Caruthers and George Gay, two students, emerged from the laboratory of E. university, where they had been engaged in work pertaining to the course of analytical chemistry. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon—the time for recreation—and they agreed that they would take a stroll. The spring had opened, the birds were singing in the trees, and the chums trudged along with all the light heartedness of youth.

Some six or seven miles from E. university was a women's college. When the students of E. took walks they naturally bent their steps in the direction of the women's college, and Messrs. Caruthers and Gay did so on this occasion. They were crossing an open field not far from the college grounds when Caruthers, casting his eyes upward, after peering into the sky for awhile, remarked:

"What's that?"

Gay also looked up and said he thought it was a bird. Then Caruthers pronounced it to be a balloon.

"It will come down pretty soon," said Caruthers. "Let's follow it. Ten to one it has been sent up by some student of the women's college."

They ran for half a mile, at the end of which the balloon got caught in the branch of a tree, and Caruthers went up and brought it down. It was an ordinary tissue paper balloon, with cross wires at the bottom, to which had been affixed a sponge soaked in alcohol. The alcohol had burned out. To one of the cross wires dangled a card, on which was written in a feminine hand:

Find me if you can.

"I told you so," said Caruthers. "Some girl who has gone to college for fun rather than study has sent it out for a lark."

"It's too bad that there should be two of us instead of one," said Gay.

FRED CONTINUED TO WARM THE PAPER.

"If either of us had found it he might have solved the riddle and had an adventure. You suggested what it might be. I'll forego my claim to it."

"Girls up to mischief always move in couples. Very likely there are half a dozen in this scheme."

The young men took the balloon back to college and the same evening met in Caruthers' room to investigate it. They first examined the card carefully. It gave the impression that it had been tampered with in some way, but they could not tell how. Its smoothness had disappeared.

"My opinion is, George," said Caruthers, "that about the only way a message could be concealed is by chemicals. They have a laboratory over there, and I shouldn't be surprised if the girl who wrote this is taking the laboratory course."

"In that case we'll have to wait till tomorrow, when we can get into the laboratory, where we can try various agents."

The next day at 4 o'clock, instead of going out for recreation, they began a series of experiments on the card. They finally found an agent that brought out letters of a dark violet hue:

So far, so good. Try some more.

They spent the time till the laboratory was closed in a vain attempt to get something more out of the card, but failed. The same evening they met again, and Caruthers suggested that the rest of the secret might be in the balloon itself.

"In that event," Gay replied, "we'll have to take it to the laboratory tomorrow and apply tests."

Caruthers took the balloon to a gas jet for examination. In order to get the best light on it he held it very near the jet, turning it so that the light would shine on its different parts. Presently he noticed a brown line on the paper.

"I have it, George," he cried.

"What is it?"

Fred made no reply to this; he was too intent on what he was doing. George joined him and saw that he was holding the brown line up close to the jet. The line developed not only into a letter, but into a word—"rose." Fred continued to warm the paper and finally brought out the following:

Jack Rose and Violets.

"Well, now," he remarked, "perhaps we're going to get at the bottom of this prank. This is only a part."

He turned the paper and soon was rewarded with more of the message—

Class day.

"Any more, do you think?" asked George.

"There isn't any need for more. It's plain enough as it is, and there's enough for us both."

"What do you mean?"

"That two girls will be somewhere about their college, either on the grounds or at some function or exercise indoors, on class day. One will wear a jack rose, the other violets. If we can't find them after all this information we'll never deserve a sheepskin."

"Good for you. But what do you suppose this message was written with?"

"Citric acid. Quite likely lemon juice; that would do it."

"I've a lemon in my closet left over from my last punch. I'll try it."

He dipped a pen in some of the lemon juice, wrote a message with it on a bit of paper, held it to the gas jet and the letters turned brown.

"I have an idea," said George. "What do you say to writing a message on the balloon and sending it back?"

"It wouldn't do any good or any harm provided the message were invisible till brought out. I doubt if these girls have confided to others sending the balloon, and if it were picked up on the college grounds they would not be likely to get it. Besides, to send a return message would be giving away an advantage we possess over them. If we meet them with their decorations on we can do so pretending not to be in the secret. In other words, they will give themselves away to us, but we won't give ourselves away to them."

"Bully boy! You've hit the nail on the head."

When class day at the women's college came on Messrs. Caruthers and Gay, who had learned what functions they would be admitted to, found that they might attend a dance in the large hall used for such purposes. They had not been there long when they saw two girls enter together, the one wearing a jack rose, the other a bunch of violets.

"By Jove," exclaimed Caruthers, "they are a pair of beauties!"

"Which would you choose?" asked Gay.

"The jack rose."

"Very well; if we tackle them I'll freeze to the violets."

It did not require much time for the young men to secure an introduction to the girls, and Fred was soon dancing with Jack Rose, while George was doing the same with Violets. Since the girls were chums the men did not have much difficulty in keeping the four together. They were eating a supper in company when Caruthers remarked:

"You young ladies being chums, I should think you would wear the same floral decorations."

The girls glanced at each other and smiled knowingly.

"Wherefore that smile?" George asked.

"Can't we smile at each other without any especial meaning?" asked Jack Rose.

"You can," said Fred, "but you don't. Come, tell us the secret."

"What secret?" asked Violets.

"Why," replied Caruthers, "when I remarked that I should suppose you young ladies would wear the same kind of flowers you smiled mysteriously. All we ask is an explanation."

"I believe," said George, "that these flowers are a signal."

"What do you mean?" asked Violets.

"You have been flirting with some one by correspondence whom you don't know and who don't know you. You expect them here to night, and they are to know you by the flowers you wear."

This was getting pretty near home. The girls looked at each other, not smiling, but serious.

"What a funny idea!" said Jack Rose.

"Ridiculous!" chimed Violets.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Fred. "We'll bet you ten pounds of candy against a kiss from each of you that those flowers mean just what George has said, and we can prove it."

The girls looked very serious, indeed. "Will you permit us to consider your bet?" asked Jack Rose.

"All you like," replied the young men together.

The girls withdrew and after a long consultation returned. The possession of ten pounds of candy was a temptation to take a risk. The possibility that these young men had captured their balloon and deciphered their message did not occur to them. Even if the balloon had been picked up there was little probability of its secret having been interpreted.

"We have decided," said Jack Rose, "to take the bet, you to win in case you prove what you say."

No sooner had she spoken the word than Fred drew forth from his pocket the balloon, unfolded it and held up the message written in brown letters.

There was a commotion on the part of the girls, who blushed and laughed and looked grave all at the same time, while the young men exulted.

When and where the bet was paid does not pertain to this story.

Boys and girls who have passed through the children's courts for delinquency are being trained to grow into useful, self-respecting men and women at the Little Commonwealth in Batcombe, in Dorset.

The naughty boys or girls who go down to Batcombe do not find themselves in the repressive atmosphere of an institution. They at once become members of a self-governing community for whose good government they, with their fellow-citizens, are equally responsible. The citizens make their own laws in a general legislative assembly. They also have their own court, where the judge, a girl (elected after both sexes had been tried) sentences offenders to fines, extra hours of labor, early hours, and, in a serious case, a ducking in a cold bath.

Miss Vera Finlay returned Monday after a week's sojourn at Von Eric, the summer home of Mr. T. E. Finlay, Stoney Lake.

Mr. Wallace Hampton, a former resident of Norwood, was struck by a train while driving from his home in Mortlach, Sask., on July 2nd and was so badly injured that he died two and a half hours later.

The late Mr. Hampton was a highly respected resident and pioneer of Mortlach district, where he settled in 1900, after leaving Norwood. During his fourteen years' residence in Mortlach he was very successful. He owned 480 acres of land, 60 head of cattle and 100 head of horses. He took an active interest in public affairs being president of the Farmers' Elevator Co., councillor of the rural municipality of Wheatlands and an active member of the Grain Growers' and Ranchers' Association. He also took an active interest in the church work, being superintendent of the Union school. In 1906 he laid the corner stone of the Methodist church. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. Hugh Nixon, who had gone to the Norwood school in his early boyhood. The late Mr. Hampton was born at Eagle Lake, Ont., in 1872, and in 1878 married Miss Margaret Hayes of Harrowsmith, who, together with two daughters, Mrs. Emma Jones and Mrs. Laura Brown and two sons, Boyd and Milton, survive him. One son (William, for whom there is a tablet erected in the Norwood High school) died in South Africa.

The ordination into the Ministry of the Gospel of the Rev. E. J. Wolfand B.D., and his induction into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Norwood, took place on Wednesday afternoon last.

The service, which was a most impressive one, was opened at 2.45. The Rev. Mr. Craw of Springville, read the Scripture lesson from the 3rd chapter of the Acts and the Scripture lesson from the 3rd chapter of the Acts and after wards preached from the 6th verse of the same chapter.

The Rev. Hugh Brown of Warsaw, moderator of the presbytery, then took charge and called upon Rev. D A. Thompson of Hastings, interim moderator, to narrate the steps in connection with the call. Mr Brown then proceeded to ask the usual questions, which, being answered satisfactorily, Mr. Wolfand was then ordained into the holy ministry by the laying on of the hands of the members of the presbytery present and inducted into the pastorate of the church. Mrs. N. C. Porter then sang a solo in her usual pleasing manner, Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's church, Peterborough, then addressed the newly inducted minister and the Rev. H. J. Keith of Knox church Peterborough, addressed the people in very appropriate terms.

Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D., pastor of the Methodist church, was present and on behalf of his people extended a hearty welcome to the newly inducted minister.

A reception, with refreshments served, was held in the school room immediately afterwards.

The Norwood intermediate lacrosse team defeated the Havelock team by a score of 14-2 on Wednesday last.

Mrs. T. E. Finlay spent Monday in the village.

A special meeting of the Board of Education was held on July 16th at the secretary's office. The members present were Messrs. E. P. Cuffe (chairman), J. A. Finlay, T. Burkell E. H. Scott, J. Doherty, J. F. Elliott, J. Marks, D. McNaughton and C. Wildman.

The matter re improvement in construction of chimney and pipes carrying off smoke from heating apparatus in Public school was discussed and action taken towards same

Mr. Cuffe intimated that Mr. Richardson declined the arrangement of the last meeting of the board re divisionof insurance on Public school.

Moved by Mr. Finlay, seconded by Mr. Doherty, that the insurance on the Public school and contents be placed altogether with the agent already handling the insurance, same to be p laced in two tariff companies.—Carried.

A communication was read from Miss J. Morton of the High school taff tendering her resignation.

Moved by Mr. Elliott, seconded by Mr. Scott, that the board accept the resignation of Miss Morton and advertise immediately in the Mail and Empire and the Globe for a teacher Moved by Mr. Finlay, seconded by Mr. McNaughton, that a circular be prepared and sent to parents of successful pupils at the Entrance examinations.—Carried.

Farm and Dairy Market Report

TORONTO, Monday, July 27.—The prime interest of Ontario farmers this week is in the army worm. At first considered a small pest in Burford district it has become quite common all over the province. An estimate of the damage done was placed at $100,000 some days ago, but before the pest is checked it may amount to several times this amount. Just what effect the worm may have on the market situation cannot be determined, but probably the results will not be appreciable in quotations.

It is becoming increasingly evident that this will be an unsatisfactory and a third poor year for many farmers in Eastern Ontario and the come in the West. Last year's crops were short in the same districts and will have shorter crops this year. Many farmers who went behind last year will go still further behind this year and mortgages will be on the increase. With a few pessimistic outlook taken in many districts. In other sections of Ontario crops are good and the farmers optimistic.

WHEAT

Latest estimates point to a wheat crop in Western Canada not much greater than 60 per cent of the record crop of last year. Black rust has been reported in Southern Manitoba, but not verified as yet. These factors have had an influence in forcing up the price of hard wheat which is now quoted as follows: No. 1 Northern, 92c; No. 2, 90½c; Ontario wheat is firm, and a smaller yield prevailed. Old wheat is quoted 90c to 95c and the new crop 80c to 85c.

COARSE GRAINS

Good grains, particularly oats, are moving quite freely at steady quotations. Oats and barley are reported a good crop, with the barley harvest already started in southern ons; Ont. C. W. No. 2, 40c; No. 3, 39½c; Ontario, 38c to 40c; corn, 70½c; peas, 85c to $1.00; barley, malting, 70c to 72c; buckwheat, 60c to 62c; rye, 70c to 71c.

MILL FEEDS

Mill feeds are in active demand and firm in price. Local quotations are Bran, 23; shorts, 25; middlings, 26c to 27; feed flour, 30 to 32; Montreal quotes: Bran, 23; shorts, 25; middlings, 28; feed flour, 30 to 32.

HAY AND STRAW.

Some new hay is beginning to arrive on the market, but most of it has been sold at retail. Old hay, baled, is quoted by dealers, $14.50 to $15.50; No. 2, $13.50; straw, $8 to $9.50. The Montreal market has been doing more business on export account. No. 1 quality is priced by dealers at $17 to $17.50; No. 2, $15.50 to $16.75; No. 3, ordinary, $14 to $14.50; No. 4, $12 to $13.

EGGS AND POULTRY.

The weak tendency in the egg market mentioned last week has not developed to any extent. On the produce market straight receipts are quoted at 24c, but many lots are going at 24c. At Montreal, too, the trade has been steady during the week with a good local consumption. Straight receipts are quoted 22½c; selected, 25c to 26c and new-laids, 27c. Fresh gathered stocks in country points are reported 28c to 30c.

Receipts of poultry are increasing. Fowl, dressed, heavy, 15c to 16c; light, 13c to 14c; live, 12c to 14c; chickens, 15c to 16c; broilers, 30c to 35c; dressed turkeys, 20c to 25c; alive, 16c to 18c.

POTATOES AND BEANS

New potatoes have now become so common that they are no longer quoted in bushel or basket lots for the wholesale trade. They are now coming in in bags and are quoted at $1.75; American new potatoes bring $4 a bbl; old potatoes are quoted nominally at $3 to $3.25 a bag. The Montreal market quotes new potatoes at $1.75 to $2 per 90 lb. bag; United States' potatoes, $4 to $4.25 a bbl.

FRUIT AND VEGETABLES

Early apples, bbl., 30c to 50c; cherries, sour, bkt., 45c to 60c; choice, 70c; red currants, 35c to 40c; black, $1 $1.25; gooseberries, small and medium fruit, 3c to 4c; large fruit, 4c; plums, bkt., 40c to 45c; raspberries, 10c to 12c.

DAIRY PRODUCE

The butter outlook is brighter and prices show rallies are ½c above the lowest record for the year. As the advanced quotations shipments have been made to Vancouver and about 15,000 packages prior to the rise were exported to Britain. Increased operations may make further trade with the Old Country impossible, but New York still offers a good outlook. Substantially is dependent more largely on Vancouver than formerly, and this may interfere somewhat with the market there. On the whole however, the situation is satisfactory.

When we come to choose, however, the tendency is not toward higher prices to an appreciable extent. The Old Country purchases of last week seem to have been sufficient to mark immediate requirements and dealers on this side are not willing to come down to bottom further offers. It will be noticed that an accumulation of 177 boxes, quotations have advanced 1/16c to 1/8c. The strong feature of the butter is undoubtedly the reports of increased make throughout the country, the make seems to be great as 25 to 40 per cent. Quotations on country boards are given elsewhere.

LIVE STOCK

We have had another light week so far as live stock is concerned. In addition to small receipts the quality of many of the offerings was away below par and for aqmmon butchers' stuff the week closed 25c lower than it began. Quotations reported now, however, are on a par with those that we gave last week. Choice heavy steers, $6.65 to $6.75; handy steers, $6.15 to $6.50; butcher steers, com., to good, $5.40 to $6.10; heifers, $5.35 to $6.35; choice cows, $5.75 to $6.25; com., to good, $4.50 to $5.15; bologna bulls, $4 to $5.40; stockers, $5 to $5.90; stockers, $5.50 to $6.25; canners and cutters, $2.75 to $4.25; milch cows are in a slightly better demand. Choice ones are quoted at $65 to $70; com., to med., $45 to $60; springers, $50 to $65. Calves, 5 to 9½c, according to size and quality.

Spring lambs are in appreciably brisk demand, at $8 to $10.50. Other quotations are: Weaker lambs, $7 to $8; yeak lambs, $6.50 to $7.25; light ewes, $5.25 to $6.50; heavy sheep and bucks, $4.50 to $5; culls, $3 to $4.

Hogs are maintained firmly at $9.60 f.o.b. country points.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, July 29.—There was no improvement in the export trade in grain today, there being practically no demand from foreign buyers, and exporters were not disposed to make offers with the political situation so unsettled. The tone of the local market for oats was firm at the recent advance in prices, with a fair amount of business doing in carlots.

The export trade in spring wheat flour was quieter, but there were some sales made at a further advance of 3c per sack. The local market is steady, with a fair demand for small lots in the butter market, with a fair trade passing for local account. Cheese is quiet and steady. Eggs fairly active.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, July 29.—Apparently increasing chances that after all, the war might be narrowed down and prove brief, tended to give the wheat market today a sharp setback instead of another stunning advance. Failures which were looked for had prices at once repeated yesterday's leap of nearly 10 cents, did not develop among even the smallest traders. In consequence weakness rather than feverish strength characterized the close, with final values at virtually the lowest point of the day and 3 5-8 to 4 3-8 under last night.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 29.—The excitement of Tuesday, due to the war outbreak in Europe, was continued this morning on the wheat market, and on the curb there was heavy buying at 1½c over Tuesday's close. This fact caused Winnipeg at the official opening to start off strong, comparatively, on the distant months, but they eased off in sympathy with American when their values were posted.

Trading, however, was active on the decline, and there was little or no abatement until news from a private source spread that the war area would be localized.

Buying out of Season

MANY buyers of every class of merchandise come to decisions with respect to their plans and purchases during the summer months.

Aware of their needs they are responsive to influences, appeals and opportunities, months in advance of the actual of their necessities.

An advertiser who withdraws his messages to the buyers of his wares during the summer months chills buying ardor and postpones and endangers the gathering of the fruit of his manufacturing labor.

The buyer's resistance strengthens, and the buying impulse subsides, by the withdrawal or weakening of the pressure of advertising. The restoration of adequate pressure later on is accomplished at a cost which represents no saving in advertising bills, and the chances are that many sales have been hopelessly lost in the meantime.

The buying impulse which expresses itself in pre-season buying is capable of stimulation, and it is good business on the part of advertisers to maintain during the summer months their customary newspaper announcements.

You can obtain helpful advice on advertising free of cost and without obligation by consulting the Business Department of The EVENING EXAMINER.

JACK WHITE BACK

Riverside Park, July 30—Hamilton and Peterborough met this afternoon in the first game of the series. It was Booster Day, and that coupled with the Thursday half-holiday, drew a good crowd. Both teams showed pepper in the preliminary practice. Manager Jimmy White of the Hams selected Clements nd Red Fisher as his battery, while Tracey and Kelly were Manager Blount's choice. The Italian Orchestra played popular airs while the crowd gathered. The line-ups were as follows:

Hamilton		Peterborough
Cunningham	2b.	Blount, m.
Corns, m.		Welsh, l. f.
Pendry,		Dolan, 1b
Ivers, 1b.		Rooney, r.f.
White, l.f.		Byrne, 3b
McGroarty, r.		King 2b.
Baldwin,		Fox, s. s.
Fisher, c.		Kelly, c.
Clements,		Tracey, p.

Peterboro — Blount singled to short. Welsh popped to Cunningham. Dolan cracked a liner into McGroarty's hands, Blount going to second when McGroarty threw high to first, trying to complete a double. Rooney smashed a grounder at Ivers and was safe, but Blount was out at the plate trying to score on the play.—No runs, one hit, two errors.

SOLICITOR REPLIES TO ENQUIRER'S QUESTIONS

In the case of property situated on very low land below the level of any possible sewer and practically on river level, is the City obliged to furnish sewerage? The case in point is the low-lying land on the east side of the Otonabee and immediately south of Hunter street.

Solicitor's Answer.

In my opinion it is not necessary for the Council to lay a sewer where it is below the level where a sewer can be laid. The City does not require to give the sewage unless directed to by the Provincial Board of Health, but it may adopt the recommendation, if it desires, of the local Board of Health.

Second Question.

Could any arrangement be made with the Township whereby the property at present in the township would become liable for the cost of the sewer when it comes into the City? What advantage this have we on boundary roads as regards laying sewers, that is, we have to get permission of the Township before we can start work.

Answer.

You cannot make an arrangement with the Township binding the ratepayers in the Township to pay for it, although such an agreement might be made with the individual ratepayers in the township. I do not know of any provision which the Township could raise any objection to your laying a sewer on the north half of Lansdowne vested in the City.

MARRIAGES.

MANY BANDS THERE

The 57th Band, thirty strong, under the direction of Lieut. Gliddon, left this morning for Lindsay, where they will take part in the big band contest this afternoon. To be on a level numerically with other competing bands it was necessary for the 57th to cut down and as a result fourteen members of the band were left at home. The 57th will play three contest numbers, "Philharmonic March "Semiramide," overture, and "Blue Danube" waltzes. Among the other bands in the contest is the Port Hope organization, conducted by Walter Hughes, former cornet soloist of the 57th. Ed. Cronk and several other Peterborough musicians are with the Port Hope Band.

Tamworth Man Heard From The Missing Doctor

Special to The Examiner:

TAMWORTH, July 30 — That Dr. Robinson, suspected of having performed the operation which caused the death of Miss Blanche Yorke, wrote a letter to Damon B. Floyd, after he left the Village, from which Floyd deducted that the man would never return and that Floyd kept silent about the communication when it might have assisted the police in their investigation, were some facts elicited when the Coroner (Dr. Cowan) inquest was resumed to-day. Crown Attorney Preston declared that the contents of the letter would not be divulged at present.

Agreement Reached In Irish Problem

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, July 30.—The Exchange Telegraph Company to-day declared that it had been reliably informed that an agreement had been reached on the amending Home Rule bill. No details were mentioned. The present international crisis is believed to have played a great part in bringing the Government, Opposition and Nationalist and Unionist leaders to a point of agreement. In view of war trouble there has been a demand for the adjustment of internal troubles.

GERMAN RULER IS ENDEAVOURING TO PREVENT A GENERAL WAR IN EUROPE

Kaiser Has Taken Steps That May Bring About a Settlement--German Troops Have Not Yet Been Mobilized, Reports to the Contrary, Notwithstanding---Only Steps That Have Been Taken Are in the Direction of Peace.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BELGRADE OCCUPIED.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—A London news agency despatch received to-day from Vienna says the Austrians have occupied Belgrade and it is believed the occupation was effected without any serious opposition from the Servians. Late last evening Austrian troops are reported to have crossed the Danube on a pontoon bridge.

RATES RAISED IN LONDON.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—The Bank of England to-day raised its rate from three to four per cent., and more failures were reported. The London market, however, showed improvement. All Metropolitan policemen were recalled from their annual leaves of absence to-day at the request of the War Office. It was presumed that the police are to be used in guarding the magazines, docks and shipyards of England.

FOURTEEN ARMY CORPS READY.

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, July 30.—Russia to-day officially notified Austria and Germany of the mobilization of fourteen army corps numbering a million and a quarter men. The Czar is said to have expressed the intent of taking the field as commander-in-chief in the event of hostilities. Though St. Petersburg and Vienna did not confirm the report of the taking of Belgrade to-day, the mobilization of Russian troops was taken as confirmation.

GERMANY TAKES STEPS.

BERLIN, Germany, July 30.—The German foreign office to-day authorized this statement: "Germany has taken decisive steps at St. Petersburg, Paris and other European capitals within the past hour, the results of which will determine the issue of war or peace.

BERLIN, Germany, July 30.—Efforts toward the maintenance of peace are still in progress and Germany has not yet ordered the mobilization of her forces, according to the German foreign office.

On the other hand the German war official made this additional statement: "Germany has faithfully kept peace, and reports of the mobilization of German troops have been premature. Grmany has made no war move. The only steps taken have been in the direction of peace. Now the Fatherland must decide upon measures calculated to meet the dangerous situation resulting from Russia's activity on the frontier."

In the British House of Commons Foreign Minister Sir Edward Grey strongly emphasized the gravity of the general war situation as a result of Russian mobilization. He declared this action by the Czar had made the situation extremely acute, but said that so far no other powers had been affected.

Indicating the tremendous importance of the present war situation, Premier Asquith in the House, referred to the "possibility of an immeasurable international catastrophe." He said that on account of the imminence of the international developments the question of amending the Home Rule Bill has been postponed in order that England might present a united front. Sir Edward Grey said: "I regret that I cannot say the situation is less grave than it was yesterday. We continue to pursue our one great object of preserving European peace, and for this purpose we are keeping in close touch with other powers. We have had no difficulties so far with other ppwers, although it has not been possible for these powers to join in diplomatic action." Premier Asquith then said: "The gravity of the situation was almost unparalleled in the experience of anyone in the House. The issues of peace and war were hanging in a balance.

THREE BATTLES REPORTED.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—Three battles altogether were reported to-day along the Servian frontier. Eight hundred Servians and two hundred Austrians were reported killed in an engagement at Foca in Bosnia, with other fights at Semenoria and Kiesnicy.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—Austria and Servia were fighting to-day on the Servian ground with the the invading Austrians advanced some twenty miles toward Belgrade, and an artillery duel is in progress near Kicanicy and Semendria. At the same time the officials of the great powers were endeavouring to avert a clash, which would involve all Europe, and that task appeared to be growing more hopeless. The capital of Servia, Belgrade, surrendered without a fight. The Austrian-Hungarian invaders encountered Servian troops on the Servian side of the Danube river and heavy losses were sustained by each, with hundreds of soldiers killed in an engagement at Semendria.

RUSSIANS BLOW UP BRIDGE.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The Daily News to-day published the following despatch from its staff correspondent in Berlin: "It si reported here that the Russians have blown up the railroad bridge at Wirballen on the frontier between Germany and Russia.

CONFERENCE AT OTTAWA.

OTTAWA, July 30.—Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, came back in a hurry from Lindsay to the capital this morning, and was in conference with the officers of his department. The members were silent after the session.. It was thought that Premier Borden might be called back to Ottawa and that a special meeting of Parliament was possible to talk of contingents.

ONLY ONE EXCHANGE OPEN.

TORONTO, July 30.—The Toronto and Montreal exchanges were closed to-day, and New York was about the only one doing business on the continent. "We are waiting for the worst," was the attitude of brokers here.

PRESS IS RETICENT.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—The Admiralty has asked the press to be reticent in making mention of the movement of British warships, and the most responsible papers are complying with the request. Seamen are being warned htat severe punishment willfollow any leakage of information.

BERLIN, Germany, July 30.—A prolonged conference of the heads of fighting forces of Germany was held to-day including the Kaiser, Prince Henry, the Minister of Marine, and Minister of War. A semi-official newspaper has issued an extra declaring the mobilization of the army has been ordered. This was denied by the Foreign Office, and after the Conference the extras were recalled.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—Austrians attempting to cross the Danube river were repulsed by Servians and a big artillery engagement is in progress. The Austrian-Hungarian force invading Servia totals half a million men according to despatches.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—It is reported here by the news agency that Germany has issued a twenty-four-hour ultimatum to Russia demanding an explanation of the mobilization of the Czar's army on the Austrian frontier. Germany also wants to know if the mobilization is directed against Austria, and if Russia is willing to stop mobilization. In the meantime Germany is making all preparationsfor mobilization.

LONDON, Eng., July 30.—The Stock Exchange in Vienna and St. Petersburg closed for three days. Bank of England rate increased to 4½ per cent.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Stagnation abroad is only natural in view of the war. Prices are nominal and difficult to object. The nominal declines run from 1 to 4 points, with Union Pacific, the weak feature. An advance of 4 per cent. in the Bank of England rate was to be expected, considering the financial situation in Europe and other institutions of the same sort on the continent are sure to follow suit.

Development Period In The Oil Fields

Mr. A. M. Holland, of Calgary, representing the Almaden Alberta Oils, Limited, is in the city for a few days on business in connection with that syndicate. Citizens will find most interesting the photographs of the Calgary Oil Fields, which Mr. Holland has on exhibition in the window of the Kingan Hardware Company. Speaking to the Examiner, Mr. Holland states that the first wild rush of excitement is over, and that the period of development is at hand. Seventy-five drilling outfits are hard at work in the oil fields.

ARM BROKEN FOR THE THIRD TIME

When Will Begley's tricycle skidded at a corner in the west end last night, throwing him forcibly on to the road, he sustained a broken wrist and the third fracture in the bones of his forearms. It goes without saying that he has been particularly unfortunate in his accidents.

Scenes of Naval Activity on the English Coast.—There has been great naval activity at Portsmouth, and the British fleet has sailed from Portland. The eighth destroyer flotilla arrived and coaled at Humber. The oil tanks along the Coast have been painted to render them unobservable from the sea.

ONLY MIRACLE NOW CAN AVERT CONFLICT

Russia is War-like and Die is Cast in Favour of War Says a Despatch—Emperor to Lead.

WHOLE ARMY TO MOVE

Examiner Special:

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—In Russian eyes the die is cast. Only a political miracle can avert war.

Russia does not swerve from her determination to support Servia and partial mobilization has already been ordered. There is every indication that the whole vast military machinery of Russia will soon be put in motion.

An imperial manifesto is awaited.

Should, as it is undoubted, Emperor Nicholas before Generalissimo of the forces, an immense wave of enthusiasm will sweep over Russia.

The political parties have laid their differences.

The general attitude is not "pessimistic" but one of relentless determination in the justice of the country's cause and readiness to make preparation.

The proposal attributed to Austria to discuss terms when Belgrade had been occupied is regarded as impossible. It is pointed out that before the opening of hostilities, Russia proposed to Austrian direct exchange of views, which Austria rejected.

[The foregoing despatch has been passed by the censor without revision—a fact which is considered highly significant.]

Demonstrations Held.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—A patriotic demonstration took place on the Nevsky Prospect yesterday afternoon: A procession was formed and with banners flying, marched to the Servian legation, where there were speeches, singing and cheering. Thence the procession moved to the French and British embassies where similar scenes of enthusiasm were indulged in, the crowds still growing.

Another striking demonstration occurred at the Kazan Cathedral, where a special service was held and prayers were offered for victory to the Slav arms.

The cathedral was thronged and the officiating priest, after the ceremony, presented to the Servian Minister a fac-simile of the Ikon of the Holy Virgin of Kazan for the Servian army. The Minister handed the Ikon to officers who are starting for the front to-day.

The German and Austrian embassies are guarded on all sides by strong detachments of police and nobody is allowed to step on the adjacent footpath for fear of hostile attempts.

A confident feeling prevails here of Great Britain's support. Germany's attitude is regarded as incomprehensible, except on the assumption that she is anxious for a trial of strength at the present moment.

An Odessa patriotic procession marched through the streets yesterday bearing the portraits of Emperor Nicholas and the Kings of Servia and Montenegro and cheering for Servia, France and Great Britain.

Reserves Called Out.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.—An imperial ukase issued by the Emperor last night calls to the colors an immense number of reservists.

The men called out are: First, all the reservists of 23 whole governments, and of 71 districts in 14 other governments; second, part of the reservists of nine districts of four governments; third, the naval reservists in 64 districts of 12 Russian governments and one Finnish government; fourth, the time-expired Cossacks of the territories of Don Kuban, Terek, Astrakhan, Orenburg and Ural; fifth, a corresponding number of reservist officers of the medical and veterinary services, in addition to needful horses, wagons, and transport services in the governments and districts thus mobilised.

Peace Association Cuts Visible.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 30.—The International Peace Association, at the request of the American delegates now here, has called a meeting for next Friday. As a protest against the warlike action of Austria; the association has decided to change the meeting place of the universal peace congress in September from Vienna to Berne.

Belgium Calls Out Reserves.

BRUSSELS, Belgium, July 30.—The Belgian Cabinet decided yesterday to call out immediately, third classes of the army however.

Aviators Offer Services.

PARIS, July 30.—A large number of noted French aviators, led by Roland Garros, in a letter to the Minister of War, have offered their services.

Maurice Barrès, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and President of the League of Patriots, has issued a call for a big demonstration on the arrival at Paris of President Poincare to signify [illegible] of the people and sentiment for the Alliance of France.

STUTTGART, Wurtemberg, Germany, July 30.— Detailed [illegible] anti-war demonstrations in this city yesterday led to [illegible] disorders between the manifestants and the police that the authorities called out the troops to cope with the disturbances. Police guards were attacked with volleys of stones by the mobs.

SUGGESTION OF SEWER SERVICE FOR TOWNSHIP

Idea Has Merely Been Intimated in Connection With Trunk Sewer —Some Objections

DEALT WITH MONDAY

That Monaghan may apply to the City for sewer connection was intimated by Mayor Buller at last night's meeting of the Board of Works. The subject was mentioned in connection with the discussion of the commencement of the trunk sewer, and also the provision of services to houses on Maude and Lansdowne streets. The whole question is yet in the air, but there is some likelihood of an arrangement being entered into between the two municipalities.

Reeve Howden broached the question when considering for the last time the City's new trunk sewer. He asked whether an agreement could not be arrived at whereby streets in Monaghan could be given a sewer service.

Mayor Buller was inclined to think that the Township would first have to vote on the question, and the City did not wish to be further delayed while adjoining municipalities made up their minds.

Ald. Duncan saw objections to the idea in the possibility of such a sewer not being laid to the proper levels.

Mr. Parsons stated that it remained for the Provincial Board of Health to decide upon. If they ordered the sewers on township streets in the interest of public health they would have to be laid, and property owners would have to bear the cost.

The discussion then switched to providing a service for the houses on Maude street. This has already been referred to in an article a few evenings ago, when a report was given. It was the Mayor's opinion that special legislation would have to be secured to lay a sewer on a boundary road in order that the whole charge would not be made gainst the residents within the City.

One of the aldermen suggested that the easiest way out of the situation in regard to the section of the township east of Park and south of Lansdowne Street, would be to annex it, but this is dependent upon the wishes of the residents within that district.

It is likely that something or other will be done with this matter at the regular meeting of the Council on Monday next.

POLICE COURT

In the Police Court this morning George Edwards and Wilfred Ireland were each fined $2 and costs, $5.75 in all, for drunkenness.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1914

ACCIDENTAL JUSTICE.

If Dr. Robinson of Tamworth, the medical adviser of "Happy" Yorke had paid for his furniture, goodness knows how ong he woud have been unsuspected. He might have spent a month's holidays in the restful quiet of the Attorney-General's Department, Toronto, without being subjected to any unpleasant attentions. Justice owed less to the energy and astuteness of its recognised "sleuths" than to the devotion to duty of a bum bailiff.

A CONTRAST.

The front page of the Toronto News of last night bristles with big letters, heading reports of millions of men in arms, ready to murder each other by thousands, with wasted cities, devastated fields and wide-spread desolation. It also contains, as a contrast, the heading, "Humane Society up in arms over cruelty to lobsters." The Toronto Branch of the Royal Humane Society, very properly objects to boiling alive as the best way to kill lobsters for food. It might also register a protest against the inhumanity and wholesale barbarity of war. The contrast is too obvious to need comment.

COMPENSATION ACT.

The idea of organized labour in Toronto, that there should be a specific representation of labour interests on the commission intrusted with the administration of the Compensation Act for Ontario, is reasonable and proper. The necessity of such a representation on the board is emphasized by the fact that the Government in the appointment of a chairman, has evidently deferred to political and partizan considerations, which should have no place in so important a body. There is a tendency in governments to ignore the claims of labour. In Ontario the Government delayed seven years in enacting a Compensation Act, and then it acted only under pressure. Recently in England, a Liberal Government, distinguished for its altruistic legislation, in arranging a conference in relation to Home Rule, omitted to provide for the attendance of a labour representative. If Pope was right in asserting that the best form of government is that that is best administered, we can rightly conclude that the best compensation act is that which is best administered. Not only should administration of the Compensation Act be just and fair; but in a virtually beneficiary measure, the administrators should have a sympathetic attitude toward the interests in whose behalf primarily the legislation was enacted. A man of this character should be given a place on the Board; assuming always, that he is qualified in other respects, with an adequate knowledge of the provisions of the Compensation Act, and first-hand practical knowledge of labour, employment and industrial conditions.

AN APPOSITE PROPOSAL.

In a letter to the Examiner, Dr. Cameron proffers an excellent suggestion. His proposal is that, in connection with the anticipated celebration of the opening of the Trent Canal from Lake Simcoe to Lake Ontario the three-hundredth anniversary of Champain's voyage over these same waters, should concurrently and conjointly be observed. The Champlain tercentenary will fall in September, 1915. By all means celebrate in some fitting manner the completion of a great work, which has been under way—by degrees—for nearly a third of three hundred years. The opening of the Trent Canal means much to Peterborough and the district served by its waters, as well as to the grain moving interests of the West. Such a celebration would, however, be a recognition of the success of a merely material undertaking, with the necessarily sordid interests of commerce as the main motive. Why not add a sentimental interest to the occasion by including the commemoration of the first white man to traverse the waters included in the completed Trent Valley waterway? We are a young people, rough, rude, and democratic, with yet too little historical afterlight—glamour of the past, glorious or otherwise. A celebration of Champlain's voyage through Peterborough and the connecting waters of the Trent Valley could very appropriately synchronize with the celebration of Canal opening. The enterprising Champlain was the first to call attention to the navigation possibilities of the route. He passed the waters by paddle and portage when the only welcome was the howling of the forest beasts. He blazed, so to speak, the way; he was the true, the real pioneer of Trent water navigation. Therefore, it seems meet and right that, when "time and place adhere" so happily, we should add to the eclat of celebrating one event by incuding the great historical prototype of its completed complement in any celebration of canal opening, especially when the date of Champlain's three-hundredth anniversary is so close at hand. Dr. Cameron appositely says:

> As we are going to consider the celebrations of the Trent Canal system, we might consider this historical fact, (Champlain's voyage); and, while we mark the consummation of a great commercial enterprise, can we not at the same time pay honour to the memory of the original pathfinder?
>
> The idea is worth thinking over, and acting upon.

THE CANDID FRIEND.

So staunch a thick-and-thin defender of the Whitney Government as the Toronto News condemns the universally condemned and chronic inactivity of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department, which does the wizard act of permitting big fish criminals to escape through the net that catches the small fry, besides generally neglecting the interest of the administration of justice. The News on its editorial page, and in black type, under the heading, "Slack Work," says:

> Remarkable circumstances surround the discovery of Miss Blanche Yorke's remains in the house occupied by Dr. C. K. Robinson. For weeks the police have been investigating Miss Yorke's disappearance. It was reported that no suspicion attached to Dr. Robinson and apparently it was not thought necessary to make any exhaustive examination of the house in which the body was found. Dr. Robinson was allowed to disappear and weeks elapsed before the real facts were uncovered. Even then the discovery was the result of an accident rather than of the vigilance of the authorities. The Attorney-General's Department should take all the facts and circumstances under serious consideration.

When a rabid partizan journal like the News plays the part of the candid friend there must be something especially and essentially rotten in the state of the Department of the Attorney-General, to justify its mutiny.

PROVINCIAL AND FEDERAL PUBLIC DEBT OF CANADA

The notion widely held in Canada of the waste and extravagance of the public administration in the United States, seems not to be warranted by the facts. According to a report on the national and state indebtedness just issued by the director of the Bureau of the Census Deaprtment at Washington, the net federal debt, that is, the gross debt less cash in the treasury available for debt payment, is a little more than a billion and a half dollars, or $10.30 per head. The debt of the forty-eight states, less sinking funds, accumulated for debt payment, is $346,942,305, or $3.57 a head. The total net federal and state indebtedness is, therefore, only $14.16 a head. Several states are free, or practically free, of debt, for example, Oregon, the per capita debt of which is four cents, Kansas fourteen cents, Iowa sixteen cents, New Jersey twenty-four cents, and Pennsylvania nothing, the sinking fund assets in that state exceeding the whole debt.

It is difficult to make an accurate comparison of Canada's public administration. According to the Canada Year Book, the gross federal debt of Canada in 1912 was $508,838,592, and the net debt $339,919,461, or $45.52 per head. But, in Canada the net debt is not arrived at by merely deducting from the gross the cash in the treasury. If, as in the United States, that course were followed, the net debt of the Dominion would be stated as more than $80.00 a head. There are also contingent liabilities of guaranteeing private enterprise, dangerous policy in vogue in Canada, of guaranteeing private enterprise, which it is impossible to appraise. These contingent liabilities also embarrass the estimate of the indebtedness of the Provinces. British Columbia, we read, has guaranteed Mackenzie and Mann to the extent of nearly forty-eight millions. Ontario's contingent liabilities, largely on account of Mackenzie and Mann, are about ten millions. The total direct liabilities of the Province of Ontario are now about thirty millions, or twelve dollars a head, from which in making a comparison with the United States, it is not permissible to deduct the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, and the Hydro-Electric expenditures, but only current cash, and a few trifling sinking funds.

It seems just to say that the total Federal and Provincial indebtedness of Canada is not less than sixty dollars a head, or at least four times greater than the Federal and State indebtedness of the United States. Ontario industry, which must be already seriously handicapped, would do well to keep these figures in mind when weighing the schemes for automobile roads and trolleys now being pushed. To the Dominion and Provincial indebtedness is to be added the municipal indebtedness, ranging in most towns ambitious to develop manufactures, from fifty to a hundred dollars a head, all entailing an onerous interest charge.

MONEY TO LOAN

Did You Ever Figure This Way

To purchase a modern house with furnace at $1900 and pay $200 down on same and balance at 6 per cent and taxes and insurance, what this really costs on monthly basis.

Purchase at $1900 pay $200 down

Balance $1700 at 6 per cent is $102 per year.

Taxes for one year is $30.

Insurance for one year is $2.50. $134.50 for the year or in other words $11.21 per month for a modern house. Now if you are paying $15 a month rent what do you save out of your rent money, just $11.21 from $15 leaves $3.79 per month or $45.48 per year saved out of ordinary rent money this applied on the principal will gradually pay it off and you will have a home of your own clear of debt in a few years you have to pay rent anyway, why not be paying on a home of your own. If you call at 324 George Street I will explain better to you how to make this start. Don't be afraid to venture. Many good offerings to show you and a distance given in many ways.

PETES MAKE IT TWO OUT OF THREE WIN ANOTHER CLOSE ONE FROM ORTMEN

Schettler Nailed His Fifth Straight Win After a Fine Battle With Graham—Fox's Error Was a Feature.

BLOUNT'S CIRCUS CATCH

Fans are generally agreed that the three games just finished with Toronto were the best series of the season. Splendid pitching and sensational fielding featured the three battles. All three games were won by one run, either team scored more than three runs in a game, and altogether there were only thirteen runs scored by both clubs in twenty-eight innings. It was all tight ball nearly all the way with three of the best pitching duels of the year strung along in a row. The most ardent fan could not wish for any better ball. Just glance over the three scores:

Monday.

	R	H	E
Toronto	3	7	1
Peterborough	2	7	2

Tuesday.

	R	H	E
Peterborough	2	7	0
Toronto	1	6	1

Wednesday.

	R	H	E
Peterborough	3	6	1
Toronto	2	6	2

The total for the three days is worth pasting in your hip book. Here it is:

	R	H	E
Peterborough	7	20	3
Toronto	6	19	4

After ninety minutes of brilliance, the Petes grabbed another game from Toronto yesterday, making the rubber game of the series. 3 runs to 2. Like the other two games with the Beavers it was a battle all the way and for the third fixture in succession it was a light hitting affair with the pitchers in command. Lefty Schettler was Manager Blount's selection, and the strike-out king justified his fourth successive win. The curly boy showed an unusual lack of control, passing five and hitting batter, but he had oceans of stuff, fanning nine Beavers and keeping the hitting down to six safeties, scattered into many innings. He twice developed a wild streak, forcing in a run on each occasion, but an error on one base, and dumb baseball in other spots helped to set the stage for the run-getting. Twice the bases were jammed to capacity, but only one run resulted in each instance. On another occasion, Hunt opened an innings with a three-base knock, but Schettler fanned Ort, got Trout on a pop fly to Dolan and forced Killilea to fly out to Rooney.

Alex. Graham, the Dorchester Valley League graduate, was the Toronto leaver, and this same Graham liver had a mighty nice game. He held perfect control and allowed the Petes but six hits. The homesters earned only one run off his delivery and Graham showed a brand that would have earned him the decision in most all games. A dropped fly ball by Trout in the first innings blossomed into two runs. With two out Dolan singled. Rooney followed with a fly to left which Trout got under and then dropped. Byrne's single then scored both runners. Toronto claimed he had held the ball momentarily, but Umpire Miller could not see it that way.

The other Peterborough run was a home run by Frank Fox in the second. The local shortstop got hold of the first ball Graham pitched and drove it far down the right field foul line into the river. It was the first home run by a Peterborough player at Riverside Park this season, and Fox got a big hand when he crossed the plate. Incidentally Fox played fine ball all in the field, making several fine stops and throws, while the whole play he pulled off with King at Dolan was one of the best of the season. Fox went over behind second, speared Schultz's hot grounder, tossed it to King forcing Isaac, and making a lightning work got the ball over to Dolan in time to nail the hitter.

Joe Byrne made a sensational catch of a low twisting foul fly from Ort's bat in the ninth innings. He had to run to the fence for it and grabbed the ball.

It remained for Curly Blount, however, to supply the climax. With two gone in the ninth, Ort grabbed a low liner to right centre. It looked like a sure single, but Blount broke in on the dead run, dove for it, nailed the ball an inch from the ground and turning over a couple of times came up clutching the sphere. It was the best catch of the year at Riverside Park.

Hunt, the Toronto left fielder, also got a homer when Rooney, in trying to nail his fly along the left field line, after a long run knocked the ball into the river. The ball was inside the foul flag and was only two or three bases, according to ground rule.

First Innings.

Toronto—Hunt flied to Blount. Trout hoisted to Rooney. Trout singled to centre. Killilea flied to Rooney. Runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Blount grounded to Graham. Welsh fouled to Schultz. Dolan singled to right. Rooney hit a fly which Trout nearly nailed but then dropped, Rooney going to second and Dolan to third. Byrne singled to centre scoring Dolan and Rooney, and taking second on the throw to the plate. King grounded to Ort. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Second Innings.

Toronto—Isaac flied to Rooney. Schultz fanned. Burrill also missed three. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Fox hit the first ball pitched into the river for a home run. Kelly was out, Graham to Schultz. Schettler chased Burrill back to the track for his long fly. Blount rolled to Ort. One run, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Toronto—Snell singled to right. Graham fanned. Hunt hit to Fox and every one was safe on the shortstop's bad toss to King. Ort walked, filling the bases. Trout was passed, forcing in Snell. Killilea fanned. Isaac lined to Fox. One run, one hit, one error.

Peterborough—Welsh fanned. Dolan grounded to Killilea. Burrill made a fine catch of Rooney's long smash to right centre. No runs, hits or errors.

Fourth Innings.

Toronto—Schultz struck out. Burrill hoisted to King. Snell singled to right, hitting the ball in self-defence. Graham fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Byrne fanned. King flied to Hunt. Fox hoisted to Ort. No runs, hits or errors.

Fifth Innings.

Toronto—Hunt tripled to right. Rooney made a fine stab for the ball. Ort fanned. Trout hoisted to Dolan. Killilea flied to Rooney. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Kelly flied to Burrill. Schettler grounded to Graham. Blount rolled to Killilea. No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Toronto—Isaac singled to right. Schultz hit into a beautiful double play, Fox to King to Dolan. Burrill walked and was out stealing, Kelly to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Welsh grounded to Graham. Dolan fanned. Rooney was safe on Killilea's wide throw, and was out stealing, Snell to Ort. No runs, or hits, one error.

Seventh Innings.

Toronto—Snell got a lucky double when Welsh and Fox let his fly drop without trying for it. Graham fanned. Hunt struck out. Ort walked. Trout was hit, filling the bases. Killilea walked, Snell scoring. Isaac flied to Rooney. One run, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Byrne lined to Trout. King singled over third. Fox singled to right, sending King to third. Fox stole second. Kelly fanned. Schettler grounded to Killilea. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Toronto — Schultz grounded to King. Burrill rolled to Fox. Snell died on a grounder to Schettler, who tagged the runner on the line. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Blount singled to right. Welsh sacrificed, Graham to Schultz. Dolan cracked a liner into Ort's hands and Blount was doubled, Ort to Killilea. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Innings.

Toronto—Gadsby batted for Graham and was out on a foul to Byrne who tore off a sensational catch. Hunt lifted to Byrne. Blount ended the game with a spectacular catch of Ort's low liner. No runs, hits or errors.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Spectator:—Ten days ago the Canadian League race was all over. London had amassed a lead which looked plenty good enough to carry them through to the finish for a cleancut victory. At the same time Frank Shaughnessy's Senators were faltering while the others were too far back to cause much trouble. Things are somewhat different to-day, though, thanks to the Erie Yanks. Playing irresistible ball, the kind which humbled the Hams in three of the four games on the local lot, the Yanks have hammered the Cockney pitchers in no easy fashion in the past few days, with the result that the best London has on Ottawa at the present time is five games. Ottawa and London start a four-game series in London to-morrow. On this will depend the twist that the league race will take for the balance of the season. If the Cockneys take the series from the Senators it will be all over but the shouting. If Shag is able to keep his lads battling and get the edge on the Cockneys some excitement can be expected in the month to come, with the Senators coming through with another one of those pennant-winning spurts for which any team handled by Shaughnessy is famous.

There is still ample opportunity for a real tight scramble down the home stretch for the league pennant. Erie is still very much in the running and a lot can happen in the next six weeks. The race is far from over and London is far from secure on the perch at present occupied. The Cockneys are due for a good slump and to run into it in August will prove more disastrous than if they had it at any other time.

BRANTFORD, Ont., July 29.—Honey Gero, the star twirler of the Brantford Red Sox, was this morning sold to Ottawa. Ottawa has been after him on several occasions, and Gero wanted to go to the Capital, so the sale was made.

Gora has won ten and lost six this season with a tail end club and is rated one of the best pitchers in the Canadian League. It is not unlikely he will be sent in against his former team mates to-day.

Ottawa Free Press:—Tinker to Evers to Chance was the stereotyped record in the summary of box scores of the Chicago Cubs some years ago. Nowadays in the Canadian League you read every day Mitchell to Smejkal to Dolan. The Ottawa infield is pulling double plays on an average of better than one a day. Since the arrival of Shortstop Mitchell, the primary defence of the Senators has been speeded up to just twice as fast as it formerly was. Double killings are the rule rather than the exception, and where there is the slightest chance of pulling one, the Slam bang twins around second are taking a chance and getting a surprising lot of them. No more time double was ever pulled off than that in the ninth inning of last Saturday's game against Toronto when with first and second occupied, George Ort smashed one a mile a minute to Mitchell, who tossed to Smejkal, forcing one runner at second. Smeckwhipped the ball to Dolan in time to get Ort. Some fans remarked that Mitchell made the right play as two were better than one, and playing the ball to third would have precluded all chance of a double. Instantaneous thinking as well as quick action is required around second base, and Mitchell is the boy who is equipped with both qualities. Since he has been speeded up to just twice as fast teem double plays have been made by the Senators, twelve of them starting around second base.

Draughters Beat Bankers 4 Runs To 3

The Draughting Room won an exciting game from the Bankers last night in the Mercantile League, winning 4 to 3. When the Bankers went to bat they were 4 to 0 behind, but they staged a rally that netted them three runs. Brown pitched fine ball for the winner, while Smythe also pitched well for the Bankers, while his hitting featured. Bill Shaw umpired. The teams were as follows:

Draughting Room—Staunton c, Gorman p, Walker 1b, Olson 2b, Barrie ss, Jackson 3b, Cranfield lf, Metheral m, Hagerman rf.

Bankers—Phelan c, Smythe p, Parson 1b, Paton 2b, Minorgan ss, Sheehy 3b, Cavanah lf, Aikins m, Panter rf.

Draughting Room	20200*—4

LEFT-HANDED BOWLING WON KENTISH VICTORY

LONDON, July 29.—Wonderful bowling on the part of two famous left-handers—Wooley and Blythe—gave Kent a surprising victory over Notts by 47 runs yesterday. Blythe took five wickets for 20, Wooley 5 for 30. Gunn (Notts) made 142 not out; Lee 80, Wooley (Kent) 92, and Hubble 73.

Essex won from Leicester by six wickets despite the splendid second innings of 521 obtained by the losing side, whose first innings score amounted to 92. Essex's first and second innings were 428 and 186 for four respectively. For Essex, Russell made 146, Bristowe 61, Captain Turner, 66. For Leicester, Coe made 152, Whitehead 36, Bannister 64, Sharp 61.

Gloucester succumbed to Lancashire by a margin of 237 runs. Sharp, for Lancaster, made 109, W. Tyldsley 61, Makepiece 56. For Gloucester, Cranfield scored 26, Smith 25.

LONDON, July 29.—Surrey beat Sussex by one wicket. For Surrey, Knight made 71, and for Sussex, Vincent made 72.

BASEBALL

There will be a meeting of the Mercantile League executive at the Y.M.C.A. at 7.30 to-morrow night to consider the protest of the De Laval team against player Wing, of the Red Cap team.

Mr. Jack Bigelow of Lindsay, has left to join the ranks of the ball players. He has been sent to Bradford, Penn., on the recommendation of Fox, the Peterborough Canadian League shortstop. It is hoped that Jack makes good, and Lindsay fans wish him every success. "Frisco" Jack is no mean ball player, and although he would not sign up with any of the local teams this summer, he has had a number of stiff workouts at the Agricultural Park, and is said to be in good condition.

Saturday Is Booster Day A Chance For Everyone

Fans should remember that Saturday is a Booster Day for the ball club and those unable to get out this afternoon will be able to help along on Saturday afternoon, the last game of the Hamilton series. The price of admission to the grounds will be 25c., the same as usual, but an aditional 25c will be charged for the stands.

Fox Wins Davis' Cigars, A $5.00 Pipe And Safety Razor

The standing offer of S. Davis & Sons, Limited, Manufacturers of High Class Cigars, of a box of their "Perfection" brand cigars to any Peterborough player making a home run at Riverside Park, was taken advantage of last night by Shortstop Frank Fox, who called on Art Clysdale and collected the "torches" for his circuit clout in yesterday's game with the Toronto Beavers.

Much to the regret of the fans this is the first box of "Perfections" Mr. Clysdale has been called upon to deliver on behalf of the Davis people. However, there is lots of time yet, as the offer is good for the while season, and as Fox has started the ball rolling, which by the way nearly rolled into the river yesterday, it is to be hoped his "sparring partners" will follow suit and put a crimp in Clysdale's stock of Davis "Perfections."

Fox also received the handsome $5 pipe donated by Mr. Clysdale for the first home run on the local grounds by a Peterborough player, and the Auto Strop Safety Razor presented by the Morgan Hardware Company.

Preparing For Sports On Labour Day

The commitee having charge of the sports at Riverside Park on Labour Day, met last night. Mr. W. Cotton was elected as chairman, and Mr. Miller, sports secretary. A fine schedule of events was drawn up for presentation to the general committee on Monday next for approval. Watch for further particulars.

Local football teams desirous of entering the contest for the Peck Trophy, are requested to send names to C. Hammacott, secretary general commitee, 88 McDonnel street. There is one entry to date, viz., from All Saints' footbal team.

Press In England Divided On Question Of Participation In Outcropping Of Austrian Affairs

The Times speaks without the smallest hesitation to-day about England's participation, should Russia and France be involved, in language whose gravity is obvious at this moment of crisis. It says: "The people of England know that the surest way to preserve peace, for which theylong, and perhaps the only way, is to make clear to all that if her friends are forced into war,England will support them to the full."

Interest Versus Friendship.

"We have no selfish interests to serve. We have no direct interests except those of seeing elementary fair play in the quarrel betwen Vienna and Belgrade, but we had little direct interest also in the controversy over Algeciras, none at all in the controversy at Agadir.

"Nevertheless we showed we were ready on both occasions to give our friends all the support at our command in the vindication of their rightful claims. We did so because it is our settled interest, and traditional policy to uphold the balance of power in Europe. It is for that object that we entered the entente with France and her ally. To ethat entente we remain faithful. Come what may, England will be found as ready to stand by her friends today as she ever was aiding Europe to fling off the despotism of Napoleon."

France Expects Aid.

This is also the expectation of France, according to the Paris correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, who says: "The first step in the defence of Austria by Germany must be an attack upon France. The German plan is a violent and sudden atack upon France, after which, it being assumed that attack is overwhelmingly successful, Germany will be just in time to turn around upon Russia, who is always slow in her mobilization. Finally, all this means the British fleet making swift dash to annihilate the Germans. In short, the conflagration once lit, no one knows where it will stop."

British Protests.

The English Ministerial press as emphatically repudiates England's participation. The Daily News says:

"The suggestion that we should spend British lives and British treasure to establish Russia in the Balkans would be an inconceivable outrage to a democratic country. Our hands are free in this business. We must take care to keep them free. Let us work zealously to preserve peace, but remember that the most effective work for peace which we can do is to make it clear that not a British life shall be sacrificed for the sake of Russian hegemony of the Slav world."

Another Protest.

Mr. Hirst, editor of the Economist, makes a passionate protest in the Daily News against what he calls the yellow press' scream of war, and hints that Mr. Churchill's mobilization of the fleet was an outburst of meddlesome chauvinism.

"If four millions of Russians and Servians are to be flung against four millions of Germans and Austrians that should be enough. If the military furies drag fifteen hundred thousand Frenchmen and an equal number of Italians into the conflict, that will supply three million more reasons why Britain should remain at peace," he continues.

"No British interest is involved. It is no concern of ours. If the war spreads and we are entangled, great financial houses and great merchants will topple down like nine-pins, capital will perish, mills close, shops empty, orders for advertisements cease, employment drop, wages fall."

Fined $10 On Assault Charge

Mrs. Agnes Blair Swore That Patrick Jeffries Kicked Her

Patrick Jeffries of Driscoll Terrace was charged before Magistrate Dumble this morning with assault upon Agnes Blair, on Saturday last. He pleaded not guilty.

When placed in the box Mrs. Blair said that she was in the dining room of her house, 434 Driscoll Terrace, on Saturday last, when her two boys, aged 8 and 12, respectively, ran into the house, one hiding in the cellar, and the other behind herself. Jeffries came to the door after the boys, and notwithstanding the fact that she repeatedly told him to come no further, he insisted, with the result that she slapped his face. Prisoner then stepped back and gave her "the full benefit of his foot". She had a nine-months'-old baby in her arms at the time. The prisoner then volunteered the information that he could lick her father, her brother, her husband, or anyone else who belonged to her, and went away. Dr. McPherson saw the marks caused by the blow, but was unable to appear, having an engagement at the Hospital.

Fred Blair testified to the effect that he had a quarrel with Mr. Jeffries' girl over an orange, hence the reason for the prisoner chasing him. He repeated the evidence of the plaintiff.

Jeffries stated that on Saturday he told young Blair to go away from the verandah, when the boy replied: "I don't have to, you — —." He went to Mrs. Blair to complain of the boy's language when Mrs. Blair came out on the verandah and struck him in the face. He did not go to the door, and denied that he kicked her, or that she had a baby in her arms.

Mrs. Jeffries gave evidence along the same lines as her husband, save that she swore that Mrs. Blair had the baby in her arms when her husband went to her verandah.

The Matron of the Salvation Army stated that she examined Mrs. Blair and found a large bruise which could not have been caused by a fall, but may have been caused by a kick.

On the evidence the Magistrate said that the fault was first with the Blair boys, who stole the Jeffries' girl's orange, and secondly, with Mrs. Blair. He found, however, that Mrs. Blair was kicked a severe blow, which was not warranted and that Jeffries was guilty of assault. Jeffries was fined $10.

Lost $30.

"Guilty, and sorry to say it," pleaded George Edwards, when charged before Magistrate Dumble with drunkenness. He had never been in Court before.

"Where do you come from?" asked the Magistrate.

"Coboconk."

"Is it a 'dry' country?"

"No."

"What work do you do?"

"I'm a rancher."

Upon this the Magistrate remarked that he could not have done any work recently for his hands were like silk. Edwards lifted his left hand from the dock and showing a hand minus several fingers, said: "I've done a little, that's how I lost these."

The Chief reported that the accused had lost thirty dollars yesterday.

"I did," ventured the prisoner.

"Then this is the place in which to lose it," added the Magistrate.

Edwards was told he would be discharged if he would go home at once.

"You bet I will," said the prisoner and promptly did so.

How War Would Affect the Money Condition of World

Mr. W. D. Matthews, who is a director of the C.P.R., the Dominion Bank, and a number of large industrial companies in Canada, made the following statement this morning: "If the price of grain advanced in Europe through any action that might be taken in Europe to prevent shipments from Russia, it would be to the advantage of Canada. I do not think our local trade would be affected by the war, particularly if it is confined to Austria and Servia. If the war were continued for a long time, it would certainly have the result of making money conditions all over the world more or less stringent, and Canada would suffer proportionately. Fortunately our banks have been acting in a very conservative way for the past year or two, and as a result their reserves have increased to an amount that is beyond what is usual at this time of the year. It would appear, therefore, that they are amply prepared with money for the ordinary business requirements of the country and to 'move the crops as soon as they are ready to market. We are essentially an agricultural country, and any advance in the price of agricultural products would be very satisfactory to the farmer and would help to offset any loss resulting from any diminution in this year's total yield."

"What are your latest advices on the crop?" he was asked.

"The crop this year is very 'spotty.' We hear of the bad places, but not of the good. On the whole, I think we can expect a fair yield."

Banks Have Barrels of Money.

"The present crisis in Europe has happened at a most opportune time as regards Canada," said a local financier, who is especially interested in municipal financing. "Everyone had been going steadily, with sails very closely reefed. We are in a good position. There has been heavy liquidation, and the banks have barrels of money. I do not think the war will hurt Canada at all, that is as far as we know now.

"As to municipal finances, they are in a most desirable shape. The stringent money conditions that will likely result from he war will not affect us in that respect materially, for the simple reason that municipal expenditure has been pared to the limit this year."

"Providing that trans-shipment is possible," said James Richardson and Sons, grain merchants, "war in Europe will certainly help grain prices. It is fortunate that the United Staes has the largest crop in its history this year. No doubt the war will affect our Danubian shipments. Yesterday in Winnipeg, July wheat rose 4 5-8 cents a bushel, and I notice the cables this morning already show a gain higher than ours yesterday. Our advices say that the Canadian crop is suffering from bad weather conditions at present. There is too much heat."

"As far as can be seen now," said Mr. Catto, secretary of W. R. Brock and Co., "the war will not affect us. Austria does not do a large business with Canada, and the war there will not affect our internal trade."

Ulster Is Overshadowed.

"Never before as long as I can remember have the world's exchanges closed like this," said a prominent Toronto banker this morning. Up to yesterday Ulster was uppermost in every one's mind. The Dublin affair was really a blessing in disguise. Ulster I would say has depressed the London market more than anything else. The Mexican situation was clearing up very slowly, but still clearing. Much money had been lost there, and securities were still weak. Then there was a fear that Brazil might lapse from the gold standard, but I understand that at present satisfactory arrangements have been made. So that while the world's markets were at their weakest and unable to offer resistance, the crushing news that war had been declared, was sufficient to cause a panic. A general European war involving England, France, Germany, Austria, etc., is really unthinkable. It surely will be averted. But supposing the worst did come to pass, Canada is in a fairly good position. The war will not strike us in a period of expansion. Retrenchment and curtailment have been the order of the day. And no new money would be forthcoming from London. Building and construction would stop at once and so I say even granting that an European war should break out, Canada is better equipped to stand it owing to the recent temporary depression than she would have been two years ago. The United States has a bumper crop and of course the sellers of foodstuffs would benefit greatly, but the result of such a benefit is very questionable.

MOUNT PLEASANT, July 30. — Mrs. Jos. Bland, Mrs. H. J. McLean and Master Eric McLean were the guests of Mrs. T. Thorton of Peterborough on Friday.

Miss Kellet and Miss Rene Ewing of Toronto, are visiting Mrs. Joseph Fee.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Patterson of Newbery, Oregon, are in Mt. Pleasant, their native town, calling on their numerous old friends.

They have resided in North Dakota and Oregon for 34 years and this is Mr. Patterson's first visit to his old home in that time. Their many friends and relatives are delighted to have a call from Mr. and Mrs. Patterson.

News has arrived of the demise of the late Mr. Charlie Rutherford, an ex-Mount Pleasant old boy, at the home of his sister, Mrs. D. Blaylock of Omemee. The deceased has been in poor health for some time, but the sad news of his death came as quite a distinct shock and sorrow to the many relatives and friends.

Miss Kate Harrison of Toronto is holidaying with her friends in Mt. Pleasant.

Mrs. Harry Keen of Toronto is paying a visit to her parents, Mr. andMrs. Joseph Lowes of town.

Mrs. W. G. Marsh of Richmond Hill is visiting her many friends in town, being the guest of her mother, Mrs. James McLean.

Mr. Ed. Smith of Peterborough is visiting at his home, here.

Mr. Wm. Smith has returned from a fishing trip down Pigeon River, where he had an enjoyable trip and met with fair success.

Rev. Mr. Wordsworth of Aurora was the preacher in the Presbyterian Church last Sabbath.

Our baseball team played a match game with Omemee Club on Wednesday evening.

Berry picking is the order of the day and groups of our Villagers may be seen wending their way to the patches and frequently returning with well-filled vessels. Had the rains been more frequent the crop would have been a record one. Potatoes and other garden vegetables seem to have suffered from the continued drought. Apples and pears will be a short crop.

The Women's Institute are intensely interested in an autograph quilt from the proceeds of which they hope to be able to defray the construction of cement walks on the principal streets of the Village.

Mrs. Foster Kingstone and children of Ida are in Town on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Morden of Omemee recently visited his son, Mr. C. Morden of the Village.

CONFLICTING STORIES.

LETTERS INDICATE THAT WORKMEN WERE GIVEN A FINE RECEPTION

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I will esteem it a great favour if you will give this little article a space in your valuable paper, re the complaints of "Truth" and "Indignant Englishman," of being deceived by the offer of work, after no little trouble.

Well I happen to be one of the bunch employed by the agent in this city, who by the way had written authority from the boss of the camp to send out a bunch of men.

We took train to Lakefield and then the boat to Mount Julian, and when we got there some of us were fronted with a walk of about 22 miles. Anyway we did the walk, encouraged by the thought that there would be work for us when we got to the camp. A few of us managed to get to the camp that night, but the others had to make the best of it in the bush. We, that reached the camp, started work next morning, and were told the following morning before startuig to work, that we wouldn't be required, as there were lots of men for the job. That meant another walk of 25 miles for some of us. We haven't been paid for the time we worked, so I think it is up to the boss to act the gentleman and come across with our pay which rightly belongs to us and to nobody else, also pay our expenses, which were incurred through his fault.

I may add that we were forced to sleep in the open one night, for we were driven to take shelter from a thunderstorm, and our only shelter was an icehouse. The ice had a thin layer of saw-dust on the top,—not a comfortable bed I can assure you, but still we were glad of it.

Thanking you in anticipation of this finding a space in your valuable, I am,

Yours truly,

ONE OF THE MUGS.

BOARD OF WORKS NOTES

A. Fife, Secretary of the St. James' Methodist Church, wrote asking that the street in front of the Church be watered. A hydrant is located near at hand, but a platform is required for a watering cart. It was decided that the Mayor, Street Commissioner and Ald. Duncan see the watering contractor with a view to laying the dust on this section of the street.

Will Pay $32.50 Bill.

A bill for $32.50 from the B. F. Ackerman Company for the rental by the City of property next to their building was ordered to be paid. It had been used for the storage of wood for the Charity Board.

Want Several Crossings.

Mr. W. H. Munro wrote requesting that a crossing be built at the new George Street Wharf, and another at the corner of George and Westcott streets. These would provide good walking for persons alighting from street cars and would provide a clean (instead of dusty or muddy) crossing.

On motion of Ald. Green, seconded by Ald. Stratton the petition was left with Ald. Duncan and Mr. Parsons with power to act.

EXCHANGE RATE IS HIGHER

The rate of exchange today between London and Canada is the highest ever known in the history of banking. This is the direct result of the war scare.

SHOES MAY GO UP.

Effect of War On the Price of Leather All Over the World.

CHICAGO, July 30 — If the war lasts long, the price of shoes will take an upward bound, according to J. Harry Seiz, president of the Seiz-Schwab Shoe Co. There is no immediate danger, but the fact that there is no leather surplus and the demand for millions of pairs of shoes after war begins will affect prices, Seiz declared.

"Leather follows the price of wheat in war times," he said. "There will be hundreds of thousands of men involved in the struggle, and that means shoes. Soft leather will rise first and the hard will come next."

VIEWS OF LABOUR ON ADMINISTRATION OF COMPENSATION ACT

The Necessity of Sympathetic Attitude of Commission Towards Application of the Act

The fact that the Chairman of the Board that will administer the new Workmen's Compensation Act for Ontario, has already been appointed, has awakened added interest among the workers to the question as to what the Government intends to do in the matter of the appointment of the remaining members of the board. Labour interests feel very strongly that they should be specially and directly represented on the new board. Representations will be made to the Government to that effect, coming from labour organizations all over the country.

The success of the new legislation for the first few years, will depend largely upon a sympathetic administration and interpretation of its provisions. The intent of the Act, as with an act of legislation, may be easily spoiled and frustrated by an unsympathetic board. Provisions inserted for an obvious purpose, may by a strictly legal interpretation, be diverted entirely from that purpose, and all sorts of complications be made to ensue. It is almost inevitable, but that there may be difficult points of interruption arise, and unless those entrusted with the administration of the new law, are thoroughly in sympathy with its original purpose, such difficulties will be aggravated, and misunderstandings are sure to arise.

It is from these considerations that those labour interests chiefly responsible for the very existence of the Act, are more than anxious that there shall be no miscarriage as to the original purpose and spirit of the Act. In order to secure that sympathetic and at the same time, just and fair administration of the Act which the country has a right to expect, labour contends that a layman from its own class, one thoroughly conversant with the provisions of the new law, and in whom labour would have the fullest confidence, should be given a place on the new board.

Price of Soft Coal Will Soar

Demand of European Countries Upon American Fields Will Boost Price

TORONTO, July 29.—The closure of the Welsh coal mines to the fleets of the Triple Alliance and the consequent coming to America for the supply will send the price of coal in Toronto soaring. But it will be for bituminous coal only, and the householder's anthracite will not increase in price, unless through sympathy.

"Certainly," was the reply of Mr. A. E. Stovel, secretary of the Elias Rogers Co., Ltd., when asked whether coal would rise in value in Toronto. "Coal will be shipped to the seaboard, and will send the local price high. Some of the large mines in Pennsylvania are now running with half their employees, and will welcome the chance to sell more coal. How much the price will advance is difficult to say, but I do not think it will be doubled."

Chance For Great Britain.

If coal may be classed as contraband of war, Great Britain, by seizing colliers on the Atlantic, would win a great naval victory without firing a shot. Italian warships have always been supplied from the Welsh mines, and cut off from all supply, would have to rest at their docks. The Austrian shipyard at Trieste is also, in some degree, dependent on foreign coal, while the Russians, in the Black Sea have an immense supply of oil and coal fuel at hand."

Mr. H. G. Ratcliffe, secretary of the Sterling Coal Company, a Toronto concern, owning mines in Ohio, was of the opinion that the price of coal would immediately advance in Ontario upon the sale of the commodity to European Governments.

From the mine owners' point of view it would be a splendid market and he did not think that Toronto manufacturing concerns would be at all hurt by an advance in price. It is still a question whether the coal would be sold at the seaboard or carried at enormous risks to foreign ports.

ROMAINE STREET GETS CONCRETE WALK ON ITS NORTH SIDE AS RESULT OF A RECENT PETITION

Seventeen Romaine Street property owners presented a petition to the Board of Works last night for a concrete walk on the north side from Park to the Boundary. A week ago it was decided to build the walk from Lynch Street to the boundary, Robert Nicholls and J. O'Brien objecting to it in front of their property from Park Street west to the G. T. R.

Mayor Buller said he had always been in favour of laying an entire walk from section to section. Ald. Saunders reported that Mr. Jas. Lynch, who has considerabe frontage involved, did not object.

Ald. Green—"Would it not be sufficient to run a crossing at Lynch Street, to the south side.

Ad. Saunders felt that if this were done the people would be satisfied with this and it might be years before the rest of the action would be laid.

A Difficulty.

A week ago Arthur Lasure, Sr., was promised that he would get a walk on the north side, from Lynch Street to the boundary. Mr. G. N Gordon reported that if only the Lasure section would be constructed it would have to be advertised anew. Ratepayers would be mislead by the first advertisement that the whole walk would be laid. The Board did not wish to go to the trouble of advertising the passed section hence they had to either decide for the whole walk or none.

Mr. Parsons stated that it could be built more cheapy now when the machinery and material were already there.

Ald. Saunders said he understood a Toronto man intended to build several houses on the part between Lynch and Park Streets.

Mayor Buller moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the walk be built on the north side from Park to the Boundary.

Ald. Stratton supported them. Those who opposed it were Aldermen Green, Johnston and Anderson. Ald. Duncan, Chairman, cast his vote with the motion and the whole walk will be laid.

OAKLAND POLICE WOMEN A SUCCESS

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 29.—Is the policewoman a success? Chief of Police Peterson, of Oakland, after investigating the work of the policewomen here, finds that this city can give a very decisive and enthusiastic answer to this in the affirmative. Here are some of the things a policewoman does. She goes into dance halls where she has seen a girl who should not be there and over whom the law has authority, and takes her home. They go through the city looking for the discouraged, the deluded, the incorrigible, and to each, according to her kind, is administered the proper treatment by these wise women of the police force who are the friends of the vicious and the abandoned. The chief of police is so pleased with the work that they have been doing that he has asked for an additional squad of policewomen.

The Death Of Mrs. Rowan

Well Known Resident of Hastings Passes Away

Special to The Examiner:

HASTINGS, July 29—To-day it becomes ou sad duty to report the death of Mrs. Rowan (nee Lily Collins) only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Collins of this place. The deceased was only about thirty years of age and was married to her now sorrowing husband about three years ago. She was taken ill some few weeks ago and in spite of everything that loving hands and hearts could do to restore her to health, she passed away on Saturday morning. The funeral was held from the residence of her father, on Monday morning, and was very largely attended. Much sympathy is expressed for the father and mother and the bereaved husband, who, with a little child of two summers, is left to mourn her early demise.

The prompt action of the Fire Brigade saved the Village from what, on account of the dry weather, might have been a serious blaze, when the grass near Mr. Huycke's, took fire, and spread with amazing rapidity. However, it was noticed before much damage was done and was soon extinguished.

The Ladies' Aid excursion to Peterborough by steamer "Geneva," on Wednesday of last week, was a great success. Promptly at 7.15 a.m. the steamer, carrying her scheduled number of passengers, left the wharf, much to the disappointment of a number who were forced to remain behind. The sail up the Trent River,

Rice Lake, and the beautiful Otonabee was most enjoyable, and the City was reached just as the bells pealed out the hour of 12 o'clock. Most of the passengers had lunched on board and were prepared to amuse themselves in various ways, shopping, sight-seeing or calling on friends until 4 o'clock arrived, and everybody was ready for the homeward trip, which was just as much enjoyed as ever. Hastings was reached about 8.30 and every one was glad to be home again. The committee in charge have every reason to be pleased with the day's outing.

Mr. W. Buck and party motored to Peterborough on Wednesday and joined the excursionists there.

A number from here attended the funeral of the late Mr. O'Shea at Norwood on Saturday last.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Runnels and family are spending a week or two at Mr. Wilcox's cottage, down the river.

An auto load of young people went to Trent Bridge on Wednesday night to spend the evening.

Word was received to-day of the death of Mr. Wm. Clancy of Percy. Mr. Clancy has been in poor health for some time and the end was not unexpected.

Mr. George Stevenson of Peterborough is holidaying with friends here.

Mr. John Thomson of Wheatley is the guest of his parents, Rev. D. A. and Mrs. Thomson, at the Manse.

MEAT UP IF WAR COMES.

Chicago Packer Says There Will Be a Large Demand From Europe.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Meat prices in the United States will take another jump in event of a general European war, Edward Cudahy, president of the Cudahy Packing Co., declared to-day.

"Up to the present time there has been no unusual export demand," said Cudahy. "The present supply of cattle is adequate to meet any probable demand, but in the event of a general European war, foreign markets would be demoralized, the export demand would be abnormal and American packers would have to pay abnormal prices for cattle. Necessarily meat prices would advance."

WHOLE MARKET WAS VERY WEAK

Except Grain and Wheat Reached $1.00 For December Delivery

To-day the Market showed new evidences of the war effects. Dollar December wheat was recorded, but fell back several points at the close. Lehigh slumped badly through a decline of 11 points. Reading opened at 152, bumped to 141 and recovered slightly. BRT declined 6 points, St. Paul 5, Rubber 7, Mexican oil 8. A C P dropped from 56 1-2 to 49 1-2. Canadian Pacific had a busy day, going from 168 1-2 to 156 1-8 for a new low level and closing at 166. Steel and other regulars showed the influences of the weak situation.

NEW YORK, July 30—Latest reports indicate more frequent rallying, sharp recoveries are not likely to hold at present. An important principal of speculation that should not be overlooked in this crisis is that profits always accrue from carefully directed purchases of sound stocks made during panic times, such as we have been having lately. It should not escape the attention of the market follower that the crop damage advices, rate decision, gold exports and anti trust legislation, pending, have all been discounted by the great setback. The view we take of the absorption of UP, SP, GQ ATCH, RG, US and STP is manifestly of the higher order. More of it will be witnessed on any declines from the rallies. We have reasons for considering the manner in which certain specialties have "come back" notably CL, WU, ICE, Texas and GQ.

Grain: Long wheat should be closed out on the advances.

GERMANY IS SAID TO BE MOVING SECRETLY

Few Hours May Tell Whether or Not Europe is to be Plunged into a Terrible Conflict

TO-DAY'S DEVELOPEMENT

LONDON, July 31. — Early this morning comes news that the German Cabinet presided over by the Emperor, sat at Potsdam until midnight and that a censorship over the telegraph lines is being imposed at Berlin.

This is interpreted here as implying preparations for German mobilization and a few hours will probably decide whether Europe is to be involved in universal war.

It is fully expected both at London and Berlin that the Russian Foreign Minister, Sergius Sasonoff, will reply to Germany's demand for an explanation to the effect that the Russian mobilization has already been ordered and cannot be cancelled.

In the event of Germany mobilizing, it is expected that Premier Asquith will immediately ask Parliament to sanction a large vote of credit as a necessary precaution.

A despatch from St. Petersburg to Reuter's Telegraph Company says that it is believed in St. Petersburg that Austria will declare war against Russia on Friday. The despatch adds that if this should be the case, it is understood that Emperor Nicholas will go to Moscow to deliver a pronouncement in the Uspensky Cathedral.

While the news of the actual developments in the Austro-Servian war is unsatisfactory the general situation is one of growing menace. There is a vague report that Austria and Russia are still engaged in diplomatic negotiations through the medium of Berlin, diplomatic intercourse between these two countries having been suspended, but slender hopes are entertained of success in this direction.

Germany has addressed a note to Russia requiring an explanation within twenty-four hours of Russia's mobilization, and, in the absence of a satisfactory reply it is feared Germany may take steps to mobilize also. It is understood that on the failure of his conference scheme Sir Edward Grey invited Germany to suggest some way out of the difficulty, and all eyes are now turned to the German Emperor as the man upon whom Europe's fate depends.

It is believed that if the German Emperor desires it, peace will be maintained. The German view is that it behooves Great Britain and France to bring pressure to bear upon Russia to let the two principals settle their differences without outside interference.

In the meantime, every nation in Europe is taking active steps to be prepared for any eventualities.

Sir Edward Grey, a central figure in the controversy, owing to his strong efforts to keep the powers of the triple alliance and triple entente from flying at each others throats, was not able to give any assuring news when he spoke about the crisis to the members of the House of Commons. The British Foreign Secretary said:

"I regret that I cannot say the situation is less grave than it was yesterday. The outstanding facts are much the same. Austria-Hungary has begun her war against Servia, and Russia has ordered a partial mobilization of her troops.

"This has not hitherto led to corresponding steps between the further powers, so far as our information goes. We shall continue to pursue our one great object of preserving the European peace, and for this purpose we are keeping in close touch with the other powers. In thus keeping in touch we have, I am glad to say, had no difficulties so far with the other powers, although it has not been possible for these powers to join in diplomatic action, as was proposed on Monday last."

Japan May Get Into Fight.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 31.—The official agency here yesterday published a despatch from Tokio quoting a newspaper there as expressing the view that in case of a general European war the participation of Japan as the ally of Great Britain is possible.

South Africa Gets Ready.

CAPETOWN, U. of S. A., July 31. —The manoeuvres of troops in South Africa were cancelled yesterday and the soldiers ordered to return to their posts in consequence of the critical situation in Europe. Special precautions have been taken for the protection of the ports, and the naval station at Simonstown.

Hope Lost In Italy.

ROME, July 31. — Official circles here appeared yesterday to have abandoned all hope of the efficacy of mediation in the European conflict. It was stated that the moment had now come for Germany to show whether she wanted and still wants war, and it was argued that she alone could influence Austria for peace.

PLANS MADE FOR A CANADIAN CONTINGENT

20,000 or 25,000 Men Will be Sent If Needed—Arrangements For Mobilization Already Completed.

A MILITIA COUNCIL

OTTAWA, July 31. — The Militia Council held a special meeting yesterday, making preliminary arrangements for sending a first contingent of 20,000 or 25,000 men to aid the Imperial forces in case Britain is drawn into the war. The British War Office has also been advised that it can rely on quick action by the Canadian militia forces. The militia headquarters' staff have plans for mobilization already prepared and every official has been instructed as to his duties in case Canada is asked to send a contingent. The permanent force at Halifax, Esquimalt and other points have been ordered to be ready for mobilization orders, and the Halifax garrison have been ordered back from the camp at Aldershot to their barracks and Fort Station at Halifax.

Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes says a Canadian first contingent of 20,000 or 30,000 could be ready to sail in two or three weeks. It is not improbable that he would go himself and command the contingent.

The active Canadian militia now numbers about 60,000. There are nearly half a million men on the reserve who have had training in past years, but the total available, if full strength were called out, would be about $250,000, and such a force would take a long time to equip.

It is stated that 20,000 men could be mobilized and equipped without delay. At Petawawa this summer 13,000 men were mobilized in a week. Col. Hughes left for Bracebridge last night and will be back here on Monday. Brigadier-General MacDonald, head of the militia supplies branch, is also going on with his plans for a western tour of inspection, leaving to-morrow. The Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, may be back from Muskoka early next week, though he has been advised that this is not necessary.

Mobilization at Halifax.

HALIFAX, N. S., July 31.—There are indications of the mobilization of the whole garrison of Halifax, on the strength, it is reported, of a despatch from the War Office. The artillery were mobilized yesterday morning, and it is understood that they will immediately man the different forts in the harbor.

Whatever preparations are being made are being carried out quietly. No information could be gained as to what was being done at headquarters. The officials stated that they had instructions to give nothing out for publication. The citadel, however, was the scene of much activity.

By one o'clock the R. C. garrison artillery of both companies stationed in the citadel were mobilized and proceeded to the forts on the transport steamers. A special train will bring back the R. C. R. stationed in Aldershot, and it is expected that when these arrive the infantry will be held in readiness.

Torontonian's Swimming Feat.

CORNWALL, July 31. — Norman Strickland of Toronto, son of James Strickland of Cornwall, who is spending his holidays at his home here, holds the record for long distance swimming in this section of the St. Lawrence. Wednesday he swam from St. Lawrence Park to Stanley Island, making the distance, nearly nine miles, in three hours and a half. He was accompanied by Harold Russell in a canoe.

EAGER FOR WAR.

St. Petersburg In Delirium at News of British Fleet Sailing.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 31.—The war fever raised on St. Petersburg immediately after the announcement of mobilization, and increased almost to a delirium on receipt of news of the sailing of the British squadron from Portland. Business was half suspended, and the activities of the citizens confined to cheering and to reading newspapers or talking of the prospects of war. To all appearance war would be popular in St. Petersburg.

It is stated that the order for partial mobilization is intended merely as a reply to the Austrian declaration of war. As a matter of fact, mobilization is absolute, and general reservists in the northern districts are also being summoned to arms. No bills are being discounted. In view of the closing of the Bourse, cash payments on Government securities are suspended.

Leprosy Not Hereditary.

BINGHAMTON, N.Y., July 31.—W. T. Danner, American secretary of the Inter-denominational Mission to Lepers, in addressing the National Bible Conference in session here, declared that leprosy is not hereditary or easily communicable.

May Involve Lines.

MONTREAL, July 31.—The Canada line of steamers, which is controlled by the White Star Line, a German company, is affected more than any other local shipping company by the present European situation.

Tan, Red or Freckled Skin is Easily Shed

To free your summer-soiled skin of its oiliness, muddiness, freckles, blotches or tan, the best thing to do is to free yourself of the skin itself. This is easily accomplished by the use of ordinary mercolized wax, which may be had at any drug store. Use at night as you use cold cream, washing it off in the morning. Immediately the offending surface skin begins to come off in fine powder-like particles. Gradually the entire cuticle is absorbed, without pain or inconvenience. The second layer of skin now in evidence presents a spotless whiteness and sparkling beauty obtainable in no other way. If the treat tends to loosen and wrinkle your skin, there's an effective and harmless remedy you can readily make at home. Just let an ounce of powdered saxolite dissolve in a half-pint witch hazel and bathe your face in the lotion. This at once tightens the skin and smooths out the lines, making you look years younger.

Austrians Occupy Belgrade Without Much Opposition—Are Out of the Fighting

SECOND INVASION

LONDON, July 31.—A Semlin despatch to The Standard says:—"The Austrians crossed the Danube 30 miles to the east of Belgrade and the Save ten miles to the south. Belgrade has been captured and is now occupied by Austrian troops, and the force which invaded Servia at Semendria is advancing along the road which leads to Gulpenica and ultimately to Nish.

"The occupation of Belgrade was carried out without serious difficulty. The invading troops crossed the river partly by means of the remnants of the railway bridge, which was blown up by the Servians, and partly by a pontoon bridge constructed under its cover, and approached the Servian capital from the south. The attacking forces advanced by a steep hill, driving the Servians before them. The Servians retreated partly along the road leading to Groca and partly towards Poperics. The losses on both sides appeared to have been comparatively light.

"The invasion of Servia at Semendria was a much more difficult task. The Austrians built a pontoon bridge under the cover of darkness from an island in the middle of the Danube, where the channel narrows to 200 yards and the current is swift. The construction of the bridge was a hazardous operation. The work was perceived from the Servian shore and the Servians opened fire. The attacking forces were aided by artillery and infantry along the south shore of the island and succeeded in completing the bridge, over which they passed."

The Servian Legation here received a message last night from Nish saying the bombardment of Belgrade was resumed by the Austrians at six o'clock yesterday morning. Shells were directed at the principal streets of the city.

The telegram added that several Austrian spies had been captured by the Servians.

Despatches from Servia declare that reports of the occupation of Belgrade are premature.

PAPERS CALLED OFF.

They Are Asked to Suppress News of British War Movements.

LONDON, July 31. — The British War Office last night sent a request to all newspapers to refrain from publishing news of British military and naval movements.

The War Office last night explained the calling out of several sections of the special defence force of Great Britain as follows:

"It was in accordance with the ordinary routine when precautionary measures are put into force. Only the special reserve sections of the territorial force are being employed and no other territorials are involved in these measures."

None but the Admiralty, which is in constant touch through wireless knows the whereabouts of the first fleet, which left Portland Wednesday, but it is a safe presumption that the fleet is in a position close to the channel where it can strike the North Sea in the event of hostilities.

The crises could not have arisen at a more convenient time for the navy as the fleet has just been through a review on a war footing, which took the place of manoeuvres this year.

Small Vessels Deserted.

HANKOW, China, July 31. — The British gunboats Snipe, Woodcock and Kinsha of the British-China squadron were deserted by an Admiralty order yesterday. The crews removed the breach blocks from the guns, took away all the arms and ammunition possible and threw the remainder into the Yang Tse Kiang.

It is stated that the bluejackets are to be utilized to strengthen the crews of the British warships on the China station, where the British fleet is decidedly superior to the German.

Precautions at Malta.

VALETTA, Malta, July 31.—Incessant preparations proceeded among the large British garrison and also among the vessels of the British fleet here throughout the night. All leave for officers and men has been stopped. The authorities issued orders for a precautionary stage of mobilization, and as a consequence great activity was apparent in the dockyards.

British Cruisers Start For Home.

VERA CRUZ, July 31.—The British flagship Suffolk, with Admiral Sir Christopher Craddock aboard, left Vera Cruz yesterday for home waters. The cruiser Bristol sailed from here last night for England, leaving no British ships in Mexican waters.

Engineers Elect Officers.

OTTAWA, July 31. — Alford W. Heath of Hamilton was elected president of the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers for the next term at yesterday's session of the convention of that body here. The other officers elected were: Past president, S. Cosford, Hamilton; vice-president, Robert Dyson, Guelph; secretary, John Hale, Hamilton; treasurer, W. H. Archer, Toronto; doorkeeper, Ernest Heavy, Owen Sound; conductor, W. G. Forbes, Montreal.

Shocked as Letter-Box.

TORONTO, July 31.—While Geo. Hepden, of 222 Spadina avenue, was working at one of the new letter boxes and postage stamp stands on Yonge street, opposite Child's restaurant yesterday morning he got a shock of 500 volts, and was burned about the left hand and leg.

Hepden is employed by the Hydro-Electric, and was taking off some tape on the wires in the bottom of the box to cut off the power so he could take the top off. How he came to get such a shock he does not know, but he was taken to St. Michael's Hospital, where he was detained for a day.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Cos. Allen England

"Are you going to leave that fire burning?" asked the girl, as they passed the middle of the arcade.

"Yes. It can't do any harm. Nothing to catch here; only old metal and cement. Besides it would take too much time and labour to put it out."

Thus they abandoned the gruesome place and began the long, exhausting climb.

It must have taken them an hour and a half at least to reach their aerie. Both found their strength taxed to the utmost.

Before they were much more than half way up, the ultimate drop of alcohol had been burned.

The last few hundred feet had to be made by slow, laborious feeling, aided only by such dim reflections of the gibbous moon as glimmered through a window, cowbew-hung, or through some break in the walls.

At length, however—for all things have an end—breathless and spent, they found their refuge. And soon after that, clad in their savage robes, they supped.

Allan Stern, consulting engineer, and Beatrice Kenrick, stenographer, now king and queen of the whole wide world domain (as they feared) sat together by a little blaze of punky wood fragments that flickered on the eroded floor.

They ate with their fingers and drank out of the bottles, sans apology. Strange were their speculations, their wonderings, their plans—now discussed specifically, now half-voiced by a mere word that thrilled them both with sudden, poignant emotion.

And so an hour passed, and the night deepened toward the birth of another day. The fire burned low and died, for they had little to replenish it with.

Down sank the moon, her pale light dimming as she went, her faint illumination wanly creeping across the disordered, wrack-strewn floor.

And at length Stern, in the outer office, Beatrice in the other, they wrapped themselves with their furs, and laid them down to sleep.

Despite the age-long trance from which they both but so recently emerged, a strange lassitude weighed on them.

Yet long after Beatrice had lost herself in dreams Stern lay and thought strange thoughts, yearning and eager thoughts, there in the impenetrable gloom.

CHAPTER VII

THE OUTER WORLD

Before daybreak the engineer was up again, and active. Now that he faced the light of morning, with a thousand difficult problems closing in on every hand, he put aside his softer moods, his visions and his desires, and—like the scientific man he was—addressed himself to the urgent matters in hand.

"The girl's safe enough alone here for a while," thought he, looking in upon her where she lay, calm as a child, folded within the clinging masses of the tiger-skin.

"I must be out and away for two or three hours, at the very least. I hope she'll sleep till I get back. If not—what then?"

He pondered a moment; then coming over to the charred remains of last nights fire, chose a bit of burnt wood. With this he scrawled in large, rough letters on a fairly smooth stretch of the wall:

"Back soon. All O.K. Do not worry."

Then turning he set out on the long and painful descent again to the earth level.

Garish now, and doubly terrible, since seen with more than double clearness by the graying dawn, the world-ruin seemed to him.

Strong of body and nerve as he was, he could not help but shudder at the numberless traces of sudden and pitiless death which met his gaze.

Everythere lay those dust-heaps, with here or there a tooth, a ring, a bit of jewelery showing—everythwhere he saw them, all the way down the stairs, in every room and office he peered into, and in the time-ravished confusion of the arcade.

But this was scarcely the time for reflections of any soft. Life called, and labour, and duty; not mourning for the dead world, nor even wonder or pity at the tragedy which had so mysteriously befallen.

And as the man made his way over and through the universal wreckage he took counsel with himself.

"First of all, water!" thought he. "We can't depend on the bottled supply. Of course there is the Hudson; but it's brackish, if not downright salt. I've got to find some fresh and pure supply close at hand. That's the prime necessity of life.

"What with the canned stuff, and such game as I can kill, there is bound to be enough food for a while. But a good water supply—we must have and at once!"

Yes, prudent rather for the sake of Beatrice than for his own, he decided that he ought nor to issue out, unarmed, into this new and savage world, of which he had as yet no very definite idea. And for a while he searched, hoping to find some weapon or other.

"I've got eo have an axe, first of "I've got to have an axe, first of need, in any wilderness. Where shall I find one?"

He thought a moment.

"Ah! In the basements," exclaimed he. "Maybe I can locate an engine-room, a store-room, or something of that sort. There's sure to be tools in a place like that." And, laying off the bearskin, he prepared, to explore the regions under the ground-level.

He used more than half an hour, through devious ways and hard labor, to make his way to the desired spot. The ancient stairway, leading down, he could not find.

But by clambering down one of the elevator shafts, digging toes and fingers into the crevices in the metal framework and the cracks in the concrete, he managed at last to reach a vaulted sub-cellar festooned with webs—damp, noisome and obscure.

Considerable light glimmered in from a broken sidewalk grating above and through a gaping, jagged hole near one end of the cellar, beneath which lay a badly broken stone.

The engineer figured that this block had fallen from the tower and come to rest only here; and this awoke him to a new sense of ever-present peril. At any moment of the night or day, he realized, some such mishap was imminent.

"Eternal vigilance!" he whispered to himself. Then, dismissing useless fears, he set about the task in hand.

By the dim illumination from above he was able to take cognisance of the musty-smelling place, which, on the whole, was in a better state of repair than the arcade. The first cellar yielded nothing of value to him, but making his way through a low vaulted door, he chanced in to what must have been one of the smaller, auxiliary engine-rooms.

This, he found, contained a battery of four dynamos, a small seepage-pump, and a crumbling marble switch board with part of the wiring still comparatively intact.

At sight of all this valuable machinery scaled and pitted with rust, Stern's brows contracted with a feeling akin to pain. The engineer loved mechanism of all sorts; its care and use had been his life.

And now these mournful relics, strange as that may seem, affected him more strangely than the little heaps of dust which marked the spots where human beings had fallen in sudden, inescapable death.

Yet even so, he had no time for musing.

"Tools!" cried he, peering down the dim-lit vault. "Tools—I must have some. Till I find tools, I'm helpless!"

Search as he might, he discovered no axe in the place, but in place of it he unearthed a sledge hammer. Though corroded, it was still quite serviceable. Oddly enough, the oak handle was almost intact.

"Kyanised wood, probably," he reflected, as he laid the sledge to one side and began delving into a bed of dust that had evidently been a work-bench. "Ah! And here's a chisel. A spanner, too! A heap of rusty old wire nails!"

Delightedly he examined these treasures.

"They're worth more to me," he exulted, "than all the gold between here and what's left of San Francisco!"

He found nothing more of value in the litter. Everything else was rusted beyond use. So, having convinced himself that nothing more remained, he gathered up his finds and started back whence he had come.

After some quarter hour of hard labour, he managed to transport everything up into the arcade.

"Now for a glimpse of the outer world," quoth he.

Gripping the sledge well in hand, he made his way through the confused mass of ruin. Disguised as everything now was, fallen and disjointed, mouldering, blighted by age incalculable, still the man recognized many familiar features.

Here, he recalled, the telephone-booths had been; there, the information desk. Yonder, again, he remembered the little curved counter where once upon a time a man in uniform had sold tickets to such as had wanted to visit the tower.

Counter now was dust; ticket-man only a crumble of fine, greyish powder. Stern shivered slightly, and pressed on.

As he approached the outer air, he noticed that many a grassy tuft and creeping vine had rooted in the pavement of the arcade, up-prying the marble slabs and cracking the once magnificent floor.

The doorway itself was almost choked by a tremendous Norway pine which had stuck root close to the building, and now insolently blocked that way where, other-time, many thousand men and women every day had come and gone.

But Stern clambered out past this obstacle, testing the floor with his sledge, as he went, lest he fall through some unseen weak spot into depths of coal cellars below. And presently he reached the outer air, unharmed.

"But—but, the sidewalk?" cried he, amazed. "The street—the Square? Where are they?" And in astonishment he stopped, staring.

The view from the tower, though it had told him something of the changes wrought, had given him no adequate conception of their magnitude.

He had expected some remains of human life to show upon the earth, some semblance of the metropolis to remain in the street. But no, nothing was there; nothing at all on the ground to show that he was in the heart of a city.

He could, indeed, catch glimpses of a building here or there. Through the tangled thickets that grew close up to the age-worn walls of the Metropolitan, he could make out a few bits of tottering construction on the south side of what had been Twenty third Street.

But of the street itself, no trace remained—no pavement, no sidewalk, no curb. And even so near and so conspicuous an object as the wreck of the Flatiron was now entirely concealed by the dense forest.

Soil had formed thickly over all the surface. Huge oaks and pines flourished there as confidently as though in the heart of the Maine forest, crowding ash and beech for room.

Under the man's feet, even as he stood close by the building—which was thickly overgrown with ivy and with ferns and bushes rooted in the deep, pungent beds.

(To be continued.)

Camera Man Was Out.

There was much wonderment among the Duke's staff at "Craigleigh," in Toronto recently, as to how the photographer of a morning newspaper managed to get a photograph of the guests at the gala garden party shaking hands with the Duke and the Duchess in front of the house itself. Every precaution was taken to exclude photographers from the grounds, but apparently there was no provision made to prevent the camera artists from taking their long distance lenses to the top of the trees in the ravine. Capt. Bulkeley spotted someone moving about in the bush in front of the main door and a messenger was despatched to Inspector Parkinson of the Dominion Police with this information. The inspector and his two detectives scoured the bush for quite a time but could find no trace of any photographers. The picture was got nevertheless.

A Queer Anomaly.

The peculiar anomaly in the Quebec law which permits a man to marry the sister of his deceased wife, but does not allow a woman to marry the brother of her dead husband was exemplified in a decision given the other day in Montreal by Justice Demers of the Superior Court. Mrs. Joseph Giroux, nee Virginia Bradley, sued her husband for separation. During the hearing of the case it developed that the defendant is her second husband and a brother of her first. The judge ruled that she could not obtain separation; that she was not the legal wife of the defendant, and that her marriage should be considered null and void, being contrary to the civil code in Quebec.

THE NOTORIOUS JUMPING FROG OF CALAVERAS COUNTY

By Mark Twain

MARK TWAIN

OWEN JOHNSON

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. The choice of Owen Johnson was "The Notorious Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," by Mark Twain, whose complete works are published by Messrs. Harper & Brothers.

IN compliance with the request of a friend of mine who wrote from the east, I called on good natured, garrulous old Simon Wheeler and inquired after my friend's friend, Leonidas W. Smiley, as requested to do, and I herewith append the result. I have a lurking suspicion that Leonidas W. Smiley is a myth; that my friend never knew such a personage, and that he only conjectured that if I asked old Wheeler about him it would remind him of his infamous Jim Smiley, and he would go to work and bore me to death with some exasperating reminiscence of him as long and as tedious as it should be useless to me. If that was the design it succeeded.

I found Simon Wheeler dozing comfortably by the barroom stove of the dilapidated tavern in the decayed mining camp of Angel's, and I noticed that he was fat and baldheaded and had an expression of winning gentleness and simplicity upon his tranquil countenance. He roused up and gave me good day. I told him a friend of mine had commissioned me to make some inquiries about a cherished companion of his boyhood, named Leonidas W. Smiley, Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, a young minister of the gospel, who he had heard was at one time a resident of Angel's Camp. I added that if Mr. Wheeler could tell me anything about this Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, I would feel under many obligations to him.

Simon Wheeler backed me into a corner and blockaded me there with his chair and then sat down and reeled off the monotonous narrative which follows this paragraph. He never smiled, he never frowned, he never changed his voice from the gentle flowing key to which he tuned his initial sentence, he never betrayed the slightest suspicion of enthusiasm, but all through the interminable narrative there ran a vein of impressive earnestness and sincerity which showed me plainly that, so far from his imagining that there was anything ridiculous or funny about his story, he regarded it as a really important matter and admired its two heroes as men of transcendent genius in finesse. I let him go on in his own way and never interrupted him once.

"Rev. Leonidas W.—h'm—Rev. Le—Well, there was a feller here once by the name of Jim Smiley in the winter of '49, or maybe it was the spring of '50. I don't recollect exactly, somehow, though what makes me think it was one or the other is because I remember the big flume wasn't finished when he first come to the camp. But anyway he was the curiousest man about, always betting on anything that turned up you ever see if he could get anybody to bet on the other side, and if he couldn't he'd change sides. Any way that suited the other side would suit him. Just so's he got a bet he was satisfied.

"But still he was lucky, uncommon lucky. He most always come out winner. He was always ready and laying for a chance. There couldn't be no solit'ry thing mentioned but that feller'd offer to bet on it and take any side you please, as I was just telling you. If there was a horse race you'd find him flush or you'd find him busted at the end of it; if there was a dog fight he'd bet on it; if there was a cat fight he'd bet on it; if there was a chicken fight he'd bet on it. Why, if there was two birds setting on a fence he would bet you which one would fly first, or if there was a camp meeting he would be there reg'lar to bet on Parson Walker, which he judged to be the best exhorter about here, and so he was, too, and a good man.

"If he ever see a straddle bug start to go anywheres he would bet you how long it would take him to get to—to wherever he was going to, and if you'd lose him up on the fence and he would stay there plumb to jedgment unless you found him. Why, he'd bet on anything—the dangdest thing. Parson Walker's wife laid very sick once for a good while, and it seemed as if they warn't going to save her. But one morning he came in and Smiley up and asked him how she was, and he said she was considerable better, thank the Lord for his infinite mercy, and coming on so smart that, with the blessing of Prov'dence, she'd get well yet. And Smiley before he thought says, 'Well, I'll resk $2.50 she don't anyway.'

"Thish yer Smiley had a mare—the boys called her the fifteen minute nag, but that was only in fun, you know, because, of course, she was faster than that—and he used to win money on that horse, for all she was so slow and always had the asthma or the distemper or the consumption or something of that kind. They used to give her two or three hundred yards' start and then pass her under way, but always at the fag end of the race she'd get excited and desperate-like and come cavorting and straddling up and scattering her legs around limber, sometimes in the air and sometimes out to one side amongst the fences and kicking up m-o-r-e dust and raising m-o-r-e racket with her coughing and sneezing and blowing her nose, and always fetch up at the stand just about a neck ahead, as near as you could cipher it down.

"And he had a little small bull pup that to look at him you'd think he warn't worth a cent but to set around, look ornery and lay for a chance to steal something. But as soon as money was up on him he was a different dog. His underjaw'd begin to work, and his teeth would uncover and shine like the furnaces. And a dog might tackle him and bullyrag him and bite him and throw him over his shoulder two or three times, and Andrew Jackson—which was the name of the pup—Andrew Jackson would never let on but what he was satisfied and hadn't expected nothing else and the bets being doubled and doubled on the other side all the time till the money was all up, and then all of a sudden he would grab the other dog just by the j'int of his hind leg and freeze to it, not chaw, you understand, but only just grip and hang on till they throwed up the sponge, if it was a year.

"Smiley always come out winner on that pup till he harnessed a dog once that didn't have no hind legs, because they'd been sawed off in a circular saw, and when the thing had gone far enough, and the money was all up, and he come to make a snatch for his pet bolt, he seen in a minute how he'd been imposed on and how the other dog had him in the door, so to speak, and he 'peared surprised, and then he looked sorter discouraged-like and didn't try no more to win the fight, and so he got shucked out bad. He give Smiley a look as much as to say his heart was broke, and it was his fault, for putting up a dog that hadn't no hind legs for him to take holt of, which was his main dependence in a fight, and then he limped off a piece and laid down and died. It was a good pup, was that Andrew Jackson, and would have made a name for himself if he'd lived, for the stuff was in him and he had genius. I know it, because he had no opportunities to speak of, and it don't stand to reason that a dog could make such a fight as he could under them circumstances if he hadn't no talent. It always makes me feel sorry when I think of that last fight of his'n and the way it turned out.

"Well, this yer Smiley had rat terriers and chicken cocks and tomcats and all them kind of things till you couldn't rest, and you couldn't fetch nothing for him to bet on but he'd match you. He ketched a frog one day and took him home and said he calc'lated to educate him, and so he never done nothing for three months but set in his back yard and learn that frog to jump. And you bet he did learn him too. He'd give him a little punch behind, and the next minute you'd see that frog whirling in the air like a doughnut—see him turn one summerset or maybe a couple, if he got a good start, and come down flatfooted and all right, like a cat. He got him up so in the matter of ketching flies and kep' him in practice so constant that he'd nail a fly every time as far as he could see him.

"Smiley said all a frog wanted was education and he could do most anything, and I believe him. Why, he used to set Dan'l Webster down here on this floor—Dan'l Webster was the name of the frog—and sing out, 'Flies, Dan'l, flies!' And quicker'n you could wink he'd spring straight up and snake a fly off'n the counter there and flop down on the floor ag'in as solid as a gob of mud and fall to scratching the side of his head with his hind foot, as indifferent as if he hadn't no idea he'd been doing any more'n any frog might do. You never see a frog so modest and straightfor'ard as he was, for all he was so gifted. And when it come to fair and square jumping on a dead level he could get over more ground at one straddle than any animal of his breed you ever see. Jumping on a dead level was his strong suit, you understand, and when it come to that Smiley would ante up money on him as long as he had a red. Smiley was monstrous proud of his frog, and well he might be, for fellers that had traveled and been everywhere all said he laid over any frog that ever they see.

"Well, Smiley kep' the beast in a little lattice box, and he used to fetch him downtown sometimes and lay for a bet. One day a feller—a stranger in the camp he was—come across him with his box and says:

"'What might it be that you've got in the box?'

"And Smiley said, sorter indifferentlike, 'It might be a parrot, or it might be a canary maybe, but it ain't—it's only just a frog.'

"And the feller took it and looked at it careful and turned it around this way and that and says: 'H'm! So 'tis. Well, what's he good for?'

"'Well,' Smiley says, easy and careless, 'he's good enough for one thing, I should judge. He can outjump any frog in Calaveras county.'

"The feller took the box again and took another long, particular look and give it back to Smiley and says very deliberate, 'Well, I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.'

"'Maybe you don't,' Smiley says. 'Maybe you understand frogs, and maybe you don't understand 'em. Maybe you've had experience, and maybe you ain't only a amateur, as it were. Anyways I've got my opinion, and I'll resk $40 that he can outjump any frog in Calaveras county.'

"And the feller studied a minute and then says kinder sad-like, 'Well, I'm only a stranger here, and I ain't got no frog, but if I had a frog, I'd bet you.'

"And then Smiley says: 'That's all right; that's all right. If you'll hold my box a minute I'll go and get you a frog.' And so the feller took the box and put up his $40 along with Smiley's and set down to wait.

"So he set there a good while thinking and thinking to himself, and then he got the frog out and pried his mouth open and took a teaspoon and filled him full of quail shot, filled him pretty near up to his chin and set him on the floor. Smiley he went to the swamp and slopped around in the mud for a long time, and finally he ketched a frog and fetched him in and give him to this feller and says:

"'Now, if you're ready set him alongside of Dan'l, with his forepaws just even with Dan'l's, and I'll give the word.' Then he says, 'One—two—three—git!' And him and the feller touched up the frogs from behind and the new frog hopped off lively, but Dan'l give a heave and hysted up his shoulders so, like a Frenchman, but it warn't no use, he couldn't budge. He was planted as solid as a church, and he couldn't no more stir than if he was anchored out. Smiley was a good deal surprised, and he was disgusted, too, but he didn't have no idea what the matter was, of course.

"The feller took the money and started away, and when he was going out at the door he sorter jerked his thumb over his shoulder, so at Dan'l, and says again, very deliberate, 'Well,' he says, 'I don't see no p'ints about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.'

"Smiley he stood scratching his head and looking down at Dan'l a long time, and at last he says, 'I do wonder what in the nation that frog throw's off for! I wonder if there ain't something the matter with him! He 'pears to look mighty baggy somehow.' And he ketched Dan'l by the nap of the neck and hefted him and says, 'Why, blame my cats, if he don't weigh five pound!' and turned him upside down, and he belched out a double handful of shot. And then he see how it was, and he was the maddest man. He set the frog down and took out after the feller, but he never ketched him, and"—

(Here Simon Wheeler heard his name called from the front yard and got up to see what was wanted.) Turning to me as he moved away, he said, "Just set where you are, stranger, and rest easy. I ain't goin' to be gone a second."

But, by your leave, I did not think that a continuation of the history of the enterprising vagabond, Jim Smiley, would be likely to afford me much information concerning the Rev. Leonidas W. Smiley, and so I started away.

At the door I met the sociable Wheeler returning, and he buttonholed me and recommenced:

"Well, this yer Smiley had a yaller one eyed cow that didn't have no tail, only just a short stump like a bannanner, and"—

However, lacking both time and inclination, I did not wait to hear about the afflicted cow, but took my leave.

Health of the Mind.

To be made whole is to be healed in both body and mind. Bodily healing alone does not suffice, for unless there is a change of mind also disease will again manifest itself in some form in the body, and the second condition of the patient may become worse than the first. On the other hand, a change of mind is quickly manifested in the body, and if we have been "transformed by the renewing of our mind" the change is quickly evidenced by the restoration of the body to health and harmony.—Unity.

La Princesse Blue.

The present Minister of Inland Revenue, the Hon. Bruno Nantel, is an inveterate cigar smoker, but cannot quite equal his late deputy, Mr. W. J. Gerald. A few years ago Mr. Gerald, to encourage the consumption of French-Canadian tobacco, induced a Montreal cigar manufacturer to put up a cigar with a filler of French-Canadian tobacco and a wrapper of imported leaf. It was known as the "Blue Princess," the cover of the box conforming to the name. As a smoke it was execrable. In the days when Sir Henry Joly was Minister of Inland Revenue, it fell to Major Beattie, M.P. for London, to call upon the courtly old Minister upon some matter of Departmental business. Sir Henry waved the major to a seat, expressed his pleasure at seeing him in his office, and invited him to join him in a smoke. The box of "Blue Princesses" was submitted to the major, and he and Sir Henry lit up.

After they had go through their business Sir Henry asked the major how he liked the cigar. Equally as courteous as the Minister, Major Tom expressed his delight with it.

"I will send you a box," said Sir Henry.

"I am afraid I am giving you too much trouble," replied the major.

In the course of the afternoon a hundred "Blue Princesses" reached the major's desk in the House of Commons. An hour or so later the member for London seized the opportunity to drop into the vacant seat alongside Sir Henry to enquire of the Minister how much he owed him for the cigars.

"Tut, tut, mon cher ami; they are a present to you avec mes compliments," replied the seignior of Lotbiniere. "They only cost $15 per thousand."—Canadian Courier.

CHILDREN MUST PLAY.

That Is the Method Nature Provided For Their Development.

"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." Thus spoke Zechariah in 520 B. C. But there were fewer motorcars in Zechariah's day than there are in ours. The children now need for their play some place safer than the street.

More important than the playground, however, is the play. It is well that children should play in a safe place, but it is absolutely necessary that they should play somewhere if they are to grow up at all, for there is no doubt now, I think, in the minds of educators that play builds the child. It is the method that nature has provided for his development. Play, indeed, is the positive side of the whole phenomenon of infancy.

The reason the higher animals—and man, above all—are born so helpless and unformed is that they may be finished by this special method. It is for the sake of play that infancy exists; that there is such a thing as a child at all. The child who is deprived of his chance to play is deprived of his opportunity to grow up.—Craig Ellis.

WANTED QUARTER CHANGED.

So Little Land Went All Unaware to the Duke of Connaught.

There is a little tow-headed Canadian boy living in Toronto, in the north section somewhere, who feels very proud, albeit a little scared perhaps, for all unawares he asked and received a favor from the Duke of Connaught.

His royal highness, accompanied by Captain Rivers-Bulkeley, was out one Thursday afternoon about two weeks ago taking one of his accustomed and well-known strolls through the up-town streets of Toronto. The Duke and his companion walked westerly on Bloor street and crossed Yonge street, finding it necessary to dodge various rigs, automobiles and street cars, because that evening there was a big tie-up in traffic. Only a few recognized in the well set, erect, and military-looking gentleman Canada's Governor-General.

The couple stepped along crowded Bloor street, passing and being passed by many, while aristocratic Toronto lolled along in its undersiung seven-passenger glancing not at all at the crowds of hurrying pedestrians. Had they looked——

The small boy stood on the curb fingering a Canadian "quarter," and wondering what he would do, for the peanut man could not change it. Then he turned and espied two gentlemen walking along, and rushing up to the nearer of the two, demanded: "Hey, Mister, change this quarter, will you? The guinea hasn't any change." And the Duke (for it was he) said "Certainly" in his politest way, and smiling, delved into his trouser's pocket and produced a handful of silver. He had but twenty cents in small silver, so the captain contributed the necessary nickel, and the Duke received the twenty-five-cent piece from the boy. The boy mechanically replied "Thanks," as Canuck boys will, and bought his bag of hot peanuts, and the Duke and his aide, enjoying the incident hugely, apparently, passed on their way, evidently pleased at the fact that the boy did not know who changed his quarter.

The Aristocrat, however, was near, and had seen the incident, and as soon as the Duke was safely out of hearing, rushed to the youth and cruelly told the boy that he had accosted "His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught," and added that the absence of his manners (the boy's of course) was deplorable. All that mattered to the boy, however, was that he had talked to the Duke, the lady's charge being, to him, quite immaterial.

Closing An Interview.

The humor of the late S. H. Blake showed itself in his method of closing an interview. He always knew just what he was going to say, and though he was the soul of courtesy, when he had finished what he had to say he was ready to turn back to his work again.

"Well," he would say, looking up at his interviewer with his well-known twinkle, "your time is valuable if mine isn't," and the interviewer would be closed.

Baby Eczema Becomes Chronic

Causing Great Suffering and Anxiety —Prompt Relief and Cure by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

This is one reason why every mother should know about Dr. Chase's Ointment, since it is an unfailing cure for all itching skin diseases.

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes:—"My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad, and nothing seemed to do her much good. Hearing of the remarkable cures Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now, and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's Ointment. We cannot recommend this preparation too highly."

Here is another letter, which tells of the cure of a five-weeks-old baby: Mrs. Wallace Mingon, River John Road, Colchester County, N.S., writes: "My little girl took eczema when she was five weeks old. Though we doctored her until she was nearly a year old, she got no better. I was advised to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this treatment completely cured her."

Society Women Sponsors for Model Nursery

EVERYWHERE throughout the length and breadth of the land the cry of little children is being heeded. It has not only touched the heart and kindled the sympathies of the nation, but the best brains of the country have been enlisted in an effort to meet the various demands made by the helpless little ones on the care and protection of men and women. Women especially have responded generously, those who are well to do giving of their time and money to nurseries, hospitals and creches where children may have the care that cannot be given to them in their homes.

The latest provision for helpless children has taken the form of nurseries for the care of children whose mothers are in the hospitals. Many an illness has been made worse and many a cure retarded by the anxiety of the mother who carried with her to the hospital the thought that she had of necessity left her child in incompetent or indifferent hands.

Reports from the Gramercy Nursery in New York city, which is the first seeking to meet this emergency, are therefore, being eagerly looked for. Its example is likely to be followed in every large city where similar conditions exist. It is as true a philanthropy for the mother as for the child, and thus it will prove a double blessing for the community.

Among those who have been actively interested in the establishment of the Gramercy Nursery were Mrs. James B. Duke and Mrs. Linda Lee Thomas, both of whom are prominent socially and have lent their influence to many good works. They were responsible for the money that was needed to start the nursery, but after it was under way the important question of continued support demanded consideration.

Mr. Duke was among the first to meet this situation by pledging a liberal donation to the nursery. It is said that he agreed to donate $5,000 a year for five years. Then another man, easily known for his unostentatious charities, pledged a similar sum. At the following meeting of the Board of Managers of the nursery Mrs. Duke, it is said, announced that Mr. Duke had volunteered to increase his donation to $10,000, and this sum was to be an annual fixture for five years. This liberal donation was all that was necessary to convince the Board of Managers that their newest charities could steer a safe course through the shoal of finance for five years at least, and all were positive that long before the expiration of this period the usefulness of the nursery would have been so amply demonstrated that all the funds necessary for its future conduct would be readily forthcoming.

The nursery is housed in an old fashioned dwelling in the south side of Nineteenth street and stands conspicuously forth in its fresh coating of paint. The bricks have been freshened to a vivid red, and this augmented by the pencilings of spotless white. The stoop and balconies that jut from the doorway and windows are of light green, making the structure easily discernible for a block or more distant.

The interior is as spotless and attractive as might be expected when its design and decorations were in the hands of women of such exquisite taste as Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Duke. The walls are of robin egg blue enamel. The woodwork is of white and enamelled to a mirror like polish.

On the first floor is a big parlor where mothers and their babies are received, as well as other visitors to the nursery. A big comfortable rear room on this floor has been fitted up as an office for Miss Rogers, the superintendent of the nursery, and here, too, the meetings of the Board of Managers are held. The room takes on more the appearance of a big and comfortable living room than that of office or parlor.

The second floor is Baby's own. Here he reigns supreme, and never was there daintier or more attractive realm for the little one, no matter what the station of life he was born into. A double row of snowy cribs face each other, and their coverings are as dainty and immaculate as the fondest mother could wish. Everything that pertains to hygiene and sanitation has been carefully installed, and the charm of the long, rolling room is the total absence of anything tawdry or cheap. The cribs and their coverings are the very best that money can procure. The walls, done in robin egg blue, are lacking in any other adornment, and the spotlessly white trim to all woodwork accentuates the baby blue color scheme.

At the lower end of the room, and apart from the row of cribs, stands a low pitched pen in which half a dozen infants can roll, kick or sprawl in glee while their attendants are busy upon other duties about the large apartment. In all, there are ten cribs and the pen, which will safeguard possibly six more babies, but there is ample room for more cribs and another pen when the demands upon the institution become more insistent.

What was orginally the front hall bedroom on the second floor has been converted into a perfectly appointed kitchenette, where the foods for the infants are prepared. Gas burners are so arranged that the milk or potions for the little ones can be heated at a second's notice and near by stands a tiled ice box where the milk and other baby foods are kept at the proper temperature. The rear hall room has been transformed into a beautifully appointed bathroom, and every device imaginable that tends to make a baby's bath luxurious as well as enjoyable is here found. Sanitation is the keynote of this room, just as it is in the big nursery and kitchenette.

On the third floor are the sleeping apartments of Miss Rogers and her assistants, and here too Miss Rogers has an office, where she can be free from interruption while attending to her executive duties, which are manifold.

The many unfortunate mothers who are to profit by the existence of such an institution at the hour of their direst need are forever indebted to Mrs. Thomas, who conceived the idea of such a charity. Mrs. Thomas has prominently identified herself with work of this character for a long time and which she cast about for some institution upon which to lavish her thoughts, time and money. Finding nothing so entirely satisfying as the idea of founding a nursery whereby the mother as well as the child would be benefited. She made an exhaustive study of the problem and early in her struggles interested Mrs. James B. Duke in the project.

Together they consulted many authorities on charitable institutions and after weighing carefully all the suggestions that were offered they determined that a nursery in which only infants of mothers on the eve of entering a hospital should be admitted would prove a blessing to both.

They consulted many other women whose position in society was on a par with their own and all approached manifested a keen interest from the outset. Each was eager to take an active part in the organization of such an institution, but this was not done until authorities on settlement and medical matters were freely consulted.

A round of the leading hospitals proved that the chief concern of hundreds of poverty stricken mothers upon being taken to these wards was for the little ones they had left behind. Some of these infants had been intrusted to veritable strangers, while others had been left to the care of mere children—little brothers and sisters of the stricken, motherless household. The constant lament of these poor women was that their infants were being neglected while they lay white, wan and powerless to aid them.

In the course of a visit to Bellevue Hospital Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Duke found many such cases and then and there determined that a nursery for babies so situated would prove a blessing to mothers and infants alike. One of the leading physicians of Bellevue was consulted and his wise counsel proved of inestimable value to the women so bent on alleviating the mental and physical agony of their less fortunate sisters. It was further learned that more cases of this nature go to Bellevue than to any other like institution in the city and it was deemed expedient to locate the new nursery at a point convenient to this hospital. While the nursery is nearer to Bellevue's portals than to any other hospital where the indigent are received, the nursery does not exclusively confine its inmates to babies whose mothers are in that hospital. Any worthy case is taken care of as long as there is an empty crib in the nursery. The little ones there housed are under the almost constant medical supervision of Dr. Martin Goodwin, of Bellevue Hospital. He makes several visits to the nursery each day and is always in easy call should he be needed in the case of emergency.

When the organization was perfected it was with this Board of Managers:—Mrs. Thomas, chairman; Mrs. Belmont Tiffany, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. James B. Duke, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, Mrs. Roger Winthrop, Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar and Miss Ruth Morgan.

Among the more prominent and generous of the nursery's supporters these might be mentioned:—Mr. James B. Duke, Mr. Frank Munsey, Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr.; Mrs. George S. Baker, Mr. Andrew Sage, Mr. Clarence W. Mackay, Mr. Madison Grant and Mr. William P. Thompson.

Just prior to leaving for Europe Mrs. Thomas told the writer for this paper of her early efforts in perfecting the organization of which she is so proud.

"It was my original intention to establish a day or night nursery," Mrs. Thomas said. "But I soon realized that a broader field could be found among the poor women suddenly stricken and forced to hurry from their squalid homes to a hospital when they had neither the means nor time to find a suitable guardian for their little babies. There was something so appealing in this thought that I talked it over with my friends and they all agreed that no nobler or more far reaching charity could be conceived. Mrs. Duke became quite as enthusiastic as I was, and in an almost incredibly short time we found that the most prominent women in New York were ready and eager to join us in our project.

"Where there is a will there is a way," and that old adage proved just as true in this case as in hundreds of others. We soon decided that after we had consulted the best authorities in the city the quicker we got matters in a concrete form the better. Funds came in readily enough and soon we had more than enough to lay the foundations for the little institution which we hope to see grow into one of the most far reaching and useful in this great city, where want and suffering so constantly stalk abroad.

"For the time being we will limit our beds to ten. Then, too, we decided that none but babies in good health should be admitted, for we do not want to start out with a hospital list for our initial wards. As occasion warrants we may branch out, but at present we will confine our charges to ten, and as we gain experience we will be in that much better position to feel our way to bigger things. I don't think it would be possible for us to take care of more than twenty-five babies in our present quarters and we have no intention of moving to a larger house for some time to come. Furthermore, we believe that in caring for twenty-five babies as they really should be cared for is quite a big enough undertaking for the time being, especially in an institution which is really the pioneer in its field.

"There are few persons who will willingly take the responsibility of a well baby while its mother is in the hospital. Children of the ages ranging from a few months to five or six years require a great deal of attention. When a child learns to walk it has that intuitive sense of wanting to explore things, to learn more of the strange wonders of the new world which is opened to its heretofore narrow realm. They are constantly into this or that and if not carefully watched and cared for may be injured in some accident.

"Our 'frolicking pair' solve the problem of the child who is 'good as long as ever with rough and tumble company.' Without danger of paregoric bottles they can roll and tumble to their mothers' content. There they do not even require the services of an attendant. The newspapers are filled with short accounts of tragedies to little folk. Almost each day we read of a little girl or boy who falls out of a window—one who is severely burned or one hurt while playing the streets. The solution to this apparently perplexing problem is attention.

"Lack of care is responsible for the undersized, pale and delicate little children of our city. Oftentimes it is a case of improper food while they are developing the fastest. Oftentimes it is unintentional or inevitable neglect on the part of a mother who is forced to support herself and little ones. This condition is greatly ameliorated by day and night nurseries. Another case is where the mother is forced to go to a hospital. Her baby is left behind in indifferent hands or with relatives who know absolutely nothing of the care of a child: this condition will be relieved, that is partially so, by the Gramercy Nursery.

"It is a conceded fact that worry is responsible for the death of many mothers who suffer from only trivial illnesses. To a great extent our nursery will alleviate this useless but inevitable worry. It is that instinctive motherly love that causes her to brood and long for her child while helpless and ill. It becomes an obsession, and so much mental force is spent that the physical resistance ebbs and she dies.

"Another question arises:—Will the little folk be happy in the hands of strangers without mother or kin with whom they are familiar." Just call some day at the Gramercy Nursery and see for yourself. As you enter the front door you probably will hear squeals of joy and merry childish laughter coming from the rooms above. A baby likes company just as a grown person. They are congenial with each other; that is, in nearly all cases. Occasionally a hefty little fellow learns that he can "boss" the rest by physical supremacy, but such a case is rare.

"It is surprising to note what a strict sense of honor the little folk display. They are easily appealed to when one knows how to approach them, and usually a word dropped here and there will quickly drive away all traces of a bad disposition.

"Give a baby good food, proper care and environment and you will develop a gentle, industrious, capable man."

One happy woman, who has devoted years to social service and big problems of mothers and children, was made happier still when she learned of the Gramercy Nursery and its avowed purpose. She is none other than Miss Mary E. Wadley, head of the social service of Bellevue Hospital.

Miss Wadley has long seen the need of just such an institution. In fact, it is brought before her every hour of every day.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Oodles, the Avenger

He Was Half Witted, but Faithful

By M. J. PHILLIPS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"The New York attorney, he goes tomorrow," said Frederic, the fat French landlord of Pere Chene.

His wife, a thin little woman, with a sharp voice and a heart of gold, blazed into sudden anger.

"He stayed too long, and he goes too soon!" she cried.

Frederic took his pipe from his mouth and turned ponderously.

"You mean—what?" he questioned.

"I mean that our Therese"—

Frederic gazed uncomprehendingly, and she made a gesture of impatience at his stupidity.

"Tchk! Can't you see? She likes him too well."

Her husband's mouth sagged open. He held the pipe in his pudgy hand. His black beard rippled over his breast. His eyebrows were raised in amazement and something of dismay. He looked like a wondrously carved statue, for he sat very still.

But one's mouth cannot stay open indefinitely. Frederic's closed reluctantly. He peered into his pipe and drew forth his buckskin tobacco pouch. "Chut!" he commented.

Mme. Lecoeur ceased her agitated rocking.

"'Chut!'" she snapped. "'Chut!' And our only child is breaking her heart. Look for yourself. They are coming."

She inclined her head sideways. Her husband turned in his stout chair, all together, like a piece of machinery, and looked up the one street of the backwoods Michigan town.

It was a pretty sight that. Frederic saw—one that appealed to the quick sentimental perceptions of his race.

A man and a girl were coming toward the hotel on the veranda of which they sat. The man was of the city, and his neat, fashionable clothing was in striking contrast to the Mackinaw garb of the few woodsmen who

THERE HE TOWERED AND FELL.

lounged in doorways. He was talking eagerly to the girl, who kept pace with him, and his open young face was alight with the visions of one who is both dreamer and doer.

The girl was a glorious creature, whose roundness was not plumpness and whose slenderness was not thinness. Her luxurious brown hair was disordered—she walked in Indian moccasins with the springy ease of a frontierswoman.

Her big, dark eyes were turned on young Amidon with flattering attention. In their depths was an unconscious and pitiful revelation of her heart.

They paused a moment by the rude steps.

"We are going down to the falls," said the lawyer. "I want to explain to Miss Therese what our company means to do here. Why, M. Lecoeur, the country above is a natural reservoir. A dam will furnish power to light every town within a hundred miles of here and run the mills besides."

He turned to Therese as he finished as one turns to a friend who comprehends. But there was nothing in his look or his manner but impersonal enthusiasm; he felt that he was conscious of her sex or of her loveliness.

"Your company is rich, M. Amidon?" queried the landlord.

A smile came to the lawyer's boyish face.

"They have barrels of it," he replied.

Mme. Lecoeur turned to her husband when the young people had gone on.

"You see, you too?" she demanded. "She cannot get enough of looking at him. And he—his head is full of dams and electric lights and mills. Tchk—tchk!"

"My daughter," she continued, "is worthy of any man in the land. She has graduated from the Conying high school. She can bake and sweep and sew. She is as merry as a robin. She can walk from here to Tahquenaw in four hours, and it is twenty miles.

"She has taste, too, Frederic—a taste she did not inherit from the Lecoeurs. Faith, no.

"She has the high heeled, small-toed and a gown no bigger around than your trousers leg—great, fish-calf! She has even been three times to Bay City. She is as innocent and unspoiled as a babe. Why does he not see?"

She had spoken rapidly in French. Her husband removed his pipe in order to shake his head slowly.

"I will tell you why he does not see," she said, switching to English to answer her own question. "He has had no time but to bargain and plan and buy the land.

"If he could stay here for two weeks more, with his mind free of business, he could not help loving her. But he will go without seeing or speaking, and it will kill her."

She sighed wistfully. "If he would but fall sick. She is a splendid nurse."

They turned guiltily at a sound behind in the doorway, but at sight of the queer face looking down at them Mme. Lecoeur spoke relievedly. "Oh, Oodles! It is you!"

Oodles Napper was one of "God's innocents," a silent young half wit who roamed the wilderness. Sitting here and there as the errant fancy took him. The door of every settler from the straits to Saginaw bay was open to him. No one dreamed of charging him for food and lodging.

But he paid in his own way nevertheless. He was a mighty hunter. He always carried a rifle, and his aim was of the deadliest. Birds and squirrels and deer in season he brought to the homes of his friends.

Now the wide, thin, upturned mouth was doleful; the small blue eyes were dull.

"You heard, Oodles?"

Mme. Lecoeur and all of Pere Chene knew that he loved Therese, as the dog loves his mistress, with a dumb love that asks nothing but the privilege to serve.

The half wit nodded.

"Yes," he murmured. "Sorry—sorry." He looked to the north after Therese and Amidon.

"Where to, Oodles?"

Frederic had noted that he carried rifle and pack.

"Tahquenaw—south."

Without another word or look he turned toward the pine hills. Soon he disappeared in the scrub at the end of the street.

When the village had been shut off by tag alders and bushes Oodles' long strides shortened. Unconsciously he came to a standstill. He stood for several minutes in an indecision that was painful. His lips moved soundlessly.

Evidently it was a time of intense mental agitation, for the sweat burst out on his forehead, and his hands clinched until the knuckles showed white through the brown skin, and the tendons in his wrists drew like cords.

At last a resolution was reached. Heading west, he began to run swiftly, but with great caution.

He slipped through the brush like a wild thing. His face took on a new expression—queer and terrible.

As he ran he bore to the north in a half circle. Presently he came out on a little knoll, threw himself flat in the long grass and peered between the trunks of a clump of jack pines.

Yes, there they stood on the bank of the river, near the rapids. The lawyer, his face alight, was pointing as he explained the plans of his company to Therese.

The girl was looking up at her companion. Even at that distance the half wit read the unconscious pathos of her attitude.

With swift fierceness he drew the rifle to his shoulder, sighted carefully and fired.

Amidon paused in the midst of his sentence, blank amazement on his face. Then he tottered and fell.

Therese's scream echoed high above the bur of the rapids. The half wit ran away, more like a wild thing than ever.

* * * * * * *

Therese and her lover, who was also her husband, stood on the porch of the Lecoeur house in the gloaming. Her dark eyes were pools of brooding happiness.

The man, mimicking a shy schoolboy, edged over and took her hand. She laughed and leaned against him.

"It's good to be here," he said.

"Do you know what day it is?"

He looked down at her, eyes round with recollection.

"By Jove!" he cried. "It's just a year—a year ago today."

She nodded. They were silent a moment, and then he went on:

"If it hadn't been for that I'd never have discovered how much I cared. I was going away without a word to you. Think of that!

"But you hadn't finished binding me up before I was crazy about you, and the longer you nursed me the more I loved you."

His arm went round her.

She nestled against him and sighed contentedly.

"The chap who did it was a marksman," he continued. "There I was, gesticulating like Mark Antony, and along comes a bullet and breaks my arm—snip—like that. I wonder who it was?

"I'd like to know so I could thank him. The fellow did me a good turn."

She shuddered a little.

"I was frightened—at first. But it did come out all right, didn't it?"

"It certainly did," returned Amidon. "And now let's talk of something more serious. Kiss me," he said severely.

A chuckle came from the doorway behind, and they turned guiltily. The children.

"Oh," said Therese, relieved, "it's only Oodles!"

Weak Women!

In Girlhood—Womanhood and Motherhood

The prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce used most successfully—in diseases of women—which has stood the test of nearly half a century—is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Take this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic.

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beasley, Essex Co., Va., says, "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your 'Favorite Prescription.' I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it, with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

A NOTE IN SCHOOL.

Did You Ever, on the Sly, Either Slip One or Receive One?

Did you ever get a note in school?—from a boy?—from a big boy? I suppose there are other experiences in life that are comparable to this, but certainly there is nothing else at that time which combines the same elements—dramatic, entertaining, gratifying, triumphant, delicious, queer. Not that there was anything in such a note—the outside, as the missive first came to view, was much more thrilling than the contents.

But the very sight of it—pencilled on rough British scratch paper, and ragged edged and rumpled—as it was slipped across an intervening space or offered shyly behind a geography or dropped on the desk as the writer went up to the A spelling class, gave a sensation not to be duplicated in any later years.

The contents, I regret to say, were insignificant, negligible. It is to be hoped that the big boy learned more about the art in time. But the mere fact of getting such a note, of having it written to yourself, of forecasting the envies of having the other girls see you get it, all that in addition to the quaking fear that the teacher might see—once she made a girl read a note out loud!—filled the moment with peculiar emotion.—Margaret Lynn in Atlantic Monthly.

His Medicines Proven Effective, and Always Kept at Hand in This Home.

Mrs. Chas. Lovell, Agassiz, B. C., writes:—"I feel it my duty to tell you what a great friend Dr. Chase's medicines have been to myself and family. I cannot praise his medicines too highly, and Dr. Chase's name is a household word in our home. Well, quite a number of years ago I sent to you for a sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment for protruding piles, and, having used the sample and found relief, I sent to a neighbouring town for four boxes, and I am completely cured.

"I have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for constipation, and, after using them, I am completely cured of this dreadful disease. I am the mother of ten children, of whom nine are living, and when seven of my children were all very bad with whooping cough, caught in the middle of a severe winter, I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and they were all cured before the winter was over, and now we are never without Dr. Chase's medicines in our home, and I recommend them to all."

A FAMOUS REPLY.

The Cynical Comment Made by Sweden's Greatest Chancellor.

The career of Axel Oxenstjerna is a proud chapter in the history of Sweden. In 1611 Oxenstjerna became the chancellor of the Swedish empire, under Gustavus Adolphus. And much of the glory that befell the reign of that remarkable monarch was due to "the masterly diplomatic ability, great courage, resource and moderation" of his prime minister.

For in the days of Oxenstjerna Sweden was one of the "powers" of Europe, and the Swedish dominion for a time extended over Prussian territory. During the entire period of the Thirty Years' war in Europe, Sweden, through the instrumentality of her "mighty man in peace," maintained an enviable place in the council of nations.

And when in 1648 negotiations for a general continental agreement began at Osnabruck the Swedish chancellor appointed his own son, Johan, as the Swedish representative. The son, ex-pressed his distrust of his ability to properly serve his country in so responsible a capacity. To this natural diffidence of youth the father made his famous reply:

"Dost thou not know, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed?"

Jefferson and the Lawyers.

In the "Autobiography of Jefferson" is this passage:

"I served with General Washington in the legislature of Virginia before the Revolution," wrote Jefferson, "and during it with Dr. Franklin in congress. I never heard either of them speak ten minutes at a time, nor to any but the main point which was to decide the question. They laid their shoulders to the great points, knowing that the little ones would follow of themselves. If the present congress errs in too much talking, how can it be otherwise in a body to which the people send 150 lawyers, whose trade it is to question everything, yield nothing, talk by the hour? That 150 lawyers should do business together ought not to be expected."

Lover of Poetry.

"Too bad about poets, isn't it?"

"What's too bad—their poetry?"

"No, no; the fact that it doesn't pay to write poetry. I'm told they're mostly always very poor."

"You mean their books don't sell?"

"That's it. It's too bad."

"You like poetry?"

"I love it. I read all I can get."

"You buy the books, of course?"

"Oh, dear, no! I can get 'em all from the library!"

Seldom Misses.

Two "good fellows" were wabbling home at an early hour in the morning after a festive evening.

"Doesn't your wife miss you on these occasions?" asked one.

"Not often," replied the other; "she throws pretty straight."—Cleveland Leader.

Where They Differed.

"I always try to look at everything from both sides."

"Your wife tells a different story."

"How's that?"

"She says you haven't seen the inside of a church for years."—Chicago Record-Herald.

TORONTO

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, July 30.—Wheat gained fivefold in activity to-day. A rise and two cents a bushel was scored, partly due to unconfirmed reports of a final break between Russia and Germany. Trading, however, was hindered both by the general refusal of many firms to attempt business and by prospects of expert demand because of uncertainty regarding ocean war risks.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, July 30.—The wheat market was again excited over the war news and prices for all quotable in sympathy with Liverpool, touched high level. This advance made July wheat 91, October 88¼ and December 87c. Besides the war news conditions governing the volume of trading is light. One prominent commission house says they were not receiving new business to-day and as a matter of development that Chicago might close until matters were more settled.

The range of prices up to noon was like to this, and at that they were fairly steady at 1c to 1c over the opening. Weather and crop conditions were simply neglected, the news from the other side of the Atlantic being eagerly watched for. At 12 o'clock October wheat was sold at 91c, but eased off a quarter of a cent during noon.

The weather over the prairie provinces has been warm and light rain has occurred at five points. Flax, following the opening, made a sensational drop, caused by liquidation, and stood 25 cents about 10c to 12c lower than opening prices. Closing prices were: Wheat, 84¼c to 84¾c higher; flax, 85½c to 9c lower. Cash prices: Wheat, 4c to 6½c higher; oats, ½c to 1½c higher; barley, unchanged; flax, 8½c lower.

Inspections totalled 76 cars, as compared with 19 last year, and for slight wear 76. Cash wheat—No. 1 northern, 93¾c; No. 2 do., 89¼c; No. 3 do., 82c; No. 4 do., 84c. Oats—No. 2 C.W., 46c; No. 3 do., 42½c; extra No. 1 feed, 37c; No. 1 f.c.d., 36c; No. 2 do., 37c. Barley—No. 4, 51c; rejected, 47½c. Flax—No. 1 N.W.C., $1.55; No. 2 C.W., $1.52; No. 3 C.W., $1.46.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, July 30.—There was some demand for wheat over the cable today and sales of a few odd loads were made, but the demand for oats from Glasgow was active at an advance of 1d to 1s per quarter and sales of twenty loads were made for August shipment at 19s to 19s 3d.

A very strong feeling developed in the local market for oats and prices advanced one cent to 1½ cents per bushel under an active demand from both local and export buyers, and sales of fully 500,000 bushels were made on spot and for shipment from the west.

The tone of the market for corn and barley was also very strong, at an advance of one cent to two cents per bushel. There was also a good demand from foreign buyers for new crop spring wheat flour, and sales of 30,000 sacks were made for October-November shipment, and considerable business has also been done within the past day or two with Newfoundland buyers at an advance of 10c per barrel in wood.

In butter the feeling is firm and a large active trade was done over the cable in cheese today. The demand for cars is good.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 30.—Close: Wheat—July, 87c; Sept., 85¾c; No. 1 hard, $1.04¾; No. 1 northern, 93¾c to $1.02¾; No. 2 northern, 87¾c to $1.01¾. Corn—No. 3 yellow, 75c to 75½c. Oats—No. 3 white, 35¾c to 36¼c. Flour—Fancy patents, $5.20; first clears, $4.20; second clears, $3; shipments, 62,600 barrels. Bran—$20.

CHEESE MARKETS.

MADOC, July 30.—Four hundred and forty boxes offered; 13 9-16c bid. No sales.

BROCKVILLE, July 30.—At today's cheese board the offerings were 2,566 colored and 1,589 white. The sales were 655 colored and 120 white at 13⅞ cents. Balance refused.

Overheard by Thackeray.

The discomforts endured by Thackeray in the United States, which he dwells upon in the letters to Mrs. Brookfield, were alleviated by some amusing incidents. After his return to London he told Carlyle that during one of his American journeys "the train stopped at Concord. Then one of the two silent Yankees opposite me turned to the other and remarked, 'Mr. Emerson, I hear, lives in this town.' 'Keow,' was the drawling rejoinder, 'and I understand that, in spite of his odd notions, he is a man of considerable ability.'"

HER MISSING NECKLACE.

Saint-Hilaire Finally Awoke and Restored It to His Wife.

The innocent ignorance of much eminent men of science as to ordinary matters is illustrated by an amusing anecdote of Geoffroy Saint-Hilaire the younger. Saint-Hilaire was accustomed to bury himself in his laboratory, where he did not allow the affairs of his household to disturb him, and Mme. Saint-Hilaire was careful to guard him against all worry of domestic matters.

In his laboratory he was accustomed, being a naturalist, to have various strange animals, after the fashion of Rossetti. Of these a monkey was his favorite. His wife possessed a necklace of diamonds, of which she was extremely proud. One day this necklace was missing. Madame was in despair and the house searched, with the exception of Saint-Hilaire's room. She knew his dislike of being disturbed, and moreover she had not entered this room for a long time, so that she could not have left the diamonds there.

A few days later at one of Mme. Saint-Hilaire's "at homes" her husband appeared, and a woman among the guests who supposed he knew of the disappearance of the diamonds asked him if they had been found.

"What diamonds?" he asked. He called his wife and questioned her. "What sort of a looking thing was this that you have lost?"

She described the diamond necklace.

"Ah," said the naturalist, "the several days my baboon has had in his possession, generally wrapped about his neck, a similar thing to that described."

"But why did you not tell me?" his wife exclaimed in indignation.

"Why," answered Saint-Hilaire, "I supposed that it belonged to him. He seemed to be very fond and proud of it."

Color No Guide To Foxes.

An interesting incident mentioned by the explorer Low in one of his reports is to the effect that on the Moose river, in Ungava, in 1887, he found a fox litter containing seven kits, of which two were red, three were cross, and the remaining two, black and silver, thus showing that the color of foxes no more constitutes varieties than does the difference of color in a litter of kittens of the domestic cat.

Northern Ungava produces the interesting white or Arctic fox, which exists in no other part of the province of Quebec. In fact it has been rarely taken south of Lake Michikamau or Nichicun, excepting along the coast line of Hudson Bay, where specimens have been seen nearly as far south as James Bay. The blue fox is much less abundant than the white, with which it is often found.

Single furs from some of these animals have produced over $2,000 each, and choice live foxes of Ungava quality are easily worth from $5,000 to $10,000 each.

A Great Invention.

Mr. Edison is apt to be rather crusty with visitors to his workrooms when they ask too many questions.

One day a rather talkative journalist pointed at a model. "What's that?" he asked.

Mr. Edison, who was getting very weary of the man's endless questions, replied blandly: "That, my dear sir, is a cradle that rocks by sound. You put the baby in and the louder it howls the faster the cradle rocks!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Painfully Particular.

"If you refuse me this time," he said, "I shall never ask you to be my wife again."

"Oh, please," replied the girl from Boston, "try to use better English. I never have been your wife. Why should you ask me to be your wife again?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Narrow Escape.

"Don't you regret your youth?"

"Sometimes," replied Mr. Growcher. "And then again I'm kind o' glad to get away from the period of my existence when my supreme ambition was to be a good banjo player."—Washington Star.

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. SAVE A LITTLE.

A Bank Account Is Better Than Show That Keeps One Broke.

It is quite possible that the American family is too optimistic. It is always going to have a larger income next year or in five years. In desiring to keep up in social matters with the people next door or farther up the street, it buys pianos or motorcars on encyclopedias on monthly payments, but in most cases puts no monthly instalment in the savings bank. It has no margin of security.

How much better it is to have a margin of resources than to be living continually on the ragged edge of nothing as many of us do just because we are such devotees of the god of appearances.

While the high cost of living is one of the live topics of the day, a note of warning should be sounded—a warning against extravagance, a suggestion that every family make a deposit in the savings bank each month. The future happiness and prosperity of the average American family depend upon the proper adjustment of income and expenditure. It is not what a man earns, but what he and his family save, that counts in determining the ultimate success or failure of his life from a material standpoint.—T. D. McGregor's "Talks on Thrift."

HELPFUL HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

If a spoonful of lime is kept in the pantry where the jellies and preserves are stored, it will prevent them from moulding.

To prevent table linen from becoming yellow, fold it in an old sheet that has been well blued before putting it away.

Instead of using bluing in your rinsing water to whiten clothes, use it in water while boiling them. You will find this whitens them beautifully.

White marks caused by hot dishes, etc., upon polished surfaces can be removed by applying a little olive oil and salt over the marks. Leave this on for some time, then remove it and polish.

To wash a bottle or a glass that has contained oil, use very hot coffee grounds. If the glass be badly encrusted, wash it with a mixture of bichromate of potash and sulphuric acid in equal parts, being careful not not to get a drop of this upon the fingers.

When using green or red sweet peppers save the seeds, which are in large number inside the shell. Dry these on a plate and put them in a wide-necked bottle. They are delicious for giving a zest to soups, gravies, sauces, salad dressing and the like.

Hope Of Localizing War Has Been Given Up

Germany Has Been Placed Under Martial Law

GREAT BRITAIN UNITED TO FACE THE DANGER

Solid Front in Support of the Government by all Sections of the House—Steps to Place Army on War Footing

THE FLEET IS READY

LONDON, July 30. —The British navy is prepared for war at a moment's notice, and the British army is quietly and swiftly preparing. The War Office throws cold water on the word "mobilization," and has issued another carefully framed official notice to the newspapers that only "the usual precautions" are being taken.

Nevertheless many step secondarily to place the land forces on a war footing, except the summoning of the territorials to whom, has been taken. All the territorial officers received orders to-day to be prepared for a call to duty.

A large section of the engineers' staff of the territorials has been ordered on duty. It consists of electricians, mine-layers, bridge-builders and searchi and lighthouse experts. Some of these forces are being sent to Ireland to replace the engineers of the regular army, all of whom have been withdrawn from that place for duty in connection with the land defenses, particularly on the eastern coast.

Every officer and private of the regular establishment on leave has been recalled, the only exception for absence being on account of serious illness. All the police on leave have likewise returned to duty, some of them to replace soldiers guarding the military stores and stations, who are needed elsewhere.

The forces of Aldershot have been reinforced by numerous detachments from other points, and a battalion of the Duke of Cornwall's Regiment, which was about to embark for Hong Kong, has been detained.

The searchlight stations on the eastern coast, whose office is to guard against a surprise invasion and which usually are manned by skeleton staffs, are now fully manned, largely by territorials. Cunarder steamers report the lights all along last night, playing their shafts on every incoming and every outgoing vessel.

FIRST FLEET READY TO STRIKE.

None but the Admiralty, which is in constant touch through wireless at Whitehall, knows the whereabouts of the first fleet, which left Portland yesterday, but it is a safe presumption that the fleet is in a position close to the Channel, where it can strike the North Sea in the event of hostilities.

The crisis could not have arrived at a more convenient time for the navy, as the fleet has just been through a review on a war footing, which took the place of manoeuvres this year.

A notice has been issued virtually closing Portsmouth harbour to private craft. Only certain anchorage may be used, and vessels may be fired on without notice if they move. They cannot enter or leave the harbour without permission. The ferry services may be stopped at any time.

Two Germans, suspected of being spies, were arrested in the Isle of Wight to-day and are detained in jail.

UNITY IN PARLIAMENT.

The political forces of the country also are almost mobilized solidly, presenting, in Premier Asquith's words to the House of Commons to-day, "a united front."

The remarkable spirit was witnessed to-day of Premier Asquith and Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, who a few days ago were on terms of personal as well as political hostility, driving in the same car for a consultation with Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

The Prime Minister announced in the House of Commons that the amending bill to the home rule bill would be dropped for the present by the consent of all parties; all parties included the Irish Nationalists and the Ulster Convenanters, Mr. Bonar Law said:

"In view of the Prime Minister's pronouncement, that there and war are in the balance no differences must not prevent our presenting a united front in the council of the world," and added on behalf of Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, to the same effect.

IRISH MEMBERS, TOO.

The spectacle of a solid front in support of the Government by all sections of the Irish members in the House of Commons was even more remarkable than the reconciliation of Mr. Asquith and Mr. Bonar Law. The traditional sentiment of the home rulers that England's extremity is Ireland's opportunity was buried when the Irish members murmured, "Hear, hear!" to the Premier's plea for unity.

Not only the home rule question, but all measures likely to arouse party or international hostilities have been side-tracked. They include the naval vote, which inevitably excites discussion of Germany's policy and the vote for Imperial defence. Nevertheless, there is a strong although apparently a minority feeling that Great Britain should maintain neutrality whatever comes, and refuse to be drawn into the quarrels of the continental powers.

BUILDING PERMITS FOR JULY SHOW A SPLENDID GAIN

Over $20,000 Greater Total Than July 1913 Reached—An Encouraging Condition

WORK IS MAINTAINED

BUILDING PERMITS.

July, 1914	$69,535
July, 1913	49,435
Increase	$20,100

The above figures are decidedly encouraging in so far as mere statistics are capable of producing a brighter feeling. They also indicate that the high tide of building activity felt in the spring has not yet receded. The fact is that July presents comparatively as good a showing as any of the months of the year. Added to this is the report that the indications point to a continuance of the Building activities well into the autumn months. The Barrie building represented $35,000 of the total for July.

CANADIAN REGIMENTS COULD NOT BE ORDERED FOR FOREIGN SERVICE

The growls of the European war dogs find a faint echo in Canada. The Minister of Militia has his military council about him, and the prospect of the Mother Country being involved presents the probability of Canadian volunteers taking a share in the struggle. Col. Clegg stated to the Examiner that no communications had been received by the 57th Regiment from the Minister, and in the event of Canada participating with the Old Country any Canadian force sent would be entirely volunteer. The regiment could be ordered out against invaders of this country, but for foreign service their enlisting would be entirely voluntary.

Placing Germany Under Military Control Is Regarded As First Step In Declaration Of War

Servians and Austrians Have Been Fighting All Day on the Banks of the Drina River With Heavy Losses on Both Sides---Significant Dispatch From Vienna Says Hope of Localizing War Has Been Given up in all Quarters---Germany Holds Her Big Passenger Ships in Readiness.

BERLIN, Germany, July 31.—(Passed by Censor)—It was semi-officially denied to-day that an order for the mobilization of the German army will be issued to-morrow. The strictest censorship is in force and messages concerning the army and navy are absolutely forbidden with the Berlin cable office in hopeless confusion.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—The committee to-day decided to close the stock exchange until further notice on account of the international war crisis. Exchanges at Liverpool, Edinburgh and Manchester were also closed. This is the first instance in modern time when the London Exchange has suspended all business.

HOPE IS GIVEN UP.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—Much significance was attached to the fact that this dispatch from Vienna to the Exchange Telegraph Co. was passed by the censor: "Hope of localizing the war has been given up in all quarters."

UNDER MARTIAL LAW.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—A London news agency despatch received here shortly after three o'clock declares that martial law has been declared throughout the chief military districts of Germany, and in the frontier provinces. This action is reported to have given rise to the rumour that war has been declared. This rumour that war had been declared as sent out by all news services has not confirmed, and later was said to have been caused by a martial law order.

To-day's proclamation was signed by the German Emperor as the King of Prussia. The German military authorities posted notices that the railroad stations and tracks have been placed under military guard. Nobody is allowed nearer than a hundred yards from the tracks and culverts, and any civilians disobeying the sentries' challenge are in danger of being shot.

IMPERATOR IS READY.

HAMBURG, July 31.—The sailing of the trans-Atlantic liner Imperator was cancelled at the order of the government to-day in case of war. The Imperator, the biggest passenger carrying ship afloat, will be pressed into service. She was scheduled to sail for New York to-morrow. The German government ordered the Hamburg-American line to hold the liner Vaterland in New York until further orders. Orders were also issued detaining the Victoria Louise and other vessels of the German reserve lists in their ports.

RELATIONS BROKEN OFF.

BERLIN, Germany, July 31.—The Deutch Tages Zeuting, an influential imperialistic paper, to-day declares diplomatic relations have been broken off between Russia and Austria. The prices on food imported from Russia doubled to-day. The potatoes are unobtainable. There were no London mails to-day. The foregoing was passed by the censor.

MORE NEGOTIATIONS.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—A Reuter dispatch from St. Petersburg to-day declares the negotiations between Russia and Austria for localizing the Austro-Servian conflict have been reopened. It also reported that Austria had made an offer to Japan with a view to forming an alliance should war break out.

NEW YORK.—Facing the enormous task of absorbing all the world's stock business, the New York Stock Exchange to-day is to close. The board of governors held that the unloading of securities might result in depressing prices to a panicky figure. The Consolidated Stock Exchange and curb market closed shortly after the opening. Then the Philadelphia, Boston and Pittsburg Exchanges did not open to-day. The Chicago Stock Exchange was closed until further notice.

IN A STATE OF WAR.

PARIS, France, July 31.—Germany was to-day declared in a state of war according to the news agency dispatches from Berlin. This did not constitute a declaration of war, but practically places all Germany under military control and is regarded as a preliminary step to the declaration of war against Russia.

The German Embassy interpreted the report as meaning every part of the German Empire would be affected by the state of war order except Bavaria, which necessitates a separate promulgation, which proclamation will be issued immediately.

TO-DAY'S FIGHTING.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—To-day's actual battles in a statment issued by the Servian office says the Austrians failed in an effort to force a pass which commands an approach to Morava Valley. The fighting was of a most desperate nature, and continued to-day with heavy losses. According to Nish despatches the Austrians and Servians had engaged in an all-day fight on the banks of the Drina river. From Vienna came word that the Austrian frontier guards repelled a strong attack by the Servians.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—Conversations were resumed to-day by the Russian and Austrian governments; martial law proclaimed through Germany; stock exchanges closed all over the world; several encounters between Austrians and Servian troops in which Austrians were successfully resisted; removing of German liners from trans-Atlantic service were big developments in the European situation to-day. Official England was in momentary fear of the declaration of war by Germany against Russia. Though no announcement has been made it was generally believed that Germany had mobilization under way. All inquiries from London newspapers and agencies as to internal happenings in Germany and the movements of the German troops and war vessels have been unanswered. Everything is now in the control of the army. As far as England is concerned she was making preparations as well as playing a leading role in the efforts to preserve peace, and no publicity was given to the measures she was taking. Dover Harbour was cleared and cross-channel steamers sent put in at Folkstone. The Admiralty was purchasing all coal available. Troops from Shorncliffe have been sent to Queensboro and other eastern ports. A greatly increased force has been stationed at Woodwich Arsenal. Eastern and southern coast patrols have been strengthened. The hope of peace has been abandoned in Great Britain, and all diplomatic intercourse has come to a standstill with every embassy in London adopting a non-communicative attitude.

An uncensored despatch from Berlin said that series of explosions were heard on the Russian side of the Austro-Russian frontier at Myslowitz to-day and the Czars troops were reported to have blown up a big bridge, an important one on the Vienna Warsaw railroad.

RUSSIAN VESSELS MOVE.

ROME, July 31.—Saloniki despatch this evening reports that a flying squadron consisting of three Russian cruisers and two destroyers is speeding towards the Bosphorus with the objective of sinking any vessels flying the flag of either Germany or Austria, immediately war is declared.

HAGUE, July 31.—The Netherlands army is mobilizing.

AUSTRIANS GOING BACK.

TORONTO, July 31.—Four thousand Austrians of Toronto, liable to recall for military service, to-day received definite orders from the Consul of Montreal to be in readiness. Five have already left and sixteen young Poles were seen at th station of a morning.

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—Premier Asquith made an important statement late to-day that the government had heard from Germany that Russia has proclaimed a general mobilization of her army and fleet, and that in consequence martial law had been proclaimed in Germany. "We understand, this means that mobilization will follow in Germany if the Russian mobilization is general and is proceeded with," Asquith said. "In these circumstances I prefer not to answer any further questions till Monday. The King has cancelled all engagements.

ROYAL CANADIANS NOTIFIED.

NIAGARA-ON-THE-LAKE, July 31.—Considerable excitement was caused here when word was received from Ottawa that the Royal Canadian Regiment of Toronto has been ordered to hold itself in readiness to go to Quebec.

STEAMER CANCELLED.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The German Lloyd Steamships have been cancelled till further notice.

HEAVY WITHDRAWALS.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—This afternoon more than two hundred persons were in line at the Bank of England. The heavy withdrawals and applications for loans amounted to almost a run. They are partially due, however, to the fact that Monday is a bank holiday. There was no panic. The heavy demand was followed by the raising of the bank rate to eight per cent. A charge of ten per cent. is being made for weekly loans, and ten and a half for bills. It is possible that the banking act may be suspended. The discount rate was doubled to stop the outflow of gold.

FURTHER NEGOTIATIONS.

LONDON, Eng., July 31.—Shortly after the cabinet met a newspaper bureau announced it had been informed that official news had been received in diplomatic quarters of the reopening of communications between Austria and Russia and that negotiations for settlement were being carried on at St. Petersburg and Vienna.

NEW YORK, July 31.—The New York Cotton Exchange is closed now.

ONE FIRM FAILS.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Failure in New York. The firm of S. H. Poll and Co. was established July, 1908. The partners are S. H. Poll, Chas. Kettle, Howland Haggerty, members of the New York Stock Exchange.

GERMANS MOBILIZING ON THE FRENCH FRONTIER

Late Despatch Contains This Startling News—French Reservists Expect Call to Arms

WAR FEVER IN PARIS

Special Cable to The Examiner.

PARIS, July 31.—Germany is mobilizing a tremendous force on the French frontier, according to a late afternoon despatch. While no mobilization orders to the French Army have yet ben issued, barracks rendezvous points are crowded with reservists momentarily expecting a call to arms. Business and trade is at a standstill. Paris rages with a war fever.

Peterborough In Lindsay Band-Fest

The 57th Band went to Lindsay yesterday to take part in the band competition in that place, but was not successful in winning, for obvious reasons, the first prize in the special class, though they won second place. It was only a day or two before the contest date that the band decided to enter the contest, and necessarily, insufficient opportunity was given for the practice that even the best organized band requires, to be at its best. Besides the numbers of the band were reduced to make it eligible, and thus the ensemble, spirit and effective cooperation of the organization as a whole were weakened. This explanation is not made to account for failure or to minimise the merits of the winning band, from Weston, which is an excellent organization.

The Fifty-Seventh took first place in the class in which it really is, a military band. It was awarded first prize in the marching contest, as the best military band in the parade. The prize is a baton valued at $20.

Individuals members and former members of the band, however, won good prizes and upheld the credit of Peterborough.

Mr. Walter Hughes, a former member of the 57th (where his exceptional skill as a cornetist was developed), but now leader of the Port Hope band, won first prize in the cornet solo competition, the prize a Holton B flat cornet, valued at $75, presented by Claxton & Co., Toronto.

Domenico Memmo (commonly known as Dominic Nimmo) won the first trombone prize, securing a B flat "artist" trombone, donated by R. S. Williams, Toronto.

Master Otto Gliddon, son of Lieutenant Gliddon, of the Conservatory of Music, took first prize in the solo clarionet competition, winning an "Ideal" B flat clarionet, presented by Whaley, Royce & Co., Toronto. This young musician is especially to be congratulated. It is no small triumph for a lad of fourteen years to come out first in competition with seasoned musical competitors of twice his age, and twice his experience.

Don't forget the Printers' Picnic to Jubilee Point, To-morrow, Aug. 1st, per Steamer Stoney Lake. The Boat leaves George St. Wharf at 1.30, Street Railway Wharf at 1.45. Adults 50c, Children 25c. Good programme of Sports, comprising 17 Events and a Grand Drawing Contest for three good prizes, which is open to all.

PROGRAMME FOR TO-NIGHT'S CONCERT

Weather permitting and by the kind permission of Lt.-Col. Clegg, Commanding Officer of the 57th, the Band will render the following programme to-night at Victoria Park:

March—Philharmonic.
Overture—Semiramide.
Waltz—Blue Danube.
Intermezzo—"Valley Flowers".
Medley of Harris' Hits, No. 7.
Down South—(Plantation Patrol).
The Derrick Chorus in Sousan.
March.
God Save the King.

LOCAL MAN IN A HEROIC ROLE

The Regina Leader says: "Mr. O. M. Steer, of Peterborough, had been delayed considerably on his journey to the coast owing to an accident sustained through a heroic effort to safe a little girl from a burning house in Abernethy, Sask. The child was brought from its death bed, but resuscitation was impossible owing to severe burns. Mr. Steer is recovering rapidly, but it is feared that he will lose the use of one finger as the result of a severe cut."

Opening of Canal Will Bring Many Tourists From U. S.

The Midland Argus is enthusiastic over the prospective benefits from the opening of the Trent Valley Canal, and says: "The thirty thousand islands of the Georgian Bay, will then become the greatest tourists paradise in America upon the completion of the Trent Valley Canal. It will permit the wealthy American to step into his yacht at New York and sail straight through to Midland, witnessing enroute some of the grandest scenery on the continent. This Georgian Bay line means much for this part of the country, and aside altogether from its benefit as a freight-carrying waterway, the tourist business developed through its construction will be of great importance to Canada, and particularly this part of Ontario.

TEN BUSHELS TO THE ACRE

Mr. G. N. Gordon, returning last evening from Warkworth, stated that in the district south of Campbellford, the crops are in excellent condition. One farmer reported having obtained 30 bushels of wheat to the acre.

FRIDAY, JULY 31, 1914

AN ACCIDENT.

A great many sticklers for eye-for-an-eye justice are complaining over the failure of justice implied in the jury acquitting Madame Caillaux, who shot Mr. Calmette, the editor of the Paris Figaro, to death. But the acquittal was perhaps perfectly justifiable. The editor's death was the result of accident. If a woman's aim is no better with a pistol than with a stone or other missle, there is room for the accident theory. Madame Caillaux did not shoot what she aimed at. If she had drawn her feminine head on the editor's breast; if she had aimed to shoot him through the heart, she would have shot him in the legs. But, as, she says she did, she aimed at his legs, we have the explantion of the bullet striking a deadly spot—by inadvertence.

TAXATION AND RECREATION.

It is natural that there should be a proposal for readjustment, in the way of increase of frontage tax rates for sewer construction. We all know that the cost of building sewers has increased. We all know, too, that the rate of general taxation has greatly increased, and it would not be according to the eternal fitness of things to allow a matter like increase of sewer frontage tax to be neglected.

But may not one readjustment suggest another? The cost of living is high now, and growing higher; and a demand for increase in wages would be a natural complement of an increase in sewer construction rates. While it is not to be expected that our civic rulers will neglect any reasonable opportunity for increasing the burden of taxation, it would be a real treat to the taxpayers to even see the prospect of reduction of taxation in some quarter.

It is not to be denied that our taxes are becoming large, too unwieldy for comfortable handling by the ordinary income. But we can see no way out of it except going without many things we think we must have. Municipal taxation, as a rule, represents some adequate value—in every thing except, perhaps, the matter of general street construction and management. It is difficult to see how our streets, as a whole, can be held to represent fair value in the way of comfortable use by the citizens, for the money spent upon them. For the taxes we pay for sewers and waterworks we get almost direct value in the way of conveniences which modern conditions make an absolute essential of decent living.

We may complain of our taxes, but if not excusable they are inevitable, and represent better value as a whole than many expenditures we voluntarily make. Men riding in expensive cars that possibly may carry a mortgage on the home, as well as the owner and his friends, complain of the high figure of their tax bills, and confess inability of knowing how to meet them. Men sitting on the bleachers at a ball game, men sitting on excursion steamer decks; men sitting on the verandahs of their summer cottages that are, in some cases, perhaps, maintained at the expense of their business interests and business obligations, complain of their taxes, which, even if they are heavy, represent generally the provision of comforts indispensable in modern conditions of living, if not necessities. The various forms of pleasure seeking, cited above, and others that could be cited, can be dispensed with without making any serious sacrifice.

This juxtaposition of ideas illustrates the truth of the proverb that we can't have our cake and eat it, too; and this suggests that there might, with advantage, be a readjustment of modes of living, as well as readjustment of frontage rates for sewerage construction. No one will deny that the present age is rather much given to pleasure seeking. We should all have recreation and pleasure, but logically these cease to deserve their names if they are purchased at the expense of other things that count. Pleasure is a relative term and the significance of its definition changes with conditions. Some of us are so constituted that we can make a pleasure of business and of proper discharge of the duties of our station in life, and place in the world. We may be voted dull souls but we have no aftermath of regrets. Others may, and too many do, make a business of pleasure—something that cannot be done except at certain risk of bitter repentence, and unavailing regret. However, we shall never perhaps reach the ideal condition where we shall all wisely and judiciously blend our business and recreation, our duties and our pleasures.

SOUNDS LIKE TREASON.

The Kingston Standard says that there will be better times in the United States. It adds:

"It naturally follows from this that good times will soon be restored to Canada, since it has always been the case that both good and hard times in the States have been reflected by similar conditions in this country, because of the close financial and commercial relations existing between he two countries.

We are inclined to agree with this. But it must sound almost treasonable to those who said that reciprocity ought to be defeated, in order that Canada might be free from the financial fluctuations of the United States. —Toronto Star.

WAR COSTS.

Those who jauntily talk of civil war in the British Isles would do well to remember the experience of the United States. The cry there was "On to Richmond in a week." It took five years' fratricidal strife and a river of blood flowed before Richmond was reached and the Stars and Bars hauled down from the southern capital.

POVERTY AND SHAME.

To assume that poverty alone is capable of driving women to shame, is to indict the morals of every poor woman or girl in the world. The known fact is that it is not the poor and hard-working, as a rule, but the rich and idle whose lapses from rectitude are most frequent.—Rochester Herald.

NEGLECTFUL PARENTS.

Parents who permit a girl of 14 or 15 years of age to go away for a day of pleasuring alone are contributing to delinquency, and it would seem that they ought to be amenable to the law which punishes that offence. Nothing will ever be accomplished in this reform without going to the root of the trouble, and at the root the authorities undoubtedly will find neglecteful parents. A word to the wise ought to be sufficient. — Rochester Herald.

ENFORCE THE LAW.

The banishment of the revolver will never come about in Canada, at least, unless the laws already regulating the sale and carrying of deadly weapons are observed. If the sections of the present Criminal Code, dealing with the purchase of firearms and their possession were enforced by the authorities, whenever occasion arises, there would be a considerable decline in the number of shooting affrays which now ornament our daily news columns.—Ottawa Citizen.

WHY BOYS GO WRONG.

Professor Fiske, of Oberlin College, has given nine reasons why in his opinion boys go wrong. They all have a certain amount of truth in them; city life, tenements, too few playgrounds, the roughness of the policemen, the sternness of the courts, the school system, unregulated recreation, child labour and divorces. But surely the principal one has been left out. The parents, what about them? In nine cases out of ten the probability is that if the parents recognized their responsibility, the boys would not have gone wrong. There is too much shunting of this responsibility, and it would be a mighty good thing if when boys do go wrong and are punished that the parents should be taken to task if it be proved they are at fault.

It is a difficult subject, but the great point to our minds in that if parents choose to bring children into this world they should be held responsible for their good behaviour. Perhaps one of these days the law will come to see this.—Kingston Standard.

RUSSIA'S RELATION TO REST OF EUROPE AND HER TWO ENEMIES

Looking at the European situation broadly, we see rivalry between Russia on the one hand and Austria-Hungary and Germany on the other. The Germans of Germany and Austria are an energetic race, expanding rapidly in a small territory. It is not unnatural that they should look with envy at the huge territory of Russia, nearly nine million miles, or four times as great as all the rest of Europe combined. It contains resources which if developed would make it easily superior even to such a combination as Germany and Austria. No country in Europe has such possibilities of expansion. In this respect it can be compared only with the nations of our own continent and Australia. Its Asiatic possessions cover six and a half million miles, and in Siberia alone it has nearly five million millions, with a population of less than six million people.

This huge nation has been defeated and humiliated, but never conquered. War has touched only the fringes of its territory. Napoleon the First could conquer Russian armies in the cockpit of Europe, but when he marched an army to Moscow he prepared the way for his own ruin. England and France defeated Russia fifty years ago, but the defeat had little effect upon the huge Russian fabric. The Japanese War touched only the eastern fringe of the Empire.

A war with Germany and Austria would probably be more dangerous to Russia than any that we have referred to, but it is doubtful whether the Germanic powers even if victorious, could look for any great territorial expansion at Russia's expense. Slow and clumsy at the outset of a war, Russia has enormous recuperative powers.

Her chief weakness is financial, and this is due mainly to imperfect industrial development. Of recent years there have been symptoms of an industrial awakening and this is all that is necessary to enable Russia to defy almost any possible combination of enemies. Defective access to the sea is another difficulty, but this is largely offset by Russia's unrivalled advantages as a land power. —Toronto Star.

Cats and Man.

No subject that Dr. Weir Mitchell studied, either scientific or social, is more curious than the one he described in a little known paper entitled "Of Alliterophobia and the Power to Be Conscious of the Cat as Near, When Unseen and Unheard." In this paper Dr. Mitchell declares that there are persons who have been able to distinguish the presence of a cat by its smell, but cannot any longer do so and yet who retain ability to detect unseen cats.

"It is likely," he says, "that the cat emanations may affect the nervous system through the nasal membrane, although unrecognized as odors. Why these emanations should, if plainly perceived as due to cats, cause certain symptoms in those who dread cats is readily understood.

"The ultimate cause of unreasonable terror of cats I cannot explain."—Century.

It's Going Down.

The Ottawa Labor Department's index number of wholesale prices stood at 136.2 for May, as compared with 136.8 in April, and 134.5 in April, 1913. Hogs, sheep, dairy products, fish, and metals, fuel and some lines of lumber were lower in price, but grains, cattle and beef, fruits and vegetables, wool and jute showed important advances. Compared with the same month a year ago, the groups: Fish, dairy products, miscellaneous foods, metals, fuel and furs were on lower levels, but advances appeared in the groups. Grains and fodder, animals and meats, fruits and vegetables, textiles, hides, leather and lumber.

MONEY TO LOAN

Did You Ever Figure This Way

To purchase a modern house with furnace at $1900 and pay $200 down on same and balance at 6 per cent and taxes and insurance, what this really costs on monthly basis.

Purchase at $1900 pay $200 down

Balance $1700 at 6 per cent is $102 per year.

Taxes for one year is $30.

Insurance for one year is $2.50. $134.50 for the year or in other words $11.21 per month for a modern house. Now if you are paying $15 a month rent what do you save out of your rent money, just $11.21 from $15 leaves $3.79 per month or $45.48 per year saved out of ordinary rent money this applied on the principal will gradually pay it off and you will have a home of your own clear of debt in a few years you have to pay rent anyway, why not be paying on a home of your own. If you call at 324 George Street I will explain better to you how to make this start. Don't be afraid to venture. Many good offerings to show you and a distance given in many ways.

THE MOST POWERFUL FLEET IN THE WORLD

First English Fleet Has Sailed From Portsmouth---Admiralty Has Asked British Press to Be Reticent in Regard to Publishing Information.

LONDON, July 30.—The Admiralty has issued requests with which nearly all the responsible newspapers are complying for the utmost reticence regarding the movements of warships and the conditions of naval and military stores and other information, the leakage of which might be used by England's possible continental enemies. Moreover, most impressive Admiralty warning has just been circulated throughout the fleet and naval stations, reminding all in the service of the risks of the great mischief that may result from apparently unimportant items of information becoming public. The officers and men are specially cautioned against communicating anything to the press. Any infringements will be visited by prosecution under the Official Secrets Act, or dismissal from the service. Seeing, however, that the Admiralty itself issued last night a list of the ships composing the first fleet which left Portland under sealed orders, presumably there is no harm in publishing the same.

World's Most Powerful Fleet.

The fleet is under the supreme command of Admiral Sir George Callaghan, commander-in-chief of home fleets, and is the most powerful fleet in the world. It was by a most fortunate coincidence brought to the height of its efficiency for the recent inspection by His Majesty the King. It consists of the Commander-in-Chief's flagship H.M.S. Iron Duke with the attached ships H.M.S. Oak and H.M.S. Sapphire. The following four battle squadrons, namely, the first battle squadron, H.M.S. Marlborough, the flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir Lewis Bayly, commanding the squadron, H.M.S. St. Vincent second flagship, Rear Admiral Hugh Evans Thomas, other ships being the Collingwood, Colossus, Hercules, Neptune, Vanguard and Superb. Also attached are tahe light cruiser Bellona and the repair ship Cyclops. The second battle squadron comprises H. M.S. King George V., the flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir George Warrender, comanding the squadron; second flagship M.M.S. Orion, Rear-Admiral Sir R. Arbuthnot, other ships being the Adax, Audacious, Centurion, Conqueror, Monarch, Thunderer, with the light cruiser Boadicea. The third battle squadron is as follows: H. M. S. King Edward VII., flagship of Vice Admiral E. C. Bradford, commanding the squadron; H.M.S. Hibernia, second flagship, Rear-Admiral M. Browning, other ships being the Africa, Britannia, Commonwealth, Dominion, Hindustan, Zealandia, with the light cruiser Blanche. The fourth battle squadron is as follows: H M.S. Dreadnought, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir D. Gamble, commanding the squadron, other ships being the Ansenmon, Temorese, with the light cruiser Blonde.

Four Cruiser Squadrons.

There are four cruiser squadrons, namely, the first battle cruiser squadron, H.M.S. Lion, flagship of Rear-Admiral Beatty, other ships being the Queen Mary, Princess Royal, New Zealand; second cruiser squadron, H.M.S. Shannon, flagship of Rear Admiral Gough-Calthorpe, with the Achilles, Cochrane and Natal; third cruiser squadron, H.M.S. Antrim, flagship of Rear-Admiral Pakenham, with the Argyl and Devonshire, shire; first light cruiser squadron, Southampton and Birmingham.

Sailors Were at Theatre.

For months past the men of the Royal arsenal at Woolwich have been busy replenishing stores. Not for years past has so vast a supply of ammunition and other stores been ready for immediate issue. Stirring scenes were witnessed at Portland when the first fleet left. Large numbers of officers and men were at the Pavilion Theatre picture palace when the Commander-in-Chief's orders were announced from the stage that every man must be aboard by 10 o'clock. The excited audience rose from their seats as the officers and bluejackets left the theatre and cheered heartily, while the orchestra played "Rule Britannia."

There were similar scenes at other places of amusement. Thousands of people congregated about the pier, where some of the tearful farewells might almost have suggested that the whole fleet was going into action straight away. Ladies in evening dress were driven to the pier in taxis to wish their husbands and sweethearts good-bye. Some scenes were most affectionate, but apart from these feminine displays of emotion there was the wildest enthusiasm and excitement among the crowd, which cheered itself hoarse.

Second Fleet Fully Manned.

The second fleet is fully manned, the crews having been kept aboard since the King's inspection last week. The ships are all coaled and otherwise prepared for sea. Most of the ships of the third fleet are having their bunkers filled with coal. They have only reduced nucleus crews aboard, as the men of the two divisions of the fleet reserve were demobilized and paid off last week. Those of the intermediate class fleet reserve are not yet, however, demobilized, and they are still aboard the third fleet. All destroyers of the sixth Portsmouth flotilla are fully ready for sea. The naval correspondent of the Daily Telegraph gives the naval strength of the two European groups, namely, Germany, Italy, Austria, at 50 battleships, 71 cruisers, 130,500 personnel. Britain, France, Russia, 97 batleships, 154 cruisers, 264,000 personnel.

The correspondent says—"This suggests that the time is hardly favourable for Austria and her friends. They have engaged in great schemes of naval expansion which did not reach the point of culmination for five or six years. Owing to the increased number of conscripts and volunteers now under training, a larger proportion than ever before, the efficacy of their fleets for action has certainly not been increased in the past five or six years, as judged by any available means of computation. The British navy, which at least is as strong in torpedo craft as in battleships and cruisers, may be regarded as one of the great influences for peace."

Winston Churchill's Remark.

It is important at this moment of crisis to recall that Winston Churchill remarked on a famous occasion that we stand purely on the defensive. He said that it was inconceivable that we should make a surprise attack on Germany or any other power. For one thing we have no means of following up such an attack even if it were successful. The Daily Telegraph adds. "The British Navy exists in an atmosphere of detachment in a continent of great standing armies and vast fleets. It is a great instrument for peace amid many conflicting currents in international affairs. It saved Europe from the horrors of an Armageddon in the past. May it by its strength and efficiency once more assist in dispelling the shadow which to-day benumbs men's thoughts and overpowers their imaginations."

The walls of all the rooms of a new building at the University of Paris are lined with lead to make them impervious to emanations of radium, with which experiments are conducted.

HALLAM'S WEEKLY REPORT

Beefhides—Are firm and coming to market in fair supply, and are being absorbed at current prices. As the leather market is slow and draggy, tonners are showing a slight indifference to offerings, unless they show a very high percentage of short haired stock. City butcher hides, flat, 14c per lb.; country hides, flat, cured, 15 to 16c per lb; part cured, 14½ to 14¾c.

Calfskins — Hold their own, with light accumulations in the hands of the dealers. City skins, green, flat, 16c; country, cured, 17 to 19c; part cured, 17c, according to condition and take-off. Deacons or bob calfs, 80c to $1.20.

Horsehides—Are of better quality with heavier deliveries. City take off, $4.50 to $4.75; country take off, No. 1, $4.25 to $4.75; No. 2, $2.50 to $4.00.

Sheepskins—Are in easier demand owing to the easy wool market. City lambskins, pelts or shearlings, 50 to 70c; country lambskins or shearlings, 30 to 65c.

Wool—Is being taken at unchanged prices, although the market is slow and draggy, owing to the mills being well stocked for present needs. Washed combing fleece (coarse), 27 to 28c; washed clothing fleece (fine), 29 to 30c; washed rejections, (burry, chaffy, etc.), 23 to 24c: unwashed fleece combing (coarse), 18 to 20c; unwashed fleece clothing (fine), 20½ to 22c.

Tallow—Prices are easier, and stocks are accumulating. City rendered solid in barrels, 6½ to 6¼c; country stock, solid in barrels, No. 1, 6 to 6½c; No. 2, 5½ to 6c; cake, No. 1, 6¾ to 7c; No. 2, 5½ to 6¼c.

Horse Hair—Farmer or pedlar stock is coming to market in normal supply and is being absorbed at unchanged prices. Former pedlar stock, 30 to 40c.

Old Rubbers, Junk, Etc.—The rubber market is easier, and demand slow. The other lines are being absorbed at unchanged quotations. Rubber boots and shoes according to trim, 5½ to 6c; auto tires, 4 to 5c; bicycle tires, 2 to 4c; lead, heavy, 3¼ to 4c; tea lead, 3¼ to 3½c; brass, heavy, 9 to 10c; light, 6 to 7c; copper, heavy, 11 to 12c; light, 10 to 10½c; zinc, 2½ to 4c.

The Fur Market.

The majority of the raw furs are in the hands of European dealers, who report a very low market and prices materially lower than on year ago. Local manufacturers have made up their sample lines and are buying goods on a hand to mouth basis waiting for orders from the jobbers. Things are unusually quiet in the fur trade for this season of the year.

Can Britain Hold Aloof In Impending European Conflict?

The European fire spreads rapidly. It is clear that Germany is fully committed to back up Austria even to the extent of declaring war upon Russia should the great Slav power come to the rescue of the Servians, whose country is now being overrun by the armies of Austria. If Russia is attacked by Germany her alliance with France becomes operative, and the French are bound to come to the help of Russia by launching their armies into Alsace-Lorraine. The moves up to this point are: Austria attacks Servia; Russia defends Servia by attacking Austria; Germany defends Austria by invading Russia; France defends Russia by attacking Germany; Italy, the third power of the Triple Alliance, comes to the aid of Germany and Austria by attacking France.

Thus far the moves in this horrible war game resulting from the complicated Triple Alliance and Triple Entente may be predicated. What o the move that remains in doubt? Will Britain redress the balance by coming to the aid of France against Germany and Italy? So far as the facts are known there is no binding obligation to do so, unless Germany in making war upon France, should violate the neutrality of Belgium. But while there may be no treaty requiring Britain to intervene, the law of self-preservation is greater than any treaty. If Germany, Austria, and Italy crush and dismember France and Russia, Britain's turn will come later. It is this the Times rontemplates in its weighty editorial of yesterday. "If," says The Times, "France is menaced, or the safety of the Belgian frontier, which we guaranteed with France and Russia, we shall know how to act. We can no more afford to see France crushed by Germany or the balance of power upset against France than Germany can afford to see Austria-Hungary crushed by Russia. Upon that issue should it have to be determined by arms, our friends and our enemies will find that we think and act with one accord."

The danger therefore that Britain will soon be at war with great European powers for the first time since the Crimean war, sixty years ago, and the second time only since she helped to crush Napoleon on the field of Waterloo a century ago, is very great. A war in which the six great powers of Europe would all be lined up on one side or the other would be Armageddon in very truth, and would result in slaughter and devastation upon a scale far vaster than that brought upon the world by the insatiable ambition of the great Corsican.

We may be sure that Britain will not lightly embroil herself in such a titanic struggle, and that only the imperative necessity of preventing the allied Germanic powers from bestriding the world like a Colossus, and beating down all opposition with the "mailed fist" will bring about British intervention. That the horrors of war even in the event of Britain's participation will be brought home to the people of the British Empire is not probable. An occasional raiding German cruiser may evade the British blockade and capture and sink British merchant ships or bombard British ports, but no hostile force will be able to make any real lodgment on British soil.

On this side of the Atlantic we may hope for comparative immunity, even from raiding visitors, but it is clearly the duty of the Dominion Government to mobilize in the vicinity of Halifax and Quebec a large enough force to beat off landing parties from small hostile squadrons. What further active measures may be required must be taken later, but Canada's first duty in default of a fleet for the defence of her coasts is to take all necessary steps by means of a mobile field force to prevent landings. The clouds may pass without breaking, but if Britain finds that she cannot stand aloof, without running terrible risk of destruction Canada must do her part as an integral portion of the Empire, and assuredly must discharge the imperative first duty of self-defence. When Britain is at war, Canada is at war.—Globe.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

The Triumphal Entry. Mark xi:1-11.

Golden Text — Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee. Zech. ix:9.

1. Verses 1-2—How did Jesus know that the colt was there?

2. Have there been other clairvoyants than Jesus, and does this power necessarily imply goodness or spirituality? Why?

3. What right had Jesus to command this colt to be brought to him?

4. Did Jesus have, while in the flesh, any more right to take the property of another without consent than any other man?

5. Why would you say, or not, that God has an absolute right to the property of every man?

6. Verse 3—Must we, or not, and why, even in thought, give God the right to send us into another man's stable to take out his horse?

7. Is it inconceivable or not, and why, that God will ever tell any person to do wrong

8. If God sends us to get something that belongs to another, why may we be sure that the owner will be glad to let us have it?

9. Verses 4-6 — God in the Bible, and frequently by His spirit, tells us what we shall find at certain periods and places. Is it safe for us to absolutely rest in these promises, and why?

10. God is constantly making demands upon us for our property, our time, our families. What is the extent of our obligation and our privilege to gladly acquiesce?

11. What did the owner of this colt probably get for loaning it to Jesus?

12. Verse 7—Why did Jesus choose to ride to Jerusalem on an ass?

13. What was Jesus' purpose in going to Jerusalem at this time?

14. Verses 8-10—Why did the people show Jesus such kingly honours, and why did Jesus permit it, seeing that he had previously forbidden them to proclaim him as the Messiah?

15. To what extent were the people right in their expectations concerning Christ, and to what extent, wrong?

16. What constituted Christ's triumph in His march into Jerusalem?

17. What other events transpired in connection with this triumphal entry, that are mentioned elsewhere?

18. Verse 11—What did Jesus do in the temple that day?

19. Why did Jesus go to Bethany that night?

20. What part did friendship play in the experience of Jesus?

DOCTOR IS FOUND GUILTY

C. K. Robinson Held To Blame For Death of Miss Yorke

TAMWORTH, Ont., July 31—That Blanche Lillian Yorke came to her death on the night of July 8 as the result of an illegal operation performed by Dr. C. K. Robinson, is the substance of the verdict returned by the coroner's jury at the close of the inquest yesterday. According to the evidence, the callousness exhibited by Robinson after the death of the girl was remarkable. For eight days he slept and ate in the house with the remains, at the same time questioning the girl's friends and relatives as to her whereabouts, and even assisting in the searches for her, so as to divert suspicion from himself.

According to Dingman Floyd's evidence Dr. Robinson told him that he had not operated on Blanche Yorke, "because it would take too long to do it." He was treating her for stomach trouble.

Mrs. Thompson, who occasionally did washing for Dr. Robinson, swore that one Thursday evening the doctor brought her two blood-soaked sheets, one flannel and the other cotton. The sheets were wet and heavy, as if an attempt had been made to wash them.

High Constable Van Koughnet, who accompanied Detective Miller in his investigations, said Robinson told them when they questioned him that Miss Yorke had been in his office only twenty minutes. Later on he admitted that she had been "on the slab for an hour and a half." He described their search of the house and declared there was nothing suspicious to be found there at that time. The ashes had been removed from the furnace, but no buttons or burned clothing were in it.

When asked by the crown attorney if he knew Dr. Robinson had been treating Miss Yorke, Daniel McGregor, her fiance, admitted she had told him so.

"Did she say anything about paying the doctor? Did you directly or indirectly remunerate him for his services?" was the next question, to which he answered "No."

Saw Dr. Robinson on 16th.

KINGSTON, July 31. — A young lady residing on Princess street, a relative of Dr. C. K. Robinson, charged with a serious crime at Tamworth, Ont., made a definite statement about his being in Kingston on July 16th. She was absolutely positive she saw him go aboard the steamer America on Thursday, July 16th.

She could not recall how he was dressed, as she merely spoke to him when passing, and did not ask or learn where he was going. He was alone so far as she knew when he went aboard.

Canadian Grocer Says War Will Seriously Affect Prices

The grocery situation, and the probable effect a general war would have on grocery markets, is dealt with as follows in this week's issue of Canadian Grocer:

Toronto, July 30, 1914

The declaration of war on Servia on the part of Austria-Hungary at once raises several factors which should almost immediately have their effect in the grocery markets, and at the same time brings contingencies into sight, the extent of which can only be surmised in proportion to the possibilities of other countries being involved in a conflict which may ravage Europe.

With the war lasting any length of time there is sure to be interference with the prune crop of Bosnia, and also American bean shipments, while in Austria and other countries the call to arms will undoubtedly take from the best fields labourers required in the sugar harvest. Should the conflict not be confined to these two countries, then the whole of the Mediterranean export fruits may suffer, as well as nuts, figs, etc.

Then the direct effect of the war is likely to be of less importance than the general world influence in increasing the cost of food products. So closely are the sources of supply related to one another at the present time that there is not only the difficulty of delay in deliveries to be figured on, but the advance over other markets, which will almost instantly take effect. Should Russia step in and the other great powers become involved, there is no foreseeing where th influence may end. The demoralization of the stock markets on the announcement of war may be taken as an indication of what may be looked for later in other markets should the fears of which evidence has already been given prove to have solid foundation. We trust, however, such will not be the case.

Millers are not looking for any important change in the flour situation for the immediate present, although wheat prices are stiffening. Should the powers become seriously involved in the trouble, it would be another matter altogether, and prices could be expected to soar to almost any height. So far as Canada is concerned, the prices would be chiefly influenced if importing countries became concerned in the conflict.

Just now the retail and wholesale trade is awaiting with interest the opening prices of canned peas. Late reports indicate that while considerable damage has been done by drought, the pea fly, the army worm and other troublesome insects, there have been many good fields of peas harvested. It is too common knowledge among the trade that there has been a considerable hold-over on peas, but nevertheless, the opening prices will be higher than a year ago, when the opening price for standards was 82 1-2 cents per dozen. Prospects however, are for a heavy pack of tomatoes as the vines are looking quite prosperous. Canners report the corn outlook only fair, and since corn has been pretty well sold out, or will be when the new pack arrives, opening prices on it cannot be expected to be any lower than last year.

On the whole, jobbers report business fair. All trust that the disturbing influences in the Old World will be brought to a speedy close.

DISPUTES WERE PUT ASIDE

War Crisis Results In Shelving of Britain's Domestic Differences.

LONDON, July 31.—The political forces of the country also are almost mobilized solidly, presenting, in Premier Asquith's words to the House of Commons yesterday, "a united front."

The remarkable sight was witnessed yesterday of Premier Asquith and Andrew Bonar Law, leader of the Opposition, who a few days ago were on terms of personal as well as political hostility, driving in the same car for a consultation with Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Sir Edward reported on the war outlook in the Commons yesterday.

Not only the Home Rule question but all measures likely to arouse party or international hostilities have been sidetracked. They include the naval vote, which inevitably excites discussion of Germany's policy, and the vote for Imperial defence. Nevertheless, there is a strong, although apparently a minority feeling, that Great Britain should maintain neutrality whatever comes, and refuse to be drawn into the quarrels of the continental powers.

The peace section of the Liberal party, which through past years of strained relations with Germany, has worked for reconciliation, and which often has been called "the little Englanders," is taking a strong stand against the war.

The Labor party also opposes war unitedly. Its members in the House of Commons yesterday adopted a resolution praising Sir Edward Grey for his attempts at mediation, and saying: "The Labor party hopes that on no account will the country be dragged into a European conflict, in which, as the Prime Minister has stated, we have no direct or indirect interest." The resolution calls upon all the labor organizations to oppose the war.

Premier Asquith also spoke of the extreme gravity of the situation. When announcing to the House of Commons the postponement of the second reading of the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule Bill, he said: "Under the existing conditions it was agreed on both sides of the House that purely domestic matters should be laid aside for the moment."

To remove old varnish from furniture take thre tablespoonfuls of baking soda and put it in a quart of water, and apply it with a rough cloth.

For cleaning a copper kettle the following is excellent: First rub the surface with lemon skin and salt; when this is finished wipe the surface quicqly and rub dry with a chamois skin.

DEPUTATION AT OTTAWA

Steps Urged To Prevent Unemployment During Winter.

OTTAWA, July 31.—A deputation of the Social Service Committee, the Builders' Exchange, Trade and Labor Council, the City Council and other local bodies waited on the Government yesterday afternoon strongly to urge that active steps be taken at once to relieve the present unemployment in various parts of the Dominion and to prevent worse conditions during the winter or next year. The Cabinet Ministers present were: Hon. C. J. Doherty, Hon. T. W. Crothers, Hon. J. D. Hazen, Hon. J. D. Reid and Hon. W. B. Nantel.

The Government was asked to establish labor bureaus in all the principal centres and also to find employment, through public work or otherwise, for the men now idle.

Mr. Doherty, acting Premier, said the Government was heartily in sympathy with the desires of the deputation, and would do whatever it could, consistent with reasonable economy, to provide the largest possible amount of employment during the coming year.

KILLED IN AN AUTO ACCIDENT

T. B. Souvie, of North Bay, Half-Brother of W. McCracken, of This City

The sad intelligence reached Mr. W. McCracken of the Gordon-Davies Co. this morning, that his half-brother, T. B. Souvie, of North Bay, was killed in an auto accident yesterday. No particulars of the sad event have been received except that the accident occurred at Moore Lake, near Pembroke. The deceased was about 56 years of age. He leaves a wife, a son, and daughter, and other relatives to mourn his sudden demise. Only a few weks ago the deceased and his family were visiting with Mr. McCracken, in this City.

Sentenced To One Year

Arthur S. Taylor, also charged with vagrancy, offered to leave for Port Hope if the Court would discharge him. His case was adjourned in order to give him the opportunity of carrying his promise into effect.

Allan Kilbourne, who has only been three days out of gaol, pleaded not guilty to a charge of drunkenness. He was allowed to go on promising to leave the town. A like privilege was allowed Thos. Clarry, of Indian River, charged with the same offence.

Lena Van Norman, a somewhat prominent figure in Police Court circles, again appeared before the Police Magistrate this morning. It was only a short time ago that she completed a six months' stay at the Salvation Army Home in Toronto.

Adj. McElhinny said that since her release from the home she had been in trouble repeatedly. Mrs. McElhinny had done all in her power to reform her, but to no avail. In fact he did not think the girl was trying very much to reform.

Lena was sent to the Toronto Mercer Reformatory for a period of one year.

Cruelty to Animals.

John Robinson, charged with cruelty to animals, failed to appear. Dr. Blanchard testified that he examined Robinson's horse and found that it was suffering apparently from want of food. One of its eyes was badly lacerated. Judgment was withheld until Robinson should appear, the Chief remarking that he had heard that the horse had been sold.

Vagrants Remanded.

Claude Stacey, of the Barnardo Home, Toronto, ran away from the farmer with whom he was working. His employer, styling him as a bad boy, now refuses to take him back. Stacey was remanded until Tuesday.

Rumbling noises in hot water boilers just after gas heaters are lighted, sometimes startling in their intensity, are due to the cold water rushing up from below to displace the expanded water above.

GERMANY HAS A POWERFUL AIR FLEET

Including dirigibles owned by private firms or individuals, but available for the Government use in time of war, Germany now has 34 airships available, Austria nine and Italy seven. Of the German flyers about half are the large and the very fast Zeppelin or Schuette-Lanz armoured vessels, which form the most powerful air fleet in the world. France has 24 airships, Russia 11, and England four, but these are all unarmoured, very much smaller and slower than the Zeppelin ships.

The Zeppelins, to be sure, have met with accidents of late which show that they are subject to damage by storm or explosions. But in spite of this there can be no doubt that they are the most powerful airships now aloft.

It has been proved that several hundred pounds of explosives can be dropped from one of the large dirigibles without endangering its equilibrium. Guns of fairly heavy calibre are now mounted on almost all of them, and they have at times attained a great speed. Their large size makes them easy targets, and it is a question how far the minute division of the gas chambers into compartments would neutralize the effect of high explosive shells, but their armour is proof against rifle fire.

"COUNT DISCOUNT" IS STILL CUTTING AND SLASHING

"The Count" is a hero of many conflicts. He will graphically show you how he cuts and slashes in contest.

He will continue to do so until he has a clear field before him. That is until he has cleared this stock away to a minimum. And "Count Discount" is cutting still deeper this week. Further reductions is what we mean. Taking broken lines from better grades and putting them into the next lower priced lot. You see, we never allow ourselves, if it can in any way be prevented, to advertise a single thing that we cannot deliver. In some of our lines the tremendous selling has driven out certain sizes from certain lines. Supposing you come in and ask for a size 36 from our $20 line, as advertised, and we didn't have it. That's bad business. We won't let it happen here. So what do we do? We are filling in from better goods at each price so as to make complete range of sizes in every line. That is giving you still greater values than ever in every line in the house; not only in Suits and Top Coats but also in Shirts, Hats, Boys' Wear and other things where lines have become broken--that is pretty much everything because the selling has been tremendous here this past week and the effect of "Count Discount's" onslaught on prices has been telling. Get these better values and greater savings before "Count Discount" is forced to retire for want of material to work on.

PETES WON FIRST GAME EASILY HAMS' DEFENCE WAS FULL OF HOLES

Booster Day Attraction Captured by the Petes 6 to 2 With the Visitors Never in the Hunt—Nine Errors by the Hamilton Team

TRACEY'S GOOD PITCHING

Yesterday was Boosters' Day at Riverside Park, but the Hams took the s out and turned the afternoon into Boosters' Day. As a result the Petes found their first gam[illegible] the series pretty soft picking, winning easily by 6 runs to 2. The Athletics gave the worst exhibition of fielding that has been seen here this season, the infield contributing no less than nine errors. They gummed up play after play, and their throwing in particular was very bad.

With Tracey twirling steady, effective ball, and the Petes fielding accurately behind him, there was only one answer. Tracey allowed the Hams only five hits, and was never in much danger, the visitors going hitless until the fifth. The homesters showed strength on the defensive, Fox and King handling twenty-three chances with only one skip. Fox's work was decidedly clever and he looks better every day in the short field position. The fielding of he homesters was in decided contrast to the lurid exhibition of the visitors.

Clements, who held the Petes to four hits and one run at Hamilton this week pitched good ball for the Hams yesterday, but had no chance with the support behind him. No team seen here this season has looked quite as bad as the Athletics did yesterday, the team making more errors in six innings yesterday than both Toronto and Peterborough did in the first three games of the week.

Booster Day was a success, about 650 fans turning out for the occasion, a very good attendance in the face of the counter attractions.

First Innings.

Hamilton—Cunningham hoisted to Byrne. Corns flied to Fox. Pendry lifted to Welsh.—No hits, runs, or errors.

Peterborough — Blount singled to short; Welsh popped to Cunningham. Dolan cracked a liner into McGroarty's hands, Blount going to second when McGroarty threw high to first, trying to complete a double. Rooney smashed a bounder at Ivers and was safe, but Blount was out at the plate trying to score on the play.—No runs, one hit, two errors.

Second Innings.

Hamilton—Ivers flied to Blount, White grounded to King, Kelly caught McGroarty's foul against the stand. No hits, runs or errors.

Peterborough—Byrne singled over second, King forced him, Pendry to Cunningham. Fox died on a smash to Ivers, King going to second. Kelly hit to Pendry, who tagged King on the line. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Hamilton—Baldwin grounded to Fox, Fisher popped to Dolan, Clements hoisted to Fox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Tracey lifted to Fisher. Blount flied to Cunningham, Welsh lined to McGroarty. No runs, hits or errors.

Fourth Innings.

Hamilton—Welsh made a fine catch of Cunningham's smash to left. Corns grounded to King, a fast play by the second-baseman. Pendry bounded to Fox. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Dolan died on a hard one to Cunningham. Rooney was safe when Clements dropped Ivers' throw. Byrne grounded to McGroarty, Rooney going to second. King tripled to right, scoring Rooney and counting when Fisher let Baldwin's throw get away from him. Fox walked, and was out stealing, Fisher to Cunningham. Two runs, one hit, two errors.

Fifth Innings.

Hamilton—Ivers singled through Byrne. White forced him, Fox to King. On the hit and run McGroarty singled to right, sending White to third. Baldwin was safe on Fox's fumble, White scoring. Fisher forced Baldwin, King to Fox. Clements forced Fisher, King to Fox. One run, two hits, one error.

Peterborough—Kelly laid down a bunt which he had beaten out, but Clements threw to first. Kelly going to second when he ball hit him. Tracey bunted to Clements, who tried for Kelly at third, but Pendry lost the throw, Kelly scoring. Blount sacrificed. Welsh was out, McGroarty to Ivers, a close decision at first. Dolan singled to centre, scoring Tracey. Dolan was safe at second when McGroarty dropped Fisher's throw. Dolan went to third on a wild pitch. Rooney walked, and stole second. Corns grabbed Byrne's fly. Two runs, two hits, three errors.

Sixth Innings.

Hamilton—Cunningham grounded to King. Corns rolled to Fox. Pendry flied to Rooney. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—King flied to Corns. Fox grounded to Ivers. Kelly was safe on McGroarty's wide toss. Tracey fanned. No runs or hits, one error.

Seventh Innings.

Hamilton—Ivers grounded to King. White beat out a swinging bunt. McGroarty hit into a double play, Fox to King to Dolan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount lifted to White. Welsh beat out a slow one to Pendry. Dolan drove a long one to Corns. Welsh stole second, and then third, Fisher throwing wide on both occasions. Rooney walked. On an attempted double steal Rooney was out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Innings.

Hamilton—Baldwin flied to Blount. Fisher grounded to Tracey. Clements died the same way. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough—Byrne was out on a grounder to McGroarty, the decision was a very close one. King was safe when Ivers juggled McGroarty's throw. King stole second. Fox doubled along the first-base line, scoring King. Kelly fanned. Tracey singled through short, scoring Fox. Blount flied to McGroarty. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Ninth Innings.

Hamilton — Cunningham singled through short. Corns forced him, King to Fox. Pendry forced Corns, the same way. Ivers walked. White doubled along the first-base line, the ball striking the base. Pendry scored on the play. McGroarty fanned. One run, two hits, no errors.

NEMO NASHER FOR BRANTFORD

BRANTFORD, July 30.—Manager "Rube" Deneau received word to-day from Sid Nasher, infielder of the Fall River, New England League, team, who has been purchased from that team by the Brants, that he accepted terms and would report immediately. It is expected that Nasher, who has been hitting consistently over .300, will arrive in he city by Saturday.

Local fans will remember Nemo Nasher, who played third-base and shortstop for the Petes two years ago.

BASEBALL

Mr. J. L. McIntyre, Ontario representative of S. Davis and Sons, Limited, the Montreal cigar manufacturers, who put up the box of "Perfection" wollops, i.e., home runs, blew into town Wednesday, strange to say, on the day that Clysdale was called upon to hand over the first box of "Perfections" donated by his firm, on account of short-stop Fox walloping the pill into the bushes for a homer in the last game with the Toronto Beavers. Mr. McIntyre, who makes his headquarters in Ottawa, was surprised that the Petes had not made more circuit clouts up to date, but admits Riverside Park is one of the hardest, if not the hardest, in the league, on which to make a homer.

The Ottawas, to date, have done their best to make the Davis people take the "gold cure," having made them come over with about a dozen boxes of "Perfections," most of which were earned by the champions in their Sunday games at Dupuis Park, Hull, where the left field fence is short and a homer is only equal to a three-bagger at Riverside. Mr. McIntyre remarked that the Ottawa fans have great respect for the Petes, and are very much disappointed at not being able to get our star twirler, Schettler, who they consider the best in the Canadian League. They say with Louie wearing an Ottawa uniform there would be nothing to it but the hoisting of a third pennant in the Dominion Capital, but admit Peterborough would be very foolish to let their star get away from them.

PALMERO AND SULLIVAN FOR TORONTO BEAVERS

TORONTO, July 31.—The Beavers are not yet out of the race for the Canadian League pennant, and, moreover, they will take some beating before the championship is decided. The latest move on the part of the Beaver management is to secure Pitcher Palmero from the Leafs, and this young Cuban southpaw, along with Outfielder Sullivan, will join the Beavers to-day at Brantford.

President McCaffery and Manager Kelley, of the Leafs, will go to Brantford this morning and look over the Beavers in action this afternoon, when Auld is slated to pitch. President McCaffery has been offered $2,500 for Outfielder Hunt, of the Beavers, but their is no chance of the offer being accepted.

Outfielder Gadsby, who has been with the Beavers a short time, and Pitcher Roberts have been released. More new players are expected within the next week.

CANADIAN LEAGUE NOTES

Hamilton Herald:

Jimmy Gilhooley is indefinitely suspended.

President A. L. Garthwaite of the Hamilton Baseball Club, received word to-day from Secretary Farrell, of the National Association of minor leagues to the effect that the evidence offered against Gilhooley was quite sufficient to keep him in civilian clothes for about as long as the local club wished.

It is also understood that Gilhooley is to be fined heavily, all the money that would ordinarily have been due him being kept from him. The little fellow is certainly the loser.

Hamilton Herald:

To-day the Athletics play in Peterborough and on Monday they will slip into Ottawa. The Senators are going strong again and making a great fight with the Cockneys. Hamilton will have to do better than ever before to take this series. Indeed it is a pretty tough road trip that the locals are encountering for Peterborough also seems to have their measure.

ANOTHER BIG BOOSTER DAY AT RIVERSIDE PARK

To-morrow will be the second Booster Day for the Peterborough Ball Club, and the occasion will give the employees of the local factories a chance to help the club along. It will be the last home appearance of the Petes until Civic Holiday, and with the homeaters playing their present brand of ball, the biggest Saturday crowd of the season should be on hand. As an added attraction an endeavour is being made for a matched race between Manager Curly Blount of the Petes, and Bobby Kerr, the well-known sprinter, and secretary of the Hamilton Ball Club. A brush between the two would be well worth seeing.

The usual admission, 25c, will be charged at the gate, and the fans do not have to buy grandstand seats unless they wish. To-morrow's game will be called at 3 o'clock sharp.

1914 WILL PROVE THE MOST DISASTROUS YEAR IN HISTORY OF BASEBALL

With the season more than half over, it seems a certainty that the majority of the magnates in the National, American and Federal leagues will suffer losses that may reach a total of $2,000,000, while the minor league losses will add probably $500,000 to $750,000 to that sum.

1914 will be written on the pages as the most disastrous year in the history of the national game, due to small attendance, huge salaries and many posponed games.

In the National league, only the Giants seem to have made money up to this writing, and their earnings so far are said to be only half of those for the same period in the past three years.

If the Cubs can keep up their present pace and act as runners-up for the leaders, they may get through the season with only a small loss, or may even break a few thousand dollars ahead of the game. This condition was not thought possible six weeks ago, because the Cubs were in a rut and the Windy City fans had declared a boycott on them. But since they have performed a "comeback," the fans are flocking to see the Chicago athletes in action again.

Can Hardly Escape.

Despite the game fight being made by the Cardinals and their high position in the race during the first three months, it is unlikely that they will escape without a loss. But it will be less than in other years, and much less than the Cardinal owners expected when the Feds invaded the town.

The Reds drew well when they were considerably among those present, but since they slumped, the attendance, both at home and abroad, has been small, and Garry Herrmann's band looks to lose $85,000 or so.

The Pirates made money earlier in the year, but since the slump, the fans have quit paying money to look them over, and Barney Dreyfuss may have to suffer a $90,000 loss for this year. The Dodgers will be certain losers. The total may reach $100,000. They haven't been in the race from the outset, have not drawn well either at home or on the road, and the payroll is top-heavy.

The Boston Braves are another team that has a top-heavy payroll, and whose receipts have been pitifully small from the outset of the season. The Hub City fans expected much from the Braves—went so far as to hope they would mix in the world series games. But the Braves got away to a miserable start and they can't seem to hit their stride.

The Phillies have been doing better in an attendance way than was looked for at the beginning of the season, when the Feds seemed to have wrecked their club. But even at that the Phillies will do well if they quit the season under a $40,000 loss. The home town fans attended in fairly large numbers when the season first opened and the Phillies showed surprising form, but since the slump it's a different story.

In the American League the Naps will suffer most. The Cleveland fans have quit them cold. The Naps are not drawing on the road, and the combination of miserable attendances and huge salaries may set the Nap owners back $150,000.

The Yankees also will be certain losers, but they may escape with $50,000 or 975,000 owing o the fact that they drew fairly well early in the season, and that no matter what their position in the race, they usually can draw a mid-week crowd of from 8,000 to 9,000 at home. That's the fine feature of being in a town where there are so many transient fans.

The closeness of the race among theo ther si teams in the league may cause two or three of the first six teams to escape with only a small loss. Earlier in the year it looked as if the Browns, Red Sox and White Sox were due for losses of from $50,000 to $75,000 each owing to Federal competition in Chicago and St. Louis, and he fact that the Boston ians seemed to be out of he fight.

But the persistence with which the Browns and White Sox keep near the top, and the great spurt of the Red Sox has increased the recent attendance fo such a point that the early losses may be partially overcome.

Connie Mack's force has been leading nearly all the way, but Connie's bank account won't be fattened much. The fans in Philadelphia seem apathetic. The attendance this year at the home games has averaged less than for the last four years, and on the road the Athletics are not drawing too well. The Athletics will make money, but it won't be much.

The Tigers and Senators, if they can keep in the fight, will clear a little on the season—probably $60,000 for each. Both have big payrolls this year, and in both towns the fans are not coming out in as great numbers as they did in other years when the teams were in the fight.

Sure Loss For Feds.

In the Federal League it seems certain that each club will lose money. No individual estimate can be made but it looks as if the collective loss to eight clubs will be in the neighbourhood of $700,000.

The estimate is arrived at in this way. The Feds have about 280 men under contract. Some of these men are getting salaries from $5,000 to $12,000 a year. But many of the others—recruits — are drawing only around $1,800 to $2,400, making $2,500 the average salary for all the players, a rather high average. It means that the magnates will have to pay out $875,000 in salaries. Adding to this another $875,000 to cover the cost of travelling expenses, interest on the investment in stands, salaries of officers, etc., it brings the total outlay up to $1,550,000.

The Feds play 154 games. That means four combats each day for 154 days or 616 games during the season. Allowing 2,50 as the paid attendance for each of these games it would bring the total attendance to 1,500,000. With the average paid attendance at 50 cents it would mean that the Feds would take in through the gate about $770,000 during the year, giving the whole league a net loss of $780,000, or about $100,000 each.

These figures may do a certain injustice to the Federal League, because they may show the outlay larger than it really is and the receipts smaller. But they are given from the best estimates available.

Some of the clubs in the Federal League will lose more than others. The Kansas City, Pittsburg, Indianapolis and S. Louis backers just now seem destined to suffer larger losses than the others. The losses in the other four cities will not be large.

JAPANESE MONEY.

Yens, Sens and Rins Complete Their Simple Currency System.

The Japanese currency system is very simple and is based upon a gold basis. The unit of value is a yen. This equals 99 cents in gold, according to our United States values. One yen is divided into 100 sen. Each of the latter is worth just one half of an American cent. The Japanese yen is the equivalent of 10 rin, and the smallest Japanese coin consists of a five rin piece, the equivalent of one-quarter of an American penny.

The currency media is composed of paper notes, silver, nickel and copper. The Japs have their paper money in one, five, ten yen notes and upward. The silver money comes in ten, twenty and fifty sen pieces. The smallest nickel piece is valued at 5 sen. Then come the copper coins. These are valued at 2 sen, 1 sen and 5 rin.

This is the substance of the entire currency system in Japan when you step into a money changer's to procure the coin of the realm. But you do not always obtain the equivalent in values for your American currency. The various seaport towns swarm with Chinese money changers. These Mongolian financiers deduct a rebate of from 1 to 2 per cent for every $10 in American money exchanged. When you travel in the interior localities of Japan, away from the beaten track of tourist traffic, you will be compelled to pay even a higher rate of exchange, as the Jap merchants refuse to accept foreign coin in exchange for their wares unless they are easily accessible to some nearby seaport town.

The Jap nickel, or five sen piece, will buy five or six times as much for a Jap in his own country as the same value of currency would buy for an American home in the United States. The simplicity of the native currency system goes hand in hand with the frugality and the wise economies of these quaint, active little people.—Philadelphia North American.

Had a Sixth Sense.

A medical correspondent has had brought to his notice the remarkable case of a woman possessing an extraordinary sixth sense in regard to spiders. She could, the writer records, detect the presence of a spider in any room she happened to be living in without having seen the insect or without having any reason to suppose that it was there. The discovery was accompanied by violent sickness, malaise and even debility, but all this passed away on the spider being caught and removed from the room.—London Times.

The Largest Earth Dam.

A notable engineering structure in the drainage basin of the Missouri river is the Belle Fourche dam, erected across the river of the same name in South Dakota by the government to impound water for irrigation. This dam is an earth embankment 155 feet high and one and one-fifth miles long, containing 1,600,000 cubic yards of earth fill. This is the largest earth dam in existence.—Argonaut.

The Name "Tennis."

Numerous suggestions have been put forward for the derivation of the word "tennis." Perhaps the most likely is that it is an anglicized form of "tenez" ("catch it"), a term frequently used by the French in their ancient game of jeu de paume or palm play.

Created World's Signal Record.

Word from Petawawa announces that the world's record for signal transmission has been broken by the telegraph detachment of the Electrical Engineers.

The world's record last year was 2 minute 35 seconds, and this is reduced to 1 minute 25 seconds.

The company is composed of Lieut. Dawe, Sergt. E. E. Hodgson, Corpls. Cartwright, Diplock, T. W. Jeffreys, H. Jeffreys, Hott, Stevens, J. H. Bishing and E. Bamlac.

MADELENE McCALLUM.

A Pasedena exchange has the following in regard to the death of Madelene McCallum, formerly of Peterborough:

Madelene McCallum, 19-year-old daughter of Mrs. Alma McCallum, 456 Summit Avenue, was born in Canada, and came to Pasadena ten years ago with her father, mother, and sister Jean.

Madalene graduated from the public schools here, and had just three months more of school before her class graduated from the high school. Her classmates in the English department each sent her a letter and many flowers. They used to call her "The Ray of Sunshine" for wherever she went she seemed to scatter sunshine and joy. She was a favourite with all.

Her English teacher said it was a pleasure to teach one so responsive, gentle and courteous. She sent her the Item and a large basket of flowers when the class graduated in June with regret that Madalene could not finish her term. During her short illness Madalene received many beautiful flowers and letters.

Near her home the neighbours are deeply grieved over the loss of such a sweet, beautiful life being taken from thir midst, for to know her was to love her.

Madalene was a member of the First Presbyterian Church and a member of its Sunday School.

We know she has just passed on a little soon to join her father and brother and await the coming of her mother and sister Jean, who feel that there is even more to live for, to join her where there is no more sorrow.

THOS. P. ATTRILL.

The death occurred last evening of Thos. P. Attrill of 473 Water Street. The deceased, who was 86 years of age, was born in Montreal. He received his naval education in England, and at the time of his retirement was paymaster. He was a caller of considerable skill.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at the Little Lake cemetery.

PICKPOCKET AT WORK AT LINDSAY

Evidently pickpockets were at work yesterday during the band contest at Lindsay. A lady passenger was heard to remark that during the journey from Toronto to Peterborough she lost her purse which contained seven dollars. Chief Short, of Lindsay, had his men on the lookout for thieves, but no word has reached Peterborough that any arrests had been made.

ONE OF IRVING'S POSES.

His Role of Defeated Candidate in Labouchere's Borough.

An amusing episode of the Middlesex elections of 1885 was the error that the supporters of Henry Labouchere made in taking Henry Irving for their defeated candidate. The story is told by Mr. Algar Labouchere Thorold in his "Life of Henry Labouchere," as Mr. Labouchere himself narrated it:

"I was the defeated candidate for Middlesex. Those were the days of huntings and election displays, and it was the fashion for each candidate to go down to Brentford in a carriage and four to thank his supporters. On the morning of the day when I had to perform this function, Irving called upon me, and I invited him to accompany me. Down we drove. I made an inaudible speech to a noisy mob, and we re-entered our carriage to return to London.

"In a large constituency like Middlesex few know the candidates by sight. Irving felt it his duty to assume an attitude of importance. He folded his arms, pressed his hat over his brows, and was every inch the baffled politician—defeated, and, yet eternally resigned to his fate. In this character he was so impressive that the crowd came to the conclusion that he was the defeated candidate.

"So vociferous and so solemnly dignified did he look that they were overcome with emotion, and to show their sympathy they took the horses out of the carriage and dragged it back to London. When they left us I got up to thank them, but this did not disturb the illusion. 'Poor fellow,' I heard them say as they looked at Irving, 'his feelings are too much for him!' and they patted him on the back, shook hands with him and thanked him."

JAPAN MAY FIGHT ON BEHALF OF LATE ENEMIES

Despatch From Tokio Draws Attention to Queer Coincidence

The despatch from Tokio to-day intimating that in case Britain is forced to take sides in a great European struggle, Japan will be found fighting on behalf of Russia, her erstwhile enemy, and assisting Britain, Japan's ally, draws attention to the queer fact that nearly every nation in the Triple Alliance and Triple Entente at one time or another has fought against the other members of the combination to which it belongs. For instance, Britain, Russia and France form one combination, yet it is not long since Britain regarded Russia as her greatest enemy, and Rudyard Kipling wrote about the "Bear that walks like a Man." In the Crimean War, Britain's ally against Russia was France. In the great Napoleonic wars, Russia, with the rest of Europe, was pitted against France. But even more traditional was the enmity between France and Britain, and on a multitude of occasions French frigates and French battalions struggled against British.

On the side of the Triple Alliance somewhat similar historical inconsistencies can be found. In the middle of the last century and before that time, Prussia and Austria battled for supremacy in Germany, until Bismark finally brought victory to Prussia. Then, to prevent the elimination of a buffer state between herself and Russia, Prussia, at the suggestion of the Man of Blood and Iron, forced the Triple Alliance, to which Italy became a party. Austria, for generations held some of the northern provinces of Italy, and there was much bad blood, and there still is some, between the two peoples.

Another oddity is that Italy, a partner in the Triple Alliance, is a very good friend of Britain, a member of the Triple Entente, and her natural ally. Italy is doing her best to prevent a general conflagration in Europe, and as she would be very vulnerable to attack by French and British fleets, it is possible that she will refuse to make common cause with Austria and Germany.

Still another peculiar fact is that back in the days of Marie Theresa, England espoused the cause of Austria against a number of nations, and later gave aid to Frederick the Great of Prussia against France, Austria and Russia.

So that it will be seen that the soldiers of the nations now in danger of collision, have tested one another's mettle in days gone by, both as friends and as foes. And, as on other occasions, changes in the relative strength of nations may transform the friends of to-day into the foes of to-morrow, and the foes of to-day into the friends of to-morrow. Stranger things have happened than that the future shall reveal Britain and Germany as allies. But there seems no prospect of that till reverses in the field shall have curbed the power of the great Teutonic nation.

PREVENTS FOUR DIVORCES.

Chicago Bureau Succeeds from the Start—Judge's Advice.

CHICAGO, July 30.—The Divorce Prevention Bureau of the Municipal Court of Chicago, the first bureau of the kind in this country, opened its doors a few days ago and signalled the inauguration of its work by reuniting four families. In the four cases Judge Torrison decided that separation would bring suffering on innocent children. Playing upon the parents' love for their children, he sent the couples from the bureau arm in arm and reconciled.

There are some of Judge Torrison's principal recommendations to couples inclined to jar:

"Give the wife a vacation each year. She gets tiher. Take a vacation yourself for the same reason.

"Have some kind of music in the home.

"Whenever you quarrel go upstairs, where the baby is sleeping, and look at him."

Fifty unhappy couples were in the Court of Domestic Relations. A large proportion of the cases were referred to the Divorce Prevention Bureau, and Judge Torrison expects to make peace in nearly all of them.

CLEAR AIR OF MEXICO.

Seeing From the Top of the Sierras to Mount Sparta.

The distance at which flashes from the heliograph and other objects can be discerned by the eye depends on two things, the height and the clearness of the air.

In Mexico the air is said to be clearer than anywhere else in the world. At any rate, it is the only country where a view extending to 200 miles can be obtained. By climbing to the top of the Sierra mountains the lonely peak of Mount Sparta can be seen. It would take four hours by express train to reach it.

Mount Everest, in the Himalayas, is the tallest mountain in the world. From Darjeeling the gigantic cone of Everest is seen rising in snowy grandeur among its mighty neighbors, and any stranger would vow that it was not more than thirty or forty miles away. As a matter of fact, the distance is 107 miles as the crow flies.

The most conspicuous object in the British Isles is Mount Snowdon, in Wales, which on a clear day can be distinctly seen from Bray head, County Wicklow, a distance of no less than eighty-five miles. Snowdon can also be seen from Waterloo, Liverpool, a distance of fifty-two miles.

In the seas, where the ground is perfectly flat for miles, any forty object can be seen a long way off. Boston Stumpp, the tower of the fine old church at Boston, Lincolnshire, is visible from the Leicestershire hills, quite forty miles away.

From the top of the famous Blackpool tower you can on a clear day catch a glimpse of the mountain of Snaefell, in the Isle of Man. The distance is a good sixty miles.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Turkish, Yet Greek.

One of the most characteristic things about Constantinople is that while it has become Turkish it has not ceased to be Greek. The same is true of Thrace, Macedonia, and Asia Minor, which contain a large Turkish population, but which still form a part of the Greek world to which they always belonged. The two races have indisputably influenced each other, as their languages and certain of their customs prove. A good deal of Greek blood now flows, too, in Turkish veins. Nevertheless there has been remarkably little assimilation after 500 years of one element by the other. They coexist, each perfectly distinct and each claiming with perfect reason the land as its own.—Scribner's.

THE LIBRARY IN ITS RELATION TO LOCAL CLUBS

An Interesting Paper Read by Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse at Library Institute Meeting

WHAT CAN BE DONE

A paper by Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse read at the Library Institute meeting, at Beaverton, on Thursday, July 30th, is as follows:

One of the pleasantest and most important features of library work is that of collecting information for the benefit of reading and debating clubs.

It is impossible, in the course of a short paper such as this, to enter fully into the subject, but enough can be written to show to how great an extent a librarian can assist in the mental and literary development of the community through such an agency.

But, in order to be of the best possible assistance to the public it is necessary that the Librarian should be possessed of three attributes: First a fair knowledge of the rudiments of art, science and literature; secondly, intuition in research work, without which what knowledge he possesses will be of little account, and, lastly a genuine desire to be of service to those who come to him in quest of information.

If the community to which his library caters is a large one his duties will bring him into touch with several clubs. He will be continually called upon for assistance for Church reading clubs, Church debating clubs, reading clubs unconnected with any Church, and Public School, Collegiate Institute and Normal School reading and debating clubs.

Without further preamble I will state what measures are taken in our own library with regard to such clubs, trusting that what I have to say may be the means of bringing out further suggestions for usefulness in our common work.

Our juveniles claim the largest share of our attention, for they come to us almost daily during the school season for material for oral compositions and debates. The same method is pursued with them as with the students from the Normal School and Collegiate Institute. If anyone asks for advice as to the general make-up of an essay or a speech, he or she is given it, and sources of information are pointed out to aid the cause in hand. Nothing is handed over merely for the asking, but questions are gone into thoroughly and children are shown on what basis an essay or a speech should be fashioned. No favouritism is shown and it often happens that arguments pro and con on the same question are talked over with opposing debaters on the same day. It may be argued, of course, that this is not exactly a Librarian's work, but I think that anything in the literary line is a Librarian's work and if, by helping young people to take an interest in such things, we can aid likewise in furnishing them with a higher degree of literary style of forensic force and finish we are most certainly doing our share in the educational work of the country.

The system of scrapbooks that we started some two years ago has proved of the highest service in dealing with the children. They are continually referring to them for material for their oral compositions and debates, and as every item is catalogued it is easy work for them to discover what they may be in search of.

We long ago discovered that the easiest way of overcooming the diffidence and bashfulness of the children was to go straight to them and ask in what manner we could be of use to them. By this means we established a friendly footing and to-day I think there is hardly a child frequenting the Library who will not promptly and gladly accept our assistance. It is a very simple method of bridging the chasm between adolescence and youth and which separates librarians from the most interesting and valuable portion of their clientele.

With regard to our adult reading clubs there is not much to be said. We endeavour, as far as possible, to meet their every wish, going so far even as to occasionally purchase volumes for their special edification. In doing this the Board feels that the cost of a few books, which may or may not be of general interest to the public, is as nothing compared with the good-will and lively interest of so influential a section of our Library patrons.

No pains are spared in getting up bibliographies for such clubs as need them. Announcements are also made in the press at stated intervals, showing in what particulars the Library is prepared to further the interests of readers.

So far I have dealt with the purely literary aspect of the question, but there are other clubs which were not mentioned in the preamble to this paper to which the Library also caters, and by whom its aid is constantly invoked. These are the Temperance, Women's Art and Medical Associations and the local branch of the National Council of Women. For these societies we do as much as in us lies. We have furnished them with rooms for their special work, and the resources of the Library are placed absolutely at their disposal. The only charge made against them by the Board is for the bare cost of lighting and cleaning. The result of this action has been that the Library has been for three years one of the chief factors in the City's social and moral activities.

DIFFERENTIAL IS NOT ONLY NOISY AXLE PART

Bevel Driving Gears More Likely in Need of Adjustment or Lubrication

The differential mechanism of a motor car rear axle is not the only noisy feature of the rear axle mechanism, for in the great majority of cases the differential mechanism is far less apt to wear sufficiently to become noisy than the bevel driving gears, for the differential mechanism is only in operation when the car is making turns, while the driving gears are always in operation. But noise from this mechanism does genways indicate that the gears are worn for it is possible for badly worn gears to run quite noiselessly while on the other hand it is also possible for new gears to be very noisy. However, noise fro mthis mechanism does generally mean that the gears are either in need of adjustment or lubrication.

One of the bearings of a motor car, which is usually neglected by the average motorist, is that of the driving pinion. An adjustment of this bearing generally requires that the operator get under the car, which is one reason for its neglect, but some makers render this adjustment more accessible by providing facilities for getting at it through the floor boards of the tonneau. It is important that adjustment be maintained in this bearing, as in all bearings; for lack of adjustment in this case is not only detrimental to the bearing itself, but also to the teeth of the pinion and driving gears, producing lost motion and misalignment, accompanied by a consequent excessive wear. The adjustment provided simply comprises a means of regulating the mesh of the driving pinion with the larger bevel gear, and the adjustment should be so made that the greatest freedom of rotation is obtained with the least lost motion.

Bathing Costumes Scant But No Censors Needed

At This Free Bath Outside Berlin —Liberty of Undress Taken Full Advantage of—No Blushes Here

BERLIN, July 31.—Germans, particularly Berliners, are greatly amused over the cable report that the welfare director of Dayton, O has ordered men to wear skirts or kilts when bathing in public. "Typically American," they say.

The action of the Dayton bathing censor is in sharp contrast to the local decision not to interfere with the liberty of choice in length and shortage of costumes at the Wannsee Freibad. The usual campaign against the freedom of bathers at the famous resort has resulted in just ont thing — a sign reading: "Three-cornered bathing trunks prohibited." This applies to men. The women can wear as little or as much as they please.

The Freibad or free baths, on beautiful Lake Wannsee, near Berlin, is one of the most unique sights in the world. As a summer attraction for tourists it ranks with the Palais de Danse and the Admirals Ice Palace.

It is one of the principal free bathing beaches on the lakes and rivers around Berlin. It is the working-people's beach. Only a few miles from the city, the beach can be reached at a cost of five to eight cents. A wire fence 200 yards back toward the pine forest and 600 yards along the sandy beach, with a rickety emergency hospital and equally rickety sheds called dressing-rooms comprise the Freibad.

May Bathe for 2 1-2 Cents.

The admission price is 2 1-2 cents and this gives the right to bathe all day. Last Sunday more than 6,000 persons crowded the little beach and the gates had to be closed because there was room for no more.

Full advantage is taken of the liberty of dress and undress. There is a fantastic variety of costumes and a display of near-to-nature bathing suits probably equalled at no other bathing beach in the world. The single-piece and very little of that, is the general rule. The majority of men merely wear small trunks or apologies for this garment; many of the women very little more and not a few of the children not even apologies.

The Express correspondent took a party of Americans to the beach last Sunday. Hundreds upon hundreds of men, women and children were splashing in the water or playing in the sand in costumes that brought blushes to the cheeks of the American women and made the men chuckle.

Here comes a fine specimen of masculine physique in a tri-cornered garment. By his side is a sea nymph in a bright orange single-piece which extends only about ten inches below her hips, with a laced slit on each side clear to the hips. Her arms are over his bare back and his around her waist. They thread their way among the hundreds lying on the sands. No one pays the slightest attention to their love-making. There are scores of such couples.

Yonder comes a specimen who plunges the Americans into uproarious laughter. He is tall and lank, wears a battered old hat, and to protect his back against the hot sun while out of the water he has donned an old swallow-tail evening dress coat. At a distance he looks like a gigantic black crow with his brown legs. Another man has donned a shirt. As this conceals his bathing trunk the effect is ludicrous, indeed, as he strolls on the beach.

Nymphs on Their Shoulders.

Two young athletes, each with a nymph astride his shoulders, race along the beach, turn sharply into the water, stop abruptly, and splash! The two girls shoot over their heads into the water. Here and there one still finds a woman who has a garment like a bifurcated sack tied at the ankles and looks like an inflated balloon. Of perhaps more than 2,000 girls and women there is not one with a skirt.

In the majority of cases the whole family of husband, wife and one, two, three, four of even six children is on the beach, each with as little on as the other. Little children come out of the water and their mothers calmly strip from the youngsters whatever answers for a bathing suit, wash them off with it and lead them back to the family group.

Two things at the Wannsee Freibad invariably surprises Americans—the startling costumes and the quiet orderliness of the immense throng. There is not a blush — nor a policeman. There is no loud yelling or screaming. There seldom is a row or a complaint about insult or annoyance. Two or three professional swimmers patrol the beach. Outside a patrol-boat moves back and forth for use should anyone get beyond his depth.

As there are but few calls for changing clothes, most of the disrobing takes place on the beach. Many bring bed sheets, out of which a tent-like dressing-room is made. With the children usually mother and aunties or big sister stand, and take hold of each others' skirts, while the youngster, standing between them hastily slips off the wet garment and draws on the dry.

Tent Houses of Paper.

Along the fence, running at right angles to the beach, are scores of tiny tent houses made of cloth, sacking, old boxes or even paper. These are the self-constructed sand villas and dressing-rooms for family groups. Many bring alcohol stoves and prepare coffee or tea for their luncheon. Brothers of the Sun, the Sand Crabs Clubs, the Sun Fish Villa and similar impressive names, are some of the inscriptions on the quaint little structures.

THIN PEOPLE CAN INCREASE WEIGHT

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It says a volume of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

But one person is needed to operate a new range finder for military purposes in which two telescopes are mounted at the ends of a common tube, their eye pieces being close together.

Orillia Skeptical About the Opening Of Trent Canal

Peterborough is talking of a celebration of the opening of the Trent Valley Waterway. We should welcome an invitation to the festivities on the long-hoped-for occasion, but we fear our Peterborough friends will have to exercise a little more patience before they can fix the date. If our information be correct, the Trenton end may be open next summer, but it will only be for launching and light draft craft. And so to the northern outlet, it will be two or three years yet before we expect to see vessels plying between Orillia and the Georgian Bay.—Orillia Packet.

MEND MAN'S LEG WITH STEEL

ROCHESTER, N.Y., July 30. — In order to save the left leg of Norman Van Voorhis, a horseman and polo player, whose legs were broken a few weeks ago when his pony threw him under an automobile, a rare operation was performed yesterday. A long incision was made near the ankle, and the broken bones were joined by means of a steel plate eight inches long, a quarter of an inch thick, and half an inch wide. The plate was screwed to theb ones.

It is thought the operation will prove successful and obviate amputation.

Every Meal Brought Agony

But Since Taking "Little Digesters" He Can Eat Heartily

From Osgoode Station, Ont., comes a story of five years of suffering from Indigestion and Dyspepsia—five years of doctoring in vain—then "Little Digesters" and a complete cure. Mr. R. H. Ralph tells the story—his own story—thus:

"I have been a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach Trouble for five years. I had treatment from several doctors. I did not find a cure until I began using "Little Digesters".

I can hardly describe how much I suffered at times. Every meal brought with it more or less agony and I seemed to have a complete distaste for food. I had almost begun to think my case incurable when I came across an advertisement in the papers about "Little Digesters". I decided to give them a trial. I am very thankful that I did so for I had not been taking them long when I found them helping me. I can now eat heartily and no longer feel pain and discomfort after eating."

Does Indigestion or Dyspepsia make your life miserable? Take "Little Digesters"—they will cure you or your money will be refunded.

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

crannies—the pine-needles bent in Birch, maple, poplar, and all the natives of the American woods shouldered each other lustily. By the state of the fresh young leaves, just bursting their sheaths, Stern knew the season was mid-May.

Through the wind-swayed branches, little flickering patches of morning sunlight met his gaze, as they played and quivered on the forest moss or over the sere pine spills.

Even upon the huge, squared stones which here and there lay in disorder, and which Stern knew must have fallen from the tower, the moss grew very thick; and more than one such block had been rent by frost and growing things.

"How long has it been, great Heavens! How long?" cried the engineer, a sudden fear creeping into his heart. For this, the reasserted dominance of nature, bore in on him with more appalling force than anything he had yet seen.

About him he looked, trying to get his bearings in that strange milieu.

"Why," said he, quite slowly, "it's—it's just as though some cosmic jester, all-powerful, had scooped up the fragments of a ruined city and tossed them pell-mell into the core of the Adirondacks! It's horrible—ghastly—incredible!"

Dazed and awed, he stood as in a dream, a strange figure with his mane of hair, his flaming, trailing beard, his rags (for he had left the bearskin in the arcade), his muscular arm, knotted as he held the sledge over his shoulder.

Well might he have been a savage of old times; one of the early barbarians of Britain, perhaps, peering in wonder at the ruins of some deserted Roman camp.

The chatter of a squirrel high up somewhere in the branches of an oak recalled him to his wits. Down came spiralling a few bits of bark and acornshell, quite in the old familiar way.

Farther off among the woods, a robin's throaty morning notes drifted to him on the odorous breeze. A wren, surprisingly tame, chippered busily. It hopped about, not ten feet from him, entirely fearless.

Stern realized that it was now seeing a man for the first time in its life, and that it had no fear. His bushy brows contracted as he watched the little brown body jumping from twig to twig in the pine above him.

A deep, full breath he drew. Higher, still higher, he raised his head. Far through the leafy screen he saw the overbending arch of sky in tiny patches of turquoise.

"The same old world, after all—the same, in spite of everything—thank God!" he whispered, his very tone a prayer of thanks.

And suddenly, though why he could not have told, the grim engineer's eyes grew wet with tears that ran, unheeded, down his heavy-bearded cheeks.

CHAPTER VIII.
A SIGN OF PERIL.

Stern's weakness—as he judged it—lasted but a minute. Then, realizing even more fully than ever the necessity for immediate labour and exploration, he tightened his grip upon the sledge and set forth into the forest of Madison Square.

Away from him scurried a cottontail. A snake slid, hissing, out of sight under a jungle of fern. A butterfly, dull brown and ochre, settled upon a branch in the sunlight, where it began slowly opening and shutting its wings.

"H'm! That's a Danais plexippus, right enough," commented the man. "But there are some odd changes in it. Yes, indeed, certainly some evolutionary remnants. Must be a tremendous time since we went to sleep, for sure; probably very much longer than I dare guess. That's a problem I've got to go to work on, before many days!"

But now for the present he dismissed it again; he pushed it aside in the press of urgent matters. And, parting the undergrowth, he broke his crackling way through the deep wood.

He had gone but a few hundred yards when an exclamation of surprised delight burst from his lips.

"Water! Water!" he cried. "What? a spring, so close? A pool, right here at hand? Good luck, by Jove, the very first thing!"

And, stopping where he stood, he gazed at it with keen, unalloyed pleasure.

There, so near to the massive bulk of the tower that the vast shadow lay broadly across it, Stern had suddenly come upon as beautiful a little watercourse as ever bubbled forth under the yews of Arden or lapped the willows of Hesperides.

He beheld a roughly circular depression in the woods, fern-banked and fringed with purple blooms; at the bottom sparkled a spring, leaf-bowered, cool, Elysian.

From this, down through a channel which the water must have worn for itself by slow erosion, a small brook trickled, widening out into a pool some fifteen feet across; whence, brimming over, it purled away through the young sweet-flags and rushes with tempting little woodland notes.

"What a find!" cried the engineer. Forward he strode. "So, then? Deer tracks?" he exclaimed, noting a few dainty hoof-prints in the sandy margin. "Great!" And, filled with exultation, he dropped beside the spring.

Over it he bent. Setting his bearded lips to the sweet water, he drank enormous, satisfying draughts.

Sated at last he stood up again and peered about him. All at once he burst forth into joyful laughter.

"Why, this is certainly an old friend of mine, or I'm a liar!" he cried out. "This spring is nothing more or less than the lineal descendant of Madison Square fountain, what? But, good Lord, what a change!

"It would make a splendid subject for an article in the 'Annals of Applied Geology.' Only—well, there aren't any annals, now, and what's more, no readers—"

Down to the wider pool he walked.

"Stern, my boy," said he, "here's where you get an AI, first-class dip!"

A minute later, stripped to the buff, the man lay splashing vigorously in the water. From top to toe he scrubbed himself vigorously with the fine white sand. And when, some minutes later, he rose up again, the tingle and joy of life filled him in every nerve.

For a minute he looked contemptuously at his rags, lying there on the edge of the pool. Then with a grunt he kicked them aside.

"I guess we'll dispense with those," judged he. "The bearskin, back in the building, there, will be enough." He picked up his sledge, and, heaving a mighty breath of comfort, set out for the tower again.

"Ah, but that was certainly fine!" he exclaimed. "I feel ten years younger, already. Ten, from what? X minus ten, equals—?"

Thoughtfully, as he walked across the elastic moss and over the pine-needles, he stroked his beard.

"Now, if I could only get a haircut and shave!" said he. "Well, why not? Wouldn't that surprise her, though?"

The idea strong upon him, he hastened his steps, and soon was back at the door close to the huge Norway pine. But here he did not enter. Instead, he turned to the right.

Plowing through the woods, climbing over fallen columns and shattered building-stones, flushing a covey of loud-winged partridges, parting the bushes that grew thickly along the base of the wall, he now found himself in what had long ago been Twenty-third Street.

No sign now of paving or car-tracks—nothing save, on the other side of the way, crumbling lines of ruin. As he worked his way among the detritus of the Metropolitan, he kept sharp watch for the wreckage of a hardware store.

Not until he had crossed the ancient line of Madison Avenue and penetrated some hundred yards still further along Twenty-third Street, did he find what he sought.

"Ah!" he suddenly cried. "Here's something now!"

And, scrambling over a pile of grass-grown rubbish with a couple of time-bitten iron wheels peering out—evidently the wreckage of an electric car—he made his way around a gaping hole where a sidewalk had caved in and so reached the interior of a shop.

"Yes, prospects here, certainly prospects!" he decided, carefully inspecting the place. "If this didn't use to be Turner & Brown's place, I'm awfully mistaken in bearings. There ought to be something left."

"Ah! Would you?" and he flung a hastily snatched rock at a rattlesnake that had begun its dry, chirring defiance on top of what once had been a counter.

The snake vanished, while the rock rebounding, crashed through glass.

Stern wheeled about with a cry of joy. For there, he saw, still stood near the back of the shop, a showcase from within which he caught a sheen of tarnished metal.

Quickly he ran toward this, stumbling over the loose flooring, mossy and grass-grown.

There in the case, preserved as you have seen Egyptian relics two or three thousand years old in museums, the engineer beheld incalculable treasures. He thrilled with a savage, strange delight.

Another blow, with the sledge, demolished the remaining glass.

He trembled with excitement as he chose what he most needed.

"I certainly do understand now," said he, "why the New Zealanders took Captain Cook's old barrel-hoops and refused his cash. Same here! All the money in this town couldn't buy this rusty knife—" as he seized a corroded blade set in a horn handle, yellowed with age. And eagerly he continued the hunt.

Fifteen minutes later he had accumulated a pair of scissors, two rubber combs, another knife, a revolver, an automatic, several handfuls of cartridges, and a Cosmos bottle.

All these he stowed in a warped, mildewed remnant of a Gladstone bag, taken from a corner where a broken glass sign, "Leather Goods," lay among the rank confusion.

"I guess I've got enough, now, for the first load," he judged, more excited than if he had chanced upon a blue-clay bed crammed with Cullinan diamonds. "It's a beginning, anyhow. Now for Beatrice!".

Joyous as a schoolboy with a pocketful of new-won marbles, he made his exit from the ruins of the hardware store, and started back toward the tower.

But hardly had he gone a hundred feet when all at once he drew back with a sharp cry of wonder and alarm.

There at his feet, in plain view under a little maple sapling, lay something that held him frozen with astonishment.

He snatched it up, dropping the sledge to do so.

"What? What—" he stammered; and at the thing he stared with widened, uncomprehending eyes.

"Merciful God! How—what—?" cried he.

The thing he held in his hand was a broad, flat, flint assegai-point!

CHAPTER IX.
HEADWAY AGAINST ODDS.

Stern gazed at this alarming object with far more trepidation than he would have eyed a token authentically labelled: "Direct from Mars."

For the space of a full half-minute he found no word, grasped no coherent thought, came to no action save to stand there, thunder-struck, holding the rotten leather bag in one hand, the spear-head in the other.

Then, suddenly, he shouted a curse and made as though to fling it clean away. But ere it had left his grasp, he checked himself.

"No, there's no use in that," he said, quite slowly. "If this thing is what it appears to be, if it isn't merely some freakish bit of stone weathered off somewhere, why, it means—my God, what doesn't it mean?"

He shuddered, and glanced fearfully about him; all his calculations already seemed crashing down about him; all his plans, half-formulated, appeared in ruin.

"AIR TOWEL" IS THE LATEST SANITARY ELECTRICAL DEVICE

Hand Drier, Designed by Washington Man, Considered Boom For Big Plants and Offices

A new and sanitary device for drying the hands has been invented by J. M. Ward, superintendent of the district building, at Washington, D. C. It has been placed in use in the large public lavatories in that building, where it has given successful, as well as economical service. It promises to be widely employed.

This electrical hand-drier consists of a casing measuring eleven by thirteen inches square and mounted on a sanitary base, having twelve-inch legs A powerful blower mounted in the casing distributes air through a heating element, thence through ducts and deflectors, and finally to an opening in the top where the hands are held to be dried. The warmed air is equally distributed to all parts of the hands at the same time and absolutely no movement of the hands is required. The device is operated by a foot pedal, pressure on which sets in operation a quick-acting switch by which the blower is started, the stoppage of the device being effected by releasing the foot pedal.

This hand-drier, known as the "air-towel," is adapted for use in factories where large forces are employed, in public lavatories, surgical and dental operating rooms and the like, where the public health is to be considered by using sanitary methods.

The roller or common towel being prohibited by law, paper towels have come into general use. These are found to be expensive where numerous persons use them. Not only the initial cost of purchase, but the fact that an attendant is required to supply fresh towels and remove the soiled and "wet" ones from the wash rooms make paper towels a rather expensive commodity. The electrical drier removes these difficulties since there is nothing to supply or remove, and accordingly the need of an attendant is eliminated. Furthermore, the lavatory maintains a neat and orderly appearance which cannot obtain when linen or paper towels are used.

The device is absolutely sanitary in that it is unnecessary to touch any part of it with the hands—a pressure on the foot pedal starting the drier and the release of said pedal stopping it immediately.

The economy is not to be questioned since the service is continuous, no supplies are necessary, and no attendant is required. It is substantially made and occupies a relatively small area. Its installations simply consists of connecting it to a flexible cord. The eectrical hand-drier has but few parts—case, heater, blower, and pedal—all simple of construction. It consumes but 11 watt hours of current per operation of from 35 to 40 seconds.

The hands can be thoroughly dried in thirty seconds, which is a little less than the time consumed by the average person in drying their hands thoroughly with an ordinary linen or paper towel.

Britain's Great Lace Industry.

At the time of Queen Elizabeth the majority of ladies were makers of pillow lace as well as expert needle women. This pleasing past-time was also, as it is to-day, an important industry among the dwellers of Great Britain, but chiefly in certain centres which are even to-day noted more for their lace than any other industry.

A writer once made the statement "that women who make lace, never grow old," and this statement is proved by a visit to the Cottage Lace Makers of Buckinghamshire.

Below we give a portrait of one of the Cottage Workers who is now 87, and without the aid of glasses piles her interesting art and is a producer of the very finest quality of Buckingham lace—in every respect equal to the historic Buckingham Making Lace for 75 Years.

laces now in the possession of the Royal Families of England and Europe.

The recent development of this industry is due largely to the untiring effort of the Buckingham Cottage Workers' Association who have been instrumental in placing the industry upon a sound business basis.

Any lady desiring particulars as to this wonderful lace industry may obtain free of charge a descriptive booklet with particulars as to the lace from Mrs. Etta Armstrong, Olney Bucks, England.

* * * Side by side with English Industry the Buckingham Cottage Workers' Agency, have, during the last few years, done much to develop the languishing lace industry of the Emerald Isle, particularly in the little known districts of the centre and West of Ireland. In order to more fully develop the Industry the Irish sisters sought the co-operation of Mrs. Armstrong, hoping thereby to accomplish in the West of Ireland what has been done in Buckinghamshire. The quality, beauty and excellence of the Irish lace do too well known to need comment, suffice it to say that any one requiring information or illustrated catalogues of these laces can obtain them by addressing as above, Mrs. Etta Armstrong, Olney, Bucks, England.

FIRST AIDS

Sunstroke.

Strip off clothing, apply chopped ice, wrapped in flannel, to the head. Rub ice over the chest and place pieces under the armpits and at the sides.

If there is no ice at hand, apply an abundance of cold water to the head and neck.

Sheets or cloths wet with cold water may be used.

Heat Exhaustion.

If the skin is cold, moist or clammy and the pulse weak, give plenty of fresh air, apply hot cloths to the body and give hot drinks.

Stings of Insects.

Remove the sting if possible.

Diluted vinegar, ammonia, alcohol or cologne water applied to the wound will give much relief.

Moist earth or cold water, if applied at once, will afford some relief.

Apparent Drowning.

Remove all tight clothing from the neck, chest and waist.

Sweep the forefinger, covered with a handkerchief, round the mouth to free it from froth and mucus.

Turn the body on the face, raising it a little with the hands under the hips, to allow any water to run out from the air passages.

Take only a moment for this.

Then lay the person flat upon the back, with a folded pad to keep the shoulders raised a little.

Remove the wet clothing as soon as possible. If in a room or sheltered place, strip the body and wrap it in blankets.

If possible, use bottles of hot water, hot irons or bags of hot salt or sand around the limbs and feet.

Wrap a towel around the tip of the tongue and keep it pulled well forward, as it generally tends to slip back and shut off the air from the glottis. Artificial respiration must be produced until the natural breathing comes. In order to do this, lay the person on the back. Let someone kneel behind the head, grasp both arms near the elbows and sweep them up and above the head until they touch.

Make a firm pull for a moment, then return the arms to the side of the body until they press hard against the ribs.

Repeat this act until natural breathing comes.

When the person can breathe, give a few teaspoonfuls at a time of hot black coffee or ginger tea.

Poisoning from Plants.

If a person has eaten poisonous plants, an emetic which will produce prompt and brisk vomiting should be used at once.

Salt water or warm soap suds are very good for this purpose.

If nothing else may be had, push the finger as far down the throat as possible, several times.

This will cause vomiting.

CARE OF BOOTS.

If you would make your boots last and look new for a very long time, use the following mode of cleaning: When the boots are well cleaned of all mud take a little new milk in a saucer and with a soft piece of cloth wash them well all over with the milk. This not only preserves the leather, but keeps the boots quite new looking, as they never crack and last three times the ordinary time. When the milk has well dried on apply a good polish to the boots or shoes in the usual way.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

A Husband's Duty.

A very grave responsibility has the man assumed in his marriage. Doting parents have confided to his care the welfare of a loved daughter, and a trusting woman has risked all her future happiness in his keeping. Largely will it depend upon him whether her pathway shall be strewn with thorns or roses.

Let your wife fully understand your business. In nearly every case she will be found a most valuable adviser when she understands all your circumstances. If a dispute arises dismiss the subject with a kind word and do not seek to carry your point by discussion. It is a glorious achievement to master one's own temper. You may discover that you are in error, and if your wife is wrong she will gladly, in her cooler moments, acknowledge the fault.

Never neglect your wife for all the world besides. Never deceive; confidence once lost can never be wholly regained. Never give all your pleasant words and smiles to strangers—the kindest words and the sweetest smiles should be reserved for home. Home should be your Heaven.

Never fail to tell your wife the truth; it truthful you get your reward—you get your punishment if you deceive. Never fail to say a kind, encouraging word to your wife; praise and encourage her. To keep her love, be kind and loving—always be a lover.

And last and above all, to keep your wife's love and respect, be a strictly temperate man. It would be difficult to love and honour a man whom she is compelled to look down upon, who would drag himself, wife and children down to poverty, shame and disgrace. One and all turn from the intoxicating cup. That alone makes more misery, causes more unhappy homes and is the greatest curse on earth. God pity the poor wife with an intemperate man. Her life's happiness will be completely destroyed by such a union. Better a thousand times the single, free and independent maidenhood than married to a man addicted to dissipated habits. Don't go down town every night to see a man, and then expect your wife to be all smiles when you come home.

* * *

The Happy Home.

The art of the perfect housekeeper lies in her concealing her efforts. To the uninitiated her work seems done by magic, so smoothly do the wheels of domestic management roll along. If there is a jar in the kitchen, her first effort is to smooth it quietly over so that there is no reflection of it in the serene atmosphere above stairs. In every emergency the true housewife is mistress of herself.

We have all seen such households, where the mistress was always ready to receive her friends and her husband's friends, where everything seemed to move by some unseen rhythm. The secret certainly lies in perfect system, in "timing one's turns," doing the routine work on exactly the same day and time of the day each week; and in training the servants to work so methodically that they always know what is expected of them. If housewives were more methodical in their way of laying out their servant's work for each day, and in adhering to it, there would be less trouble with servants.

* * *

DID YOU EVER THINK?

Did you ever think as a hearse passed by
That it would not be long until you or I
Would be taking a ride in that black plumed hack,
And never remember the coming back?

Did you ever think as you strive for gold
That a dead man's hand can't a dollar hold?
No matter how much you earn or save,
You must leave it all when you go to the grave.

It is better to buy a cheap bouquet
For a living soul this very day
Than a bushel of roses, white and red,
To place on his casket when he is dead.

* * *

Marriage makes or mars a woman's life, and a young girl should be plainly taught that marriage with a man lacking certain qualities is a most deplorable, irremediable blunder. She must be made to feel that unless a man is temperate, moral, honest and gentle, he has no right to expect to associate with her, that having these qualities, if she loves him with a love that time has tested and proved, she is pretty safe in trusting herself to him.

How many good things we have to be thankful for—the flowers, the fruit, the harvest, the seasons, day and night, the sun, moon and stars, the power to enjoy all the beauties of nature and art with the eye, all the sweet harmony of music with the ear, the odour of flowers with the nostrils, the foods that give us health and strength; the blessed sleep that comes without price to the poorest.

If there is any dog in a man it is pretty apt to growl when his food is not to his taste.

EGYPTIAN DONKEYS

Where Women Ride Astride or Walk Behind Husbands

To see the Mayor and Corporation of London riding on donkeys would doubtless cause endless amusement, but this happens every day in Egypt. There the donkey is the chief beast of burden. Every farmer has at least two or three of them, and when he rides to his fields he rides with his friends on donkeys. He does not use a proper saddle, but has a couple of sacks strapped over the animal's back. No reins are used, and stirrups are never thought of.

The donkeys are sometimes used in a most brutal fashion, for their riders guide them with a stick, hitting them on the left side of the head when they want them to go to the right, and vice versa. If the donkeys are not going fast enough some riders rub the rough end of a stick along the spine or prick them behind the neck with a needle fixed into the stick they use for guiding.

The Egyptian donkeys are usually much smaller than those used in England, but two men are often seen on one donkey. The writer has several times seen donkeys collapse and roll over as a second big man has mounted. Their legs often suffer through carrying heavy men when only a few months old.

When Egyptian women ride the donkeys they sit astride, and the young fellahah, or farmer's daughter, can go at a great speed. Most of the older women, however, are either too poor to afford one or too stout to balance on one.

It is a common sight to see a man riding on a donkey and his wife trotting behind, barefooted, and carrying an infant in her arms and a large basket on her head. The Egyptian farmer has no idea of women's rights. Besides carrying the farmer to and from his labor, the donkey has to carry bundles of birseem or clover from the fields to the horses and buffaloes in the villages and towns, for grass and hay are almost unknown in Egypt.

When the donkey is not being worked it is roped to a peg in the ground and its two front feet are tied together, so that it cannot move more than two yards. It is the natives' despised friend.

Parnell's Love Story.

Of the several great political romances of the latter part of the nineteenth century there was none that gripped the British people like the love story of Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish leader. For nearly a quarter of a century this romance, intrigue, or tragedy—for it is any or all of these according to the individual view of the observer or reader of history—has been more or less of an enigma. But the enigma is now solved by the publication of "Charles Stewart Parnell; His Love Story and Political Life," written by his widow, Katherine O'Shea.

The story which aroused such violent passions in the '80's stands forth in this book, nakedly revealed to the utmost detail. After having read it most people will find it difficult to decide into which category the story falls—whether it is the romance of a great man who sacrificed everything for the love of a woman, an extraordinary intrigue in which politics and love were strangely mingled, or a tragedy of thwarted political ambitions. In any case, it is the history of a very remarkable couple, whose lives were closely interwoven with the stormy events of the beginning of the fight for home rule.

MUSIC.

Music has as little association with the other arts in respect of its contents as it has in respect to its materials. It has for its best and truest state no object of invitation, and because of this it stands isolated from all other products of the human mind. On the one hand are the things which are projected, grasped, comprehended by the intellect; on the other, an awe inspiring solitude outside the domain of reason, and therefore beyond its reason stands music, bodying forth the forms of reason.—Henry Edward Krehbiel.

THE PERFUME.

That you have once lived in my heart
To remember forever I'm doomed.
The vase which that perfume has held
Remains always perfumed!
—From the Spanish.

Lessons Indoors.

There is nothing much more insidious in the whole pot of habit that is always being wound about us than the growing claims of certain pieces of furniture to be used in certain ways. I do not mean to advocate a state of daily instability in one's surroundings, where nothing has a place of its own and you can never find a buffet or a coalbox when you want it. Still, to allow summer and winter to go by without any proper recognition within the house beyond stuffing a painted fan in the fireplace and sticking up a few muslin curtains is simply miserable.—London News.

Your "Batting Average"

can't be kept up on foods that are deficient in muscle-making material, that heavily tax the digestive organs. The effort to digest high-proteid foods in Summer uses up vitality and lays the foundation for disease.

SHREDDED WHEAT

will keep the body at top-notch efficiency for work or play. It is what you digest, not what you eat, that supplies strength for body and mind. Every particle of the whole wheat grain is digested and converted into sound muscle, bone and brain. Your grocer sells it.

Always heat the Biscuit in oven to restore crispness; then pour over it milk or cream, adding salt or sugar to suit the taste. Deliciously nourishing for any meal in combination with berries or other fruits of any kind. Try toasted Triscuit, the Shredded Wheat Wafer, for luncheon with butter, cheese or marmalades.

Law of Falling Bodies.

A falling body having fallen during one exact second falls 16.1 feet. At the precise end of the second it has acquired a specific velocity of 32.2 feet per second. This carries it 32.2 feet during the second second, and this added to 16.1 feet equals 48.3 feet distance fallen during the two seconds. And at the exact end of the second second the acquired velocity is 64.4 feet per second, and so on.—New York American.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDY FOR FRECKLED FACES

Thousands are spending fortunes in frantic efforts to remove the signs of premature age from their faces. Such women willingly pay almost any amount of money for worthless wrinkle removers, of which there are many.

If they only knew it, the most effective remedy imaginable is a simple, harmless face wash which can be made up at home in less than a minute. They have only to get an ounce of powdered saxolite and half a pint of witch hazel at the drug store and mix the two. Apply this daily as a refreshing lotion. The effect is almost magical. Even after the first treatment a marked improvement is noticed and the face has a snug, firm feeling that is most pleasing.

Meat May Be Injurious and Is Expensive!

Some people may eat lots of meat without injury to their health, but it's hard on their pockets. Others should avoid meat almost entirely, yet they eat it daily—these pay in both health and purse.

Either class will benefit by eating less meat and more Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes.

It gives much more nourishment than its cost in meat, is infinitely more easy to digest—consequently better for you.

Antedated.

"Which one of the Ten Commandments did Adam break when he ate the apple?" asked the Sunday-school teacher.

"He didn't break any," replied one little fellow.

"Why not?" queried the teacher.

"'Cause there wasn't any then."

Not His.

"You say you haven't anything to be thankful for?" said the clergyman to one of his parishioners. "Why, look at your neighbor, Hayes; he has just lost his wife by influenza."

"Well," said the parishioner, "that don't do me any good; I ain't Hayes."

Advice.

"What can I use to clean carpets?" asked a correspondent, who signed herself, rather bashfully, "Young Bride."

"Have you tried your young husband?" replied the answers editor, who lost his position just a few hours after the reply appeared.

A Fine Point.

"What's the discussion?"

"The boys had assembled to lynch a horse thief."

"Well?"

"But now a knotty point of jurisprudence has come up. Seems he stole an automobile."

Identified.

"Mamma!"

"Yes, daughter."

"Who was Cinderella?"

"Why, Cinderella, my child, was the first female to get a number four foot into a number two shoe, I believe."

Selfishness.

First girl (in the crush at the parade)—Mercy! What a dreadful crowd! I wish now I'd stayed at home, don't you?

Second girl—Certainly not; but I wish to goodness those others had.

Hubby's Suggestion.

Mrs. Oneyman—If you never go to church with me, how are people to know that I am married?

Mr. Oneyman—Oh, take the ride with you. I guess that will make people suspect the truth at least.

It Was Necessary.

"I understand Bobsworthy's boy is making a name for himself."

"Which one?"

"Clarence Augustus."

"He had to."

In the Boudoir.

Helen—Why, I never could marry that man!

Ethel—Mercy! Why not?

Helen—Why, he wears a wig!

And then the dear creatures took off a few more pins, a hairpin or two, a hairpin, a bobpin, and that's all they took off, and sat down to pursue a novel.

In Wrong.

Hacker—Does your wife laugh at the wrong place in the story?

Bocker—Yes; and she cheers at the wrong place in a ball game.

Prejudiced.

Magistrate—Are you interested in this case?

Witness for the prosecution—Yes, sir; the prisoner cut my acquaintance.

He Was.

Father of eight—Yes, the last of my daughters was married yesterday.

Friend—Indeed! Who was the happy man?

Father of eight—I was.

Remarkable.

Pete—You say that he is well known by the sorority girls?

Skate—Well known! Well, I should say so! Why, man, he's been going to some of those houses for three years, and two girls call him by his right name!

Just The Thing.

She—But we can't dance upon this carpet.

He—But this is a rag carpet, my dear.

One Activity Decided Upon.

"What do you intend to do after you leave college?"

"Well, I haven't decided on anything definite for the first year, except to come back for the class reunion."

Prophetic.

Little brother—Bet he'd kiss you if I weren't here!

Sister—You insolent boy! Go away this very minute!

His Avocation.

"What are you gonna to do this summer?"

"Pose as a dwarf in a side show."

"As a dwarf? Why, you're taller than the average man!"

"Yes, I know, I pose as the largest dwarf in the world."

Explained.

Uncle Ezra—How did your automobile accident happen?

Uncle Eben—Well, you see, there's one thing you keep your eye on, and another one you keep your foot on, and another one you keep your hand on, and I guess I got my anatomy in the wrong places.

The Difficulty.

"I thought you were going to farm this year, old chap."

"Yes, I had that in mind; but, you know, I couldn't get a farm near a decent hotel."

Young Philosophy.

"Dye know, I think teacher's got eyes behind her!"

"Well, she said her eyesight was good when we left her!"

Of Course.

He: "Is your uncle good at golf?"

She: "Mercy, no! He's very profane.—Boston Globe.

Sport and Coin.

"Why are you puffing like a steam engine and raising that cloud of smoke?"

"Sh-h-h! There's a man over there I owe money and I don't want him to see me."

For Us, Yes.

Pokus: "It's more terrible when he doesn't realize it."

What Was He Thinking Of?

Seth: "Uncle Silas, do you like bananas?"

Uncle Silas: (hard of hearing); "No, indeed; I prefer the old-fashioned nightgowns."

A TRAGEDY.

"Uncle has a gooseberry gut leg."

"No, William, of course it hasn't."

"Then how I've eaten a caterpillar."

His One Rival.

"One or the other of us," muttered the young man who awaited his beloved in the front parlor, "is going to be turned down tonight!"

And he glanced ferociously at the solitary parlor lamp glowing near the piano.

Simple, But Striking.

Maiden: "What sort of hat did Genevieve Gotham wear?"

Man: "A simple thing—just a gardenia in front and a gold-fish yer behind."

No Great Catch.

Miss Kitty: "All the fish that come to her net!"

Miss Kitty: "But all the fish that come to her net are lobsters and skates!"

Prepared for the Worst.

Cynthia: "Oh, Tom, think of going to ask papa's consent in such shabby clothes!"

Tom: "That's all right—I had the suit ruined."

In the Neighborhood.

Hampton: "Dinwiddie's cold his family is a very old one. They were one of the first to come across."

Rhodes: "The grocer told me yesterday that now they were likely to come across."

Said Without Thought.

Mr. H. Peck: "I wish I had married a woman possessed of common sense."

Mrs. H. Peck: "But no woman possessed of common sense would have married you, my dear."

A Convival Colloquy.

"'Lo!"

"Yes?"

"Where were you last night?"

"Party."

"Good time?"

"Yes—corking! Where were you?"

"Party."

"Good time?"

"Yes—smorking!"

Can Rest Now.

Class '14 lawyer (having passed his exams): "Well, I'm glad it's over! I've been working to death the last two years, trying to complete my legal education."

Old Lawyer: "Cheer up, my boy! It'll be a long time before you have any more work to do."

Unkind.

Co-ed (emphatically): "I'd just like to see the man that I would promise to "love, honor and obey"!

Stude: "I'm sure you would!"

Expert Testimony.

"They say," declared Brown, "that twins are always alike in disposition—do the same things at the same time. How is it, Jones?"

"All I can say," replied Jones, the father of twin babies, "is that I wish mine would sleep at the same time."

The Natural Query.

Mother: "That lady dressed in black, my dear, is a Sister of Charity."

Ethel: "Which one, mama—Faith or Hope?"

A Cheerful One.

Crawford: "Rather optimistic, isn't he?"

Crabshaw: "Why, that fellow can see the silver lining to a cloud of mosquitoes."

That Rag-a-muffin.

"Carry yer grip, boss?" "No."

"Paper?" "No."

"Shine?" "No."

"Den gimme a cent an' I'll wiggle me ears fer yer."

When the Dessert Came On.

"Now I understand the meaning of that old dutch phrase, 'The higher, the fewer,'" remarked the lowbrow boarder.

"To what does it allude?" inquired the landlady, acting as interlocutor.

"Strawberries evidently."

Biting the Dust.

Never had the forty horsepower engine run better. The big touring car raced along the road, raising the dust in clouds, and flitting past milestones with an easy regularity almost monotonous.

"Ah," gasped the driver, as the car battled with the wind which swept the high ground, whence for miles around the surrounding country could be seen, "this is the place for view—eh, my boy? Have you ever come across such a landscape as that before?"

Almost lost in the roaring of the wind came his friend's hoarse grumble:

"Never! I've already had a good deal more than I can swallow."

All Bunk.

"I've been bunkoed on everything I understook this week."

"Go to a show and forget your troubles."

"I tried that last night and got bunkoed again."

Something Missing.

The superintendent of a Sunday school was illustrating for the children the text, "Arise and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt."

Showing them a large picture, she asked:

Accepted.

"You're a mighty poor talker, especially to the girls. How did you raise the nerve to propose to Miss Sweet?"

"Oh, I didn't say much of anything to her. I handed her a solitaire ring and she slipped it on her left forefinger and said: 'All right; it fits!'"

Wise Man.

"Now isn't that splendid? Here is the mother, here is the young child, there's Egypt in the distance."

The children, however, looked disappointed, and finally one little boy piped out:

"Please, teacher, where's the sea?"

Time Makes a Difference.

"I do not understand it," said the philosopher.

"What is bothering you now?" inquired the other.

"If a man is two hours late arriving home for dinner his wife raises an awful row, while if he is gone two years she will welcome him with open arms."

Who Doesn't.

"Is it right for a girl to allow a man to kiss her before they become engaged?"

"It may not be right, but it is a good plan if she cares for kisses."

To the Point.

"Queer fellows, these artists! I asked one of them to paint me an 'Idyl of Summer,' and what do you suppose his canvas showed?"

"I've no idea."

"A cake of ice."

Not for Her.

"What did you say to him, dad?"

"I asked him if he could support you in the style to which you had become accustomed."

"And he?"

"He said he could."

"If he tries it, I'll leave him."

He Didn't Know.

Gentleman Farmer (buying a barometer)—"But what I don't understand is how to set the thing when you want it to rain."

A Domestic Tragedy.

"It must be done!"

With the air of an empress the young wife swept from the room. The young husband groaned aloud and prepared for the worst.

"It is done!" she exclaimed triumphantly, as she placed on the table the first pie she had ever made in all her life.

A Passing Episode.

"Back!" he shouted hoarsely, as the passing crowd paused and watched with breathless attention.

"Back!" he shouted, again and again, until the veins stood out like whipcords on his grimy face.

He lowered a lever and a cloud like thunder re-echoed thru the street as the coal man dumped his two-horse wagon-load of coal down the apartment house chute.

The Doctor's Manner.

No one-thousandth-second camera can be without a moment. That of a people everywhere the most significant. Bill has mailed on the front of the banquet a memento most to all men—the face of Hendon.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

His One Useful Act

Puttering Turned Out to Be of Value

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

One day Edward Carr, who was always on the lookout for odd articles, attended an auction of furniture in the house of a man who had recently died. An antique desk, said to be 150 years old, was put up, and Carr resolved to buy it if he could secure it at a reasonable price. Among the bidders was a young lady of attractive appearance who seemed to be very desirous of buying the desk, but when the price was run up over $50 she dropped out and with evident disappointment. The desk was finally knocked down to Carr for $100.

One of the pigeonholes he used for pencils, erasers, penholders and other small articles. At times when he brought some little instrument from his workshop that he didn't care to carry back at once he would toss it into this pigeonhole. One day he put a pocket compass in there. In taking it out he noticed that the needle was deflected. There was not a bit of metal near enough to affect it sensibly, and Carr was at a loss to understand the deflection.

The young man moved the compass to the right and to the left, the needle holding the same position—toward the pigeonhole. Putting his hand into the latter, he discovered that it did not extend the full depth of the desk. But on examining the other pigeonholes in line with it he found that none of them extended farther back. He tried the magnet on them all, but without any noticeable effect except on the one in question.

Now, what Edward Carr did not know about old desks was not worth knowing. He was aware that many of them contained secret drawers. He was also aware that some of these drawers instead of being made of wood were made of metal. He believed that the needle of his compass was attracted by a metal drawer. At any rate, there was some metal substance there that influenced it. Taking up a penholder, he began to poke about on the back of the pigeonhole. After doing this for some time he struck the upper right hand corner, and the whole surface comprising the end of the compartment pressed forward against his penholder. When it had come as far as it could he took it out and found it to be a drawer made of steel. It was filled with papers yellow with age.

Carr fell to examining the contents. The first paper he opened contained a flower that had evidently been there for many years. Carr wondered what the story was connected with it and passed on to the next. It was a letter from a son to his father promising, if forgiven for past sins, to mend his ways.

On striking the next document Carr assumed that he had come upon something of importance. It was the will of one Peter Carson, executed fifty years before, making a few small bequests and leaving the rest of his estate to Emily Marston.

Here was a will that had been locked up for half a century. Doubtless the testator had died long ago and the estate had gone to the heirs at law, the real heir getting nothing. Possibly there was a later will. If so this one was of no value. Quite likely the property involved had passed into certain hands, and would it not be better that the will should be destroyed? Might it not be better that the possessors should not be disturbed?

Then suddenly the remembrance of the young woman who had bid on the desk and seemed greatly disappointed at not getting it popped up before Carr's mind's eye. Might she not be Emily Marston? He smiled as it occurred to him that Emily Marston could not be less than fifty years old. But the girl and the desk and the will all got tangled up in Carr's brain and he could not separate them.

Carr was not long in deciding on the right way to treat this case. He went to a lawyer and asked him to look up the estate of Peter Carson. It was found that Peter Carson had died forty years before without a will. The heir at law was a son, Nicholas Carson, who had gone to the bad. An effort had been made to find him at the time of his father's death, but it had been unavailing.

There being no proof of Nicholas Carson's death, the estate had remained in chancery for ten years, when the next and only heir at law, Mary Cowdry, spinster, daughter of Peter Carson's sister, succeeded in obtaining from the courts a document declaring Nicholas Carson legally dead, and the property was turned over to her. The report made no mention of Emily Marston, but upon inquiry Carr learned that she was a young woman who had taken care of Carson, who was old and feeble. At the time of his death surprise was manifested that he had made no provision for her.

Of all these persons the last named was the one in which Edward Carr was most interested, though it appeared that at Peter Carson's death she was given no special importance. He learned that ten years after his decease she had married. She, too, had died, leaving one child, a daughter, who would now be about twenty years of age.

On learning this Carr was at once struck with the idea that the girl who had tried to buy the desk might be this daughter of Emily Marston and the real heir to Peter Carson's estate, which had been considerable at his death and in the forty-six years that had elapsed since had doubled. It was now in possession of Mary Cowdry, an old woman and still unmarried.

To look for the girl who had bid on the desk would be like looking for a needle in a haystack, but it was not difficult to get the name of Emily Marston's daughter, and it was found to be Emily Peck. Her address was obtained from a directory.

One afternoon Miss Peck, who was a schoolteacher, had just returned from school when a maid brought her the card of Edward J. Carr. Never having heard of Mr. Carr, she thought there must be some mistake, but went down into the parlor.

Carr saw before him the girl who had tried to buy the desk. She did not recognize him, though he recognized her at once.

"I think I have seen you before," he said.

"Indeed! Where?"

"At an auction where I bought a desk."

"Oh, you bought that desk, did you?"

"Yes. May I ask you why you wished it?"

"The desk belonged to an old gentleman, Peter Carson. My mother, as a young girl, took care of him. He told her that he had provided for her in his will, but no will was found. She expected to find it in his desk, but it was not there. The desk was bought by the person whose effects were sold at the auction I attended. I recognized it from my mother's description of it and thought I would like to buy it, since my mother told me she believed there was a secret drawer in it and that secret drawer might contain a will."

"I should be happy to assist you in examining the desk," said Carr, who had a scheme of his own for imparting the information he had for her. "I am living with my mother, and if you will come to our home we will make an investigation."

The young lady brightened up and answered joyfully. Carr kept her talking about the situation till her dinner was announced, when he left her. The next day she called at the Carrs', was received by Mrs. Carr and taken to Edward's room, where stood the desk. Carr began to tap here and there for a secret spring, but, gaining no result, took up his pocket compass. Then he showed his visitor that the needle was deflected and told her that there was metal near it. Following this up with the poking as he had done when he made the discovery, out came the drawer with the papers in it just as he had found them. Handing the drawer to the excited girl, she ran over the papers till she found the will and opened it and saw that she was the possessor of a splendid estate.

Then she fell back in a faint, or collapse.

Mary Cowdry was not especially sorry that an heir had been found. The estate was of no especial use to her, and she had no one to whom to leave it. She agreed, in consideration of Miss Peck's settling an annuity upon her sufficient for her support, to turn the property over without any process of law. This arrangement was carried out, and Emily Marston's daughter stepped from the position of schoolteacher to millionairess.

When the beneficiary came to ask Edward Carr what she could do for him to show her appreciation of what he had done for her he said that she had done a great deal—all she could do—already. He had been told and had believed that he would be nothing but a putterer and would never be of use to himself or any one else. He had the satisfaction of having brought a rightful heir to her estate, and that was quite enough for a man of whom nothing whatever had been expected.

Whether or not the heiress was caught by this frank modesty, whether she considered that there was but one way to pay the debt she owed, she finally discharged it by giving herself to the man who had made her rich. She takes great pleasure in humoring her husband's taste for old things, and, as for the desk in which the will was found, she has had it inlaid with gold.

What Any Woman Knew.

"My dear," remarked Jones, who had just finished reading a book on "The Wonders of Nature," "this really is a remarkable work. Nature is marvelous! Stupendous! When I read a work like this it makes me think how puerile how insignificant is man."

"Huh!" sniffed his better half. "A woman doesn't have to wade through 400 pages to find out the same thing."

TORTURED NO LONGER WITH ASTHMA

Sometimes, He Had To Sit Up All Night For Weeks At A Time—Suffered For 15 Years Until He Cured Himself With "Fruit-a-tives".

D. A. WHITE, ESQ.

21 Wallace Ave., Toronto, Dec. 22nd. 1913

"Having been a great sufferer from Asthma for a period of fifteen years(sometimes having to sit up nights for weeks at a time) I began the use of "Fruit-a-tives" These wonderful tablets relieved me of Indigestion, and through the continued use of same, I am no longer distressed with that terrible disease, Asthma, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" which are worth their weight in gold to anyone suffering as I did. I would heartily recommend them to all sufferers from Asthma, which I believe is caused or aggravated by Indigestion".

D. A. WHITE

Asthma is a disease of the Nerves. It usually attacks those of a highly strung nervous system—those whose nerves are easily affected by any disturbance of digestion. This is why 98% of those who suffer with Asthma, also suffer with Indigestion, Dyspepsia or Constipation. In Mr. White's case, his Asthma was cured at the same time that his Indigestion was cured.

Why? Because "Fruit-a-tives" acts directly on stomach, bowels, kidneys and skin. "Fruit-a-tives" cleans the whole system of the poisons that are irritating the nerves. "Fruit-a-tives" sweetens the stomach, insures sound digestion and healthy appetite. "Fruit-a-tives" is a positive cure for Asthma and Hay Fever.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BABY HAD DYSENTERY

Had Two Doctors, But No Result

WAS CURED BY THE USE OF

DR. FOWLER'S

EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

Mrs. Martin Farraher, Dogherty Corner, N.B., writes: "I can very strongly recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for Dysentery and Summer Complaints. My little girl, at the age of two years, had the dysentery very bad. We had two doctors, but with no result. My mother brought me a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and when half the bottle was used the little girl was running around playing with her dolls with great delight and joy to the family, for we did not think she would ever get better."

Imitators have even gone so far as to imitate our wrapper in color and style, and have adopted similar names, such as Strawberry Compound, Extract of Strawberry, Wild Strawberry Compound, etc., which preparations they have been trying to sell as the genuine, at a bigger profit to themselves, but unfortunately not to the consumers, who sometimes have had to employ medical aid afterwards.

Do not be led into taking a substitute for "Dr. Fowler's" and thus endanger your life.

THE OLD BOOTJACK

Time Was When It Proved a Real Friend In Every Home.

JOYS OF A PAIR OF BOOTS.

Getting Them Off When They Were Hard and Wrinkled Was a Struggle, but Getting Them on Was Often a Test of Strength and Endurance.

Many boys and young men of these days who have heard more or less about the old time bootjacks have probably never seen one, because with the abandonment of the wearing of boots by men and boys the bootjack went out of fashion. In the old days, especially in the winters, the man or boy who wore anything but boots was rare and the bootjack was a necessary article in every house.

Boots were worn without rubbers, and frequently to keep out the snow and the slush they were treated to an application of mutton tallow or some other greasy substance, but these applications did not always keep the feet dry nor the leather soft. The leg of the boot in the vicinity of the ankles was sure to have deep, heavy wrinkles, and when the boots got wet and then dried on the owner's feet the wrinkles became hard, and it was no easy matter to get those boots off. It generally required considerable labor over the bootjack. It required tugging and tugging, and after the job was finally accomplished the boots would generally be left near the stove for the night to get a thorough drying out for the morning.

Getting the hard boots on in the mornings was always more of a job than getting them off the night before. If the wrinkles at the ankles were hard at the time the boots were taken off they were even harder and stiffer in the morning, and that added to the task of getting them on. The owner would shove his foot down into the leg of the boot, the forefingers would be shoved through the straps, and the haul at getting the boots on would begin.

At first the haul would be a straight one, with the boot resting on the floor, and while the hauling was in process the weight of the body would be exercised in shoving the foot into the boot. The counters of the old time leather boots were naturally hard, but after the leather had become wet and had dried out they were still harder and invariably it was a hard task to get the heel down. It was always a tremendous relief to get the edge of a stocking heel over the inside of the counter, because with that the great difficulty was overcome, and then the foot would slip naturally into its resting place in the boot.

Invariably a rest was desired after the first boot was on before the task of getting on the second was tackled, and often the practice of kicking the boots on was resorted to. The man or boy would first get his forefingers into the straps of his boot, and as he pulled he would kick the toe of the boot against the wall or baseboard. In houses where there were boys the marks made by kicking on the boots were always to be seen. Of course, this had a tendency to wear out the toes, but then many of the boots were built to meet this "kicking" game.

Some of the boots were re-enforced with brass toe pieces, a trifle over a quarter of an inch in depth, and these were fastened into the boot between the upper and the welt and shaped something after a horseshoe. Boots supplied with these brass pieces—and they made this kind for men as well as boys—would always stand more "kicking" before the leather was worn through and a visit to the cobbler's was made necessary.

The bootjack, though it has disappeared now, was then to be found in every home. Bootjacks generally were of home manufacture, and one would last for many years. They were so easy to make that some families would have a number of them, so that there would be no occasion for waiting should one member of the family want the bootjack while another member was using it. A hammer, some nails, lumber and a saw were the requisites.

To make a bootjack a piece of board about twelve or fifteen inches long and four or five inches wide was obtained. A piece the shape of a V would be sawed from one end of the board and then a lift consisting of a piece of board about an inch in width and an inch high would be nailed on the underside a short distance below the small point of the V. That raised the V end from the floor and gave a place to put the heel in when it was desired to pull off the boot. This in effect completed the bootjack, with the exception of the hole by which to hang it up.

In the days when boots were so generally worn augurs were not as common in the homes as they are nowadays, when about every household has a small kit of carpenter's tools, but getting a hole in the bootjack was an easy matter. It was done by heating the stoke poker in the kitchen stove until it became red hot, and with it to burn a hole through the bootjack about an inch from the end opposite the V, and the bootjack was completed. Bootjacks made in the way outlined have done service in many families for generations.

HE CARRIED DESPATCHES.

Sir Hugh McCalmont Distinguished Himself in Rebellion of '70.

Major-General Sir Hugh McCalmont, the Ulsterite leader, whose splendid country residence, Abgey Lands, in Antrim, was destroyed by fire by the militant suffragette arson squad some weeks ago, will be remembered by Canadian veterans of the Red River Expedition of 1870 as the dashing Captain McCalmont of the 9th Lancers, who, happening to be traveling in America when the expedition was formed, made his way to Wolseley's camp at Prince Arthur's Landing or Port Arthur and accompanied the expedition to Fort Garry as a volunteer. Colonel Wolseley had already filled all of the staff appointments, but detailed the lancer captain to take charge of a boat's crew, and in his official diary Wolseley records how one day he passed McCalmont when he was working hard with his men pulling his heavy boat over a steep incline in a portage 120 feet high! After the force reached and took possession of Fort Garry, Wolseley was anxious to get despatches through to the Government, but hesitated to use the usual couriers and mails via the United States for fear the packages would be interfered with by the Fenians and other sympathizers. Captain McCalmont solved the difficulty by volunteering to take charge of the commanding officer's despatches and carry it to a place where it could be safely mailed. So Sir Hugh was the man who brought the first official reports of the successful accomplishment of the objects of the expedition to the British and Canadian Governments. Soon after returning to England from Canada, he transferred from the 9th Lancers to the 7th Hussars and later he transferred to the 4th Dragoons.

Capt. McCalmont served in the expedition to the Gold Coast and in Armenia, receiving therefore the brevet of major. He was A.D.C. to Sir Garnet Wolseley in South Africa, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the brevet of lieut.-colonel. He took part in the expedition against the Maoris and was again mentioned in despatches. In the Egyptian campaign he took part in most of the battles, including both actions at Gassassin, Tel-el-Kebir and the capture of Cairo, being again mentioned in despatches and receiving the 3rd class Medjidie. For his services during the Nile expedition he was mentioned in despatches and received the brevet of colonel and the C.B. He afterwards commanded the Cork District and retired in 1906. Major-General McCalmont was born in the historic mansion burned down the other day and was educated at Eton. His wife, the Hon Rose Bingham, as the second daughter of the fourth Baron Clanmorris. He has represented North Antrim in the British House of Commons in the Conservative interest.—Chesterfield in The Family Herald.

SHE FINISHED THE STORY.

Gladstone Couldn't Whistle, but His Wife Could and Did.

Apparently the powers of Mr. Gladstone as a whistler were somewhat limited, judging by the amusing story told by the Rev. T. Selby Hearay in "Attic Salt." Mr. Gladstone and Dean Wellesley were schoolfellows at Eton and the friendship there commenced continued throughout life. When they were both in the sixties they met at a little dinner party at the deanery at Windsor, and the great statesman jocularly said across the table to the dean:

"I say, old friend, I have got a good story for you about Harry Phillpotts bishop of Exeter."

Upon which Mrs. Gladstone hastily interfered:

"William, you must not tell that story until the servants have left the room."

When the psychological moment arrived Mr. Gladstone said:

"You know, Wellesley, that Bishop Phillpotts during his old age acquired the habit of sitting up late at night, with his chaplain. Well, one night he was comfortably ensconced in his study chair, with feet against the mantelpiece, dreamily looking into the fire, when he heard footsteps at the door and the noise of a dress behind him.

"Without looking up he said in a very endearing voice, thinking the intruder to be his wife, 'What can I do for you, my little darling?' To his great astonishment the trespasser proved to be not his wife, but his wife's maid. And the only way in which the poor bishop could give expression to his feelings was by a long drawn out, subdued whistle."

Mr. Gladstone at this juncture said "I cannot manage the whistle, so I will ask Catherine to give it," and Mrs Gladstone finished the story by giving the long drawn out whistle, to the delight not only of the dean, but also of all the guests.

Much Pain From Kidney Disease

Doctored in Vain Until Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Were Used.

Kidney derangements are often associated with disorders of the liver and bowels, and under these conditions ordinary kidney medicines usually fail to effect cure. It is because of their unique, combined action on the liver, kidneys and bowels that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so generally successful, even in the most complicated cases.

Mr. Emanuel Bernard, farmer, St. Paul's, Kent County, N.B., writes:—"About eighteen years ago my wife was bad with kidney disease, and suffered greatly from headaches, pains in bowels and stomach, and her heart was affected. For a year she was treated by her doctor, with no apparent benefit. She then used five boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with most satisfactory results. This gave us such a good opinion of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills that we always keep them in the house to be used for all derangements of the kidneys, liver and bowels." GERMANY'S ULTIMATUMS TO RUSSIA & FRANCE

GERMANY DEMANDS THAT RUSSIA SHALL STOP MOBILIZING WITHIN TWELVE HOURS

Kaiser Also Requests France to Say What Her Position Will Be In Case of War Between Germany and Russia---Italy Will Remain Neutral---King George Sends Urgent Message to Kaiser

FRENCH TRAINS ARE SEIZED BY GERMANS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—That Germany has addressed an ultimatum to Russia demanding that mobilization shall be stopped within twelve hours, and that a question has also been addressed to France in regard to her attitude in certain contingencies, was the information contained in a despatch to the Daily News from Berlin, timed at two o'clock this morning. The correspondent declared that general mobilization has been ordered in Paris.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—Germany ... an ultimatum to France requires France to inform Germany within eighteen hours whether in case of war between Germany and Russia, France would remain neutral. The German ambassador to Italy also asked to be informed as to Italy's attitude in the event of war between Germany and Austria-Hungary on one side, and Russia and France on the other side. Though Italy's reply was not given, a Rome newspaper declares that Italy's treaty with allies does not oblige her to take arms, and that she will remain neutral throughout the war, but would not be hostile as long as her interests were not infringed.

PARIS, France, Aug. 1.—Border conditions have been brought to a critical stage due to German troops stopping French trains, seizing locomotives and tearing up tracks. It is reported that a detachment of German cavalry crossed the border and entered France, which inflamed the French, although the Germans immediately withdrew at Armanvilliers on frontier. French Railway men were forced to their own territory. Motor cars carrying tourists were seized by German troops and the occupants were sent back to French soil.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—The Bank of England to-day increased the discount rate from eight to the prohibitive rate of ten per cent. This occurred only once before, forty-three years ago. Five hundred persons were in line outside the bank when it opened to-day, and the streets were thronged with curious people, and the scenes of yesterday were repeated. The line-up include many who want to change wages into gold, realising that if the crisis continued, notes would become unchangeable. Notes are usually refused at summer resorts. There was nothing like a panic, however, nor even excitement. National penny bank customers, mostly working people, closed, but caused no excitement whatever.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—The King to-day sent a urgent message to the Russian Emperor in an effort to avert war. The North German Gazette, Berlin, official German organ declares that after Russia gave orders to mobilize the Kaiser sent a final telegram to the Czar saying responsibility for security made it necessary for the Germans to adopt defensive measures. The Kaiser also said he had done all he could to keep the world's peace, and responsibility for threatening calamity did not rest with him. The Kaiser had always been friendly to Russia and the peace of Europe could still be maintained of Russia would cease threatening Germany and Austria-Hungary.

ERNST OF HESSE

Grand Duke Ernst of Hesse, brother of Empress Elizabeth Feodorovna of Russia, who was reported sent to St. Petersburg by Emperor William in a last endeavour to arrange for peace. To-day he is said to be still in Germany.

ALL HOPE IS GONE

Never Within the Memory of Living Man Has England Faced a Similar Position

RECALLED TO COLOURS

LONDON, July 31—For a short out break the war situation could not be blacker. The hope of maintaining peace is practically abandoned. Never within the memory of living man has England faced a similar position. Other wars have been fought overseas, but this war, thanks to the advance of aeronautics may bring immediate fighting even over London. The most elaborate precautions are being taken, but many of these cannot, for patriotic reasons, be detailed. The main danger comes from small raids or small desperate parties. To guard against these, the military and police now patrol and hold every dock, wharf, and landing stage. Arsenals like Woolwich are held by considerable bodies of troops.

Recalled to Colours.

Every soldier and sailor has been urgently recalled to the colours. Special reserve sections of the territorial have been called up and the authorities fully recognise that they must guard against danger from raiding Zeppelins or other air craft. It is anticipated that should hostilities commence Lord Kitchener will become the commander-in-chief and Sir John French chief of staff. Sir John French yesterday had a long consultation with the War Office.

The second division of the Army has been partly mobilised for Aldershot practice work, the authorities carefully explaining that this mobilisation has no connection with the European situation, being merely routine military exercises.

Stock Exchange Paralyzed.

The Stock Exchange is paralysed, and most prices are merely nominal, there being no buyers. Great masses of securities poured in from the continent, vainly await purchasers. Insurance rates are rising hourly. The insurance against Britain being engaged in a continental war is twenty five per cent. or covering the risk of war between any of six European powers. Seventy-five per cent. of the people have even insured their securities stored in London safe deposits.

The food prices tend to rise sharply, but no grave inconvenience has as yet been felt. Bread is a halfpenny dearer, but ordinary business continues as usual.

I am unable to find any signs yet of hoarding gold which is creating such trouble in Paris, where business is practically suspended in the great shops owing to the lack of cash cafes refusing to change notes even for ten francs. English sovereigns are fetching a premium of a franc. Each bank is refusing to cash checks save in notes.

First Hostile Move.

Much speculation continues over first hostile moves should war begin. Russia can place immediately 4,000,000 combatant soldiers on the fighting line with a further similar force quicky available. Her object must be to gain time in order to complete the mobilisation. She may make a merely nominal resistance until the line of the Vistula is reached. Germany will immediately mobilise two million reserves, many of whom are here. Her military advisers are known to favour a direct attack upon French line fortresses rather than break the Belgian neutrality, believing that with heavy sacrifices they can, thanks to their admirable Howitzers, beak through. They are prepared to treat 100,000 wounded on the western frontiers within six weeks of the war.

BRITISH WAR FLEET STRIPPED FOR ACTION WAITS IN NORTH SEA

German Battle Squadron Lies Off the Straits of Holland in the Same Condition

FRANCE SEIZES TELEPHONES

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1. — The British war fleet, stripped for action, is mobilized in the North Sea. The German battle squadron in the same condition, is off the Straits of Holland. Both await orders. One German squadron is already reported stopping merchant vessels demanding their destination and manifests. Scout cruisers of both nations are patrolling the coast. Both fleets are being augmented as fast as possible.

STEAMERS RECALLED.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Four North German Lloyd steamers were ordered to return to American ports by wireless to-day, the Willehad, now at Montreal, to steam to Boston and await orders, the Freiderich der Gross, which sailed from Baltimore Wednesday to return to Baltimore, the Neckarx, which sailed from Galveston Wednesday, to return to New York and Baltimore, and the Grosser Kurfurst sailed from New York Thursday to return there. From London comes news that all tourists abroad are rushing back to America, storming the steamship offices for bookings. The English and French lines are reaping harvest.

SEIZE THE TELEPHONE.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 1.—All telephone communication between France and England was cut off without warning at two o'clock this afternoon. The French government has seized all lines including the English submarine. Telephone communication out of business, this was done to make the censorship complete.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The Bank of England reamined open yesterday for a long time after its regular closing hour, making all payments that were demanded.

SERVIANS DEFEATED.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The period of ultimatum to Russia, expired at noon to-day. It is officially announced here, the Servian government admitted that the Serb troops had been defeated by Austrians near Potcha. The Servians lost a hundred killed and two hundred wounded, but inflicted heavy losses on their foes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1. — Some of the houses have private advices from Washington to the effect that the rate decision to be published in the course of the afternoon would be much more favourable than expected.

Butter Was Up To 30c Pound

There was a good market this morning, about 225 farmers' wives and daughters were selling in the inside market. Prices ruled high. Spring chickens of very small size were fetching $1 a pair; butter has soared to 30c per lb. Eggs brought 23c per dozen. The outside market was very good also; a large quantity of vegetables being offered.

The stall holders are conforming with the new regulations as regards exhibiting their prices and weights of commodities. They appear to have got over their objections at what they seemed to consider new-fangled ideas.

The question of flies in the inside market is one well worthy of consideration. These pests were in evidence in every direction, and it is suggested that the use of fly screens, which would be an outlay really very inconsiderable, would go fat to mitigate this nuisance. This is a commonsense idea; not a mere fad.

Legal Committee Handled Claims

At a meeting of the Legal Committee last night City Solicitor Gordon reported that he did not think the city was liable for damages claimed by E. J. Hickey. The committee therefore decided to take no action with the claim. Mr. Gordon also reported that he had settled the claim of Mrs. Jane Welsh for $40.

ANOTHER GRUESOME DISCOVERY

More Bones Found Near Dr. Robinson's House

TAMWORTH, Ont., July 31—A discovery which adds another mystery and sensation to the disappearance from Stakeholder Gibson right away, made this afternoon by Mrs. George Bell, who found in an ash can, at the rear of the Robinson home, a human leg bone, about one foot long, with some dried flesh still remaining attached.

With it were several other smaller bones, all of which were identified as human by Dr. Wilson of Tamworth.

In the can were also a bottle which had held ergot, the steel ribs of a purse, several corset steels and some small bits of mattress. It was evident from their condition that all had been there for some time.

The whole matter is the most profound mystery, as the bones which had been severed from Miss York's legs were believed to have been found in the furnace of the house. Her purse had also been found, or what was taken for it. The meaning of this new discovery is causing much speculation.

Question Of New Main Held Over

The public Utilities Commission visited Romaine street and inspected the spot near Monaghan Road, at which it is proposed to lay a new main. The matter was laid over till Monday for discussion.

Chemong Park Pavilion New Lighting System

Mr. J. A. Jobe, Bridgenorth, has had installed in his pavilion at Chemong Park an up-to-date system of lighting put in by the Davis Acetylene Company, of Niagara Falls. The new lights will be used for the first time at the dance to be held on Thursday evening next. Mr. Jobe is helping to make Chemong Park very popular this season.

He also intends to have his house and store lighted by the same light which goes to show his confidence in the system.

PETITION OF AYLMER ST. MEN WAS DISMISSED

Objected to Paving of the Street Between Hunter and Murray Streets but the Railway and Municipal Board Dismissed their Petition.

The Ontario Railway and Municipal Board has decided against the ratepayers on Aylmer street, between Hunter and Murray streets, in their petition objecting to the paving in front of their properties. It will be remembered that they presented a list of objections against a street pavement between Hunter and Murray streets. In a lengthy statement the Board has decided that the petition is incompetent, that there are no elements of hardship or injustice in the laying of the pavement, and hence the petition is dismissed.

Market Hall Improvement Is Required

Peterborough, in the interests of both the citizens and the farmers and gardeners, should spare no reasonable effort to improve the conditions. A veteran to the Market Hall, which was thronged by over 200 farmers' wives and daughters, would notice that the wares offered for sale attracted a multitude of flies, which had free entry by the open windows and open doors.

It would add greatly to the common convenience and good temper of both buyers and sellers if the windows were provided with screens, and if screen doors were also provided. It is good business to make our market as attractive and comfortable as possible and a very little display of intelligent interest and a trifling expenditure of money would do much to remove and prevent the nuisance of the house fly.

POLICE COURT

In the Police Court this morning Albert Crowley pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault upon his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Maude Crouter.

Chief Thompson stated that the defendant went into Mrs. Crouter's house, broke the stove and struck her. It was through drink, pleaded the prisoner.

The Magistrate fined him $5, or in default of payment, ten days in jail.

Hector Smith was fined $2 and Fred McGee $5.75 for drunkenness.

Patrick Tour was remanded for a week on the same charge, and Augusto Sanitio was allowed to go on condition that he leave town.

John Doble was charged with failure to stop when passing a street car with his automobile, thus endangering the lives of the alighting passengers. He was fined $5.

BIDS FOR STOCKS JUST HALF OF PRICES QUOTED THURSDAY

A Wire To A. H. Stratton & Co, Stock Broker From His Correspondent Giving Reason For Closing New York Stock Exchange To-Day

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Liverpool and London exchanges will be opened Monday.

NEW YORK, July 31.—Just a few minutes before 10 o'clock the Stock Exchange decided to keep closed, likely because the indications were that all the active issues would open at about half their yesterday's closing prices, which would have resulted in failures of probably half the stock exchange houses, thus the best bid for L.V. which closed 122 yesterday, was 60 just before the opening, and I am told that a block of Po. was offered for which no bid at all could be obtained. There is absolutely no remedy for the present situation, nothing like it has ever happened before. Wheat declined about 8 points to-day from yesterday's high figure, which might indicate an improvement in the foreign situation, or it might mean that the decline is due to a lack of shipping facilities. I shall probably know by Monday what the situation will be. At the same time I think you are to be congratulated that you subscribed to a letter which was so precisely bearish from the top down. I will let you know to-morrow or Monday what to do next.

THE INTERNATIONAL "SAFE".

Financiers may not know as much of state secrets as government officials, but their interests makes them pretty shrewd prophets of probabilities nevertheless and the intimate relation of war and money, gives the men of finance something more definite than mere hints. There is evidence that the European capitalists consider that whether or not Great Britain is drawn into the war, her territory and her home stability will not be seriously disturbed. English and French bankers are drawing all their balances from Russia, Austria, and Germany, and the capitalists in these countries are transferring their money to London for safe keeping—as security against the uncertainties of war. This confidence in the "tight Little Isle," as a safe place to stow money is some comfort in these times of panic, and portents of cosmic disaster. War outside of our own country, waged or shared by ourselves is bad enough, but it is nothing to having our own soil the theatre of its horrors and devastation.

IMPERIAL YEAR BOOK

The issue of the "Imperial Year Book for the Dominion of Canada," edited by Mr. A. E. Southall, is the first literary celebration of Dominion Day—the first issue was on July, 1914, and Dominion Day will mark its annual recurrence. The book consists of 560 odd octavo pages, printed in close but clear type, giving a wealth of statistical information presented in well arranged detail. One cannot perceive one department of interest or importance relating to the national, provincial, civil, military, industrial, governmental, educational, social, religious, transportation, economic, sporting or other important interests of the Dominion and the provinces that is not concisely but comprehensively dealt with in the Imperial Year Book and rendered easily accessible and available by means of a copious index, topical and subjective.

The Imperial Year Book is unique among Canadian annuals in that it deals not only with Canadian interests but in a similar excellent manner with the British Empire, the self-governing Dominions, the Crown colonies and protectorates under British sovereignty; the same amplitude of condensed and varied information is given. Very timely will be the pages relating to the naval and military strength of the United Kingdom and the Empire, now that the dogs of war are straining at the leash. Altogether the Imperial Year Book of Canada is a most valuable encyclopedia of information regarding Canada and the rest of the Empire, a credit both to Canada, the compiler and printers (John Lovell & Company, Montreal.) The Examiner regards it as one of the most valuable, and for its particular scope, the most valuable of the books of statistical reference on its shelves—invaluable to the statesman, the journalist, the professions and the man of affairs.

CHURCH CHOIRS AND THEIR CRITICS.

A few days ago the Examiner published a communication criticising St. John's choir. While good judgment may not have been sufficiently deferred to in printing it, it served to show the somewhat unreasoning attitude of some occupants of the pew and some church goes to the church choir. Whether or not the writer's dicta upon the musical work and merit of the choir were just, is hardly worth considering; on such points there will always be difference of opinion; and those who count are satisfied and well pleased. We shall always have persons who, if they don't know it all, come very nearly to it—in their own opinion. In regard to the attendance of choir members, the reference of the correspondent was particularly unhappy. There is perhaps no choir in the city so numerically well kept together, and so loyal to its leader and the church it so faithfully leads in the services of the church, as the choir of St. John's. There are members in it who have hardly missed a rehearsal or service for perhaps a score of years, and one member at least who has been every week in his place during the past thirty years.

It is very easy for the laymen to come to church occasionally and sit comfortably in his seat and criticise the work of a church choir. In this matter there is too much forgetfulness of what church services, clergymen, ministers and congregations owe to a church choir; too much forgetfulness of the personal sacrifice, the really hard work, the devotion to duty that are demanded from, and generally nobly supplied, by the church choir. Compulsory attendance at church at least twice every Sunday, shower or sun, while the congregation they serve are individually inclined to regard an umbrella as an incongruous and superfluous accompaniment to attendance at church. The whole congregation of a church can absent itself individually and by detachments, one time and another, but woe and condemnation to the members of a church choir who would be as they seldom are, similarly delinquent.

One cannot think of a voluntary organization that serves without fee or material reward so faithfully, with so much personal sacrifice, as a church choir. The choirs should not be judged by the standard of organizations whose members are paid for their services and can be held to strict account and can reasonably be criticised without disregard of the spirit of the proverb that disparages the questionable courtesy and taste of looking a gift horse in the mouth. If half of the members of our church congregations should take their cue from the choirs in regard to regularity of attendance and devotion to duty, the vacant pew in our churches would be as rare as the vacant seat in our choir stalls, and if the divine test, let him that is without sin—in his place in the congregation—were applied, mighty few stones would be thrown by the critics of the pew.

ROAD MAINTENANCE.

Are the streets of Peterborough to get the attention Mayor Buller promised them a few weeks ago? At the "city beautiful" banquet in the Oriental Hotel, Mayor Buller and Alderman Duncan agreed upon the advisability of doing something to maintain streets in good condition. It was proposed to have a man with a horse and cart go over the streets and "doctor" them in places where such attention was necessary—to insert a stitch in time to save nine.

It is obvious that the best built street can only continue to be good by constant attention to maintenance; to the repair of small defects in time to prevent greater defects developing. The principle of proper maintenance is regarded in nearly every department but city street care. A farmer keeps his barn shingled to keep his crops dry; a new shingle here and there will do the work.

It is by observance of this principle that the country roads of Great Britain, even in the poorest districts, are superior to the average city street in Peterborough and other towns and cities in Ontario. They are thus better by reason of being kept in repair.

A man, generally an old man, who would not be equal to more strenuous work, is provided with a horse and cart and a heap of road metal at convenient distances. This man goes over his beat as regularly and religiously as a "section boss" on a railway.

If he sees a depression in the roadway he halts his horse and, with the metal from his cart, repairs it at once.

He does this every day and all the time, and the same is done over all the principal highways every day by men like him, year after year.

Some of these men and these horses become veterans in the service. Mr. John E. Belcher, C.E., who is a Cork Irishman, to the manner born, tells of a man and his horse who worked long together, and the horse grew so wise and observant that when he came to a hole in the highway that needed repair he would stop of his own accord to allow his master to make the necessary repairs.

We should have better streets, more lasting streets, get better returns for the money spent in building streets in this city, and in other cities, if those in charge of our streets showed as much "horse sense" as the old nag who had his Irish wits sharpened by years of humble, but faithful and efficient work, that, collectively, gives his country the title to having of the best country roads in the world.

The demands for city money are growing so numerous and heavy that the streets are liable to be more neglected than ever. We see little prospect of effective work on street construction outside of the area of paved streets. But we can certainly scrape together enough money to give our streets a little systematic touch of repair so as to keep them from becoming absolutely impassable.

It is admitted that there is some spasmodic and scattered attempts at filling holes that develop in streets; but for a long time after some of these cases of "repair" the street is in a worse condition than before. Unscreened gravel is carelessly dumped into a hole, and all the large stones left to be scattered about the street, or to be pounded below the surface by the bumps of waggon and auto car wheels with little benefit to the vehicles and less immediate benefit to the street surface.

THE MANITOBA MACHINE.

The fact that the Liberal candidate in Le Pas, where the election was to have taken place to-morrow, has retired would indicate that the Roblin-Rogers machine is not completely smashed yet. It is not a particularly sensitive machine, the two metals in its construction being brass and gold. —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

World's Greatest Short Stories

THE STORY OF RICHARD DOUBLEDICK

By CHARLES DICKENS

CHARLES DICKENS

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. Mary Stewart Cutting named "The Story of Richard Doubledick," by Charles Dickens, as her selection for this high honor in the world of fiction.

MARY STEWART CUTTING

PART I.

IN the year 1799 a relative of mine came tramping down on foot to this town of Chatham.

My relative came to Chatham to enlist in a cavalry regiment if a cavalry regiment would have him; if not, to take King George's shilling from any corporal or sergeant who would put a bunch of ribbons in his hat. His object was to get shot, but he thought he might as well ride to his death as be at the trouble of walking.

My relative's Christian name was Richard, but he was better known as Dick. He dropped his own surname on the road down and took up that of Doubledick. He was passed as Richard Doubledick, age twenty-two, height five feet ten, native place Exmouth, which he had never been near in his life. There was no cavalry in Chatham when he limped over the bridge there with half a shoe to his dusty foot, so he enlisted into a regiment of the line and was glad to get drunk and forget all about it.

You are to know that this relative of mine had gone wrong and run wild. His heart was in the right place, but it was sealed up. He had been betrothed to a good and beautiful girl whom he had loved better than she—or perhaps even he—believed, but in an evil hour he had given her cause to say to him solemnly: "Richard, I will never marry another man. I will live single for your sake, but Mary Marshall's lips"—her name was Mary Marshall—"never address another word to you on earth! Go, Richard! Heaven forgive you!" This finished him. This brought him down to Chatham. This made him Private Richard Doubledick, with a determination to be shot.

There was not a more dissipated and reckless soldier in Chatham barracks in the year 1799 than Private Richard Doubledick. He associated with the dregs of every regiment, he was as seldom sober as he could be and was constantly under punishment. It became clear to the whole barracks that Private Richard Doubledick would very soon be flogged.

Now the captain of Richard Doubledick's company was a young gentleman not above five years his senior, whose eyes had an expression in them which affected Private Richard Doubledick in a very remarkable way. They were bright, handsome, dark eyes—what are called laughing eyes generally, and, when serious, rather steady than severe—but they were the only ones now left in his narrowed world that Private Richard Doubledick could not stand. Unabashed by evil report and punishment, defiant of everything else and everybody else, he had but to know that those eyes looked at him for a moment, and he felt ashamed. He could not so much as salute Captain Taunton in the street like any other officer. He was reproached and confused, Doubledick the more possibility of the captain's looking at him. In his worst moments he would rather turn back and go any distance out of the way than encounter those two handsome, dark, bright eyes.

One day, when Private Richard Doubledick came out of the Black Hole, prison he had been passing the last night and forty hours and in which retreat he spent a good deal of his time, he was ordered to betake himself to Captain Taunton's quarters. In the white and squalid state of a man just out of the Black Hole, he had less vanity than ever for being seen by the captain, but he was not so mad yet as to disobey orders, and consequently went up to the terrace overlooking the parade ground, where the officers' quarters were, twisting and breaking in his hands as he went along a bit of the straw that had formed the decorative furniture of the Black Hole.

"Come in!" cried the captain when he knocked with his knuckles at the door. Private Richard Doubledick pulled off his cap, took a step forward and felt very conscious that he stood in the light of the dark, bright eyes.

There was a slight pause. Private Richard Doubledick had put the straw in his mouth and was gradually doubling it up into his windpipe and choking himself.

"Doubledick," said the captain, "do you know where you are going to?"

"To the devil, sir," faltered Doubledick.

"Yes," returned the captain. "And very fast."

Private Richard Doubledick turned the straw of the Black Hole in his mouth and made a miserable salute of acquiescence.

"Doubledick," said the captain, "since I am, "see this in you, Doubledick, than I would see 5,000 guineas counted out upon this table for a gift to my good mother. Have you a mother?"

"I am thankful to say she is dead, sir."

"If your praises," returned the captain, "were sounded from mouth to mouth through the whole regiment, through the whole army, through the whole country, you would wish she had lived to say, with pride and joy, 'He is my son!'"

"Spare me, sir," said Doubledick. "She would never have heard any good of me. She would never have had any pride and joy in owning herself my mother. Love and compassion she might have had, and would have always had, I know, but not—spare me, sir! I am a broken wretch, quite at your mercy!" And he turned his face to the wall and stretched out his imploring hand.

"My friend"— began the captain.

"God bless you, sir!" sobbed Private Richard Doubledick.

"You are at the crisis of your fate. Hold your course unchanged a little longer and you know what must happen. I know even better than you can imagine, that, after that has happened, you are lost. No man who could shed those tears could bear those marks."

"I fully believe it, sir," in a low, shivering voice said Private Richard Doubledick.

"But a man in any station can do his duty," said the young captain, "and in doing it can earn his own respect, even if his case should be so very unfortunate and so very rare that he can earn no other man's. A common soldier, poor brute though you called him just now, has this advantage in the stormy times we live in, that he always does his duty before a host of sympathising witnesses. Do you doubt that he may so do it as to be extolled through a whole regiment, through a whole army, through a whole country? Turn while you may yet retrieve the past and try."

"I will. I ask for only one witness, sir," cried Richard, with a bursting heart.

"I understand you. I will be a watchful and a faithful one."

I have heard from Private Richard Doubledick's own lips that he dropped down upon his knee, kissed that officer's hand, arose and went out of the light of the dark, bright eyes an altered man.

In that year, 1799, the French were in Egypt, in Italy, in Germany—where not? Napoleon Bonaparte had likewise begun to stir against us in India, and most men could read the signs of the great troubles that were coming on. In the very next year, when we formed an alliance with Austria against him, Captain Taunton's regiment was on service in India. And there was not a finer non-commissioned officer in it—no, nor in the whole line—than Corporal Richard Doubledick.

In 1801 the Indian army were on the coast of Egypt. Next year was the year of the proclamation of the short peace, and they were recalled. At that time Europe was known to Commando of men that whatever Captain Taunton

I entered his majesty's service, a boy of seventeen, I have been pained to see many men of promise going that road, but I have never been so pained to see a man determined to make the shameful journey as I have been, ever since you joined the regiment, to see you."

Private Richard Doubledick began to find a film stealing over the floor at which he looked, also to find the legs of the captain's breakfast table turning crooked, as if he saw them through water.

"I am only a common soldier, sir," said he. "It signifies very little what such a poor brute comes to."

"You are a man," returned the captain, with grave indignation, "of education and superior advantages, and if you say that, meaning what you say, you have sunk lower than I had believed. How low that must be I leave you to consider, knowing what I know of your disgrace and seeing what I see."

"I hope to get shot soon, sir," said Private Richard Doubledick, "and then the regiment and the world together will be rid of me."

The legs of the table were becoming very crooked. Doubledick, looking up to steady his vision, met the eyes that had so strong an influence over him. He put his hand before his own eyes, and the breast of his disgrace jacket swelled as if it would fly asunder.

"I would rather," said the young captain, with the dark, bright eyes, led there, close to him, ever at his side, firm as a rock, true as the sun and brave as Mars, would be certain to be found while life beats in their hearts that famous soldier, Sergeant Richard Doubledick.

Eighteen hundred and five, besides being the great year of Trafalgar, was a year of hard fighting in India. That year saw such wonders done by a sergeant major who cut his way single handed through a solid mass of men, recovered the colors of his regiment, which had been seized from the hand of a poor boy shot through the heart, and rescued his wounded captain, who was down and in a very jungle of horses' hoofs and sabers—saw such wonders done, I say, by this brave sergeant major that he was specially made the bearer of the colors he had won, and Ensign Richard Doubledick had risen from the ranks.

Sorely cut up in every battle, but always re-enforced by the bravest of men—for the fame of following the old colors, shot through and through, which Ensign Richard Doubledick had saved, inspired all breasts—this regiment fought its way through the peninsular war up to the investment of Badajos in 1812. Again and again it had been cheered through the British ranks until the tears had sprung into men's eyes at the mere hearing of the mighty British voice so exultant in their valor, and there was not a drummer boy but knew the legend that wherever the two friends, Major Taunton, with the dark, bright eyes, and Ensign Richard Doubledick, who was devoted to him, were seen to go, there the boldest spirits in the English army became wild to follow.

One day at Badajos—not in the great storming, but in repelling a hot sally of the besieged upon our men at work in the trenches, who had given way—the two officers found themselves running forward, face to face, against a party of French infantry, who made a stand. There was an officer at their head encouraging his men—a courageous, handsome, gallant officer of five and thirty, whom Doubledick saw hurriedly, almost momentarily, but saw well. He particularly noticed this officer waving his sword and rallying his men with an eager and excited cry when they fired in obedience to gesture and Major Taunton dropped.

It was over in ten minutes more and Doubledick returned to the spot where he had laid the best friend man ever had on a coat spread upon the wet clay. Major Taunton's uniform was opened at the breast and on his shirt were three little spots of blood.

"Dear Doubledick," said he, "I am dying."

"For the love of heaven, no!" exclaimed the other, kneeling down beside him and passing his arm round his neck to raise his head. "Taunton! My preserver, my guardian angel, my brother! Dearer, truer, kindest of human beings! Taunton! For God's sake!"

The bright, dark eyes—so very, very dark now in the pale face—smiled upon him, and the hand he had kissed thirteen years ago laid itself fondly on his breast.

"Write to my mother. You will see home again. Tell her how we became friends. It will comfort her, as it comforts me."

He spoke no more, but faintly signed for a moment towards his hair as it fluttered in the wind. The ensign understood him. He smiled again when he saw that and, gently turning his face over on the supporting arm as if for rest, died, with his hand upon the breast in which he had revived a soul.

No dry eye looked on Ensign Richard Doubledick that melancholy day. He buried his friend on the field and became a lone, bereaved man. Beyond his duty he appeared to have but two remaining cares in life—one, to preserve the little packet of hair he was to give Taunton's mother; the other, to encounter that French officer who had rallied the men under those fire Taunton fell. A new legend now began to circulate among our troops, and it was that when he and the French officer came face to face once more there would be weeping in France.

The war went on, and through it went the exact picture of the French officer on the one side and the bodily reality upon the other, until the battle of Toulouse was fought. In the returns sent home appeared these words: "Severely wounded, but not dangerously, Lieutenant Richard Doubledick."

At midsummer time in the year 1814 Lieutenant Richard Doubledick, now a browned soldier seven and thirty years of age, came home to England invalided. He brought the hair with him, near his heart. Many a French officer had he seen since that day; many a dreadful night, in searching with men and lanterns for his wounded, had he relieved French officers lying disabled, but the mental picture and the reality had never come together.

Though he was weak and suffered pain, he lost not an hour in getting down to Frome, in Somersetshire, where Taunton's mother lived. In the sweet, compassionate words that naturally present themselves to the mind tonight, "he was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow."

It was a Sunday evening, and the lady sat at her quiet garden-window reading the Bible; reading to herself in a trembling voice that very passage in it, as I have heard him tell. He heard the words, "Young man, I say unto thee, arise!"

He had to pass the window, and the bright, dark eyes of his debased time seemed to look at him. Her heart told her who he was: she came to the door quickly and fell upon his neck.

"He saved me from ruin, made me a human creature, won me from infamy and shame. O God, forever bless him! As he will, he will!"

"He will!" the lady answered. "I know he is in heaven!" Then she piteously cried, "But, oh, my darling boy, my darling boy!"

Never from the hour when Private Richard Doubledick enlisted at Chatham had the private, corporal, sergeant, sergeant major, ensign or lieutenant breathed his right name, or the name of Mary Marshall, or a word of the story of his life, into any ear except his recruiter's.

But that night, remembering the words he had cherished for two years, "Tell her how we became friends. It will comfort her as it comforts me," he related everything. It gradually seemed to him as if in his maturity he had recovered a mother. It gradually seemed to her as if in her bereavement she had found a son. During his stay in England, the quiet garden into which he had slowly and painfully crept a stranger, became the boundary of his home. When he was able to join his regiment in the spring he felt the garden thinking was the first time he had ever turned his face toward the old colors with a woman's blessing!

He followed them—so ragged, so scarred and pierced now, that they would scarcely hold together—to Quatre Bras and Ligny. He stood beside them in an awful stillness of many men, shadowy through the mist and grimness of a wet June forenoon, on the field of Waterloo. And down to that hour, the picture in his mind of the French officer had never been compared with the reality.

This famous regiment was in action early in the battle and received its first check in many an eventful year, when he was seen to fall. But it swept on to avenge him and left behind it no such creature in the world, of consciousness as Lieutenant Richard Doubledick.

Through pits of mire and pools of rain, along deep ditches, once roads, that were pounded and ploughed to pieces by artillery, heavy wagons, tramp of men and horses and the struggle of every wheeled thing that could carry wounded soldiers; jolted among the dying and dead, so disfigured by blood and mud as to be hardly recognizable for humanity; undisturbed by the moaning of men and the shrieks of horses, which, newly taken from the peaceful pursuits of life, could not endure the sight of the stragglers lying by the wayside, never to resume their toilsome journey; dead as to any sentient life that was in it, and yet alive—the form that had been Lieutenant Richard Doubledick, with whose praises England rang, was conveyed to Brussels. There it was tenderly laid down in hospital, and there it lay, week after week, through the long night sometimes, until the heartiest, spared by wary had ripened and was gathered in.

BIG CRACKS ON HAND AND FINGERS

Eczema for Three Years. Broke Out on Head in Scales. Itched and Burned Badly. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Lyons Brook, N. S.—"I suffered with eczema for three years. It started on my hands first in sores between my fingers and all over the palms of my hand and fingers were big cracks. Then it broke out on my head in scales. It itched and burned so badly I could not sleep. It was so itching and burning that I scratched and made sores and my hair came out awfully bad. I did not know what it was.

"I was treated for a long time and it did not do any good. I gave up my work for a month but as soon as I started doing my house-work again my hands got just as bad as ever. I used two bottles of ——— and it did not do any good. One day I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and decided to try them. I sent for a sample and I used them till I sent it stopped the itching and burning, so I got three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and that cured me." (Signed) Mrs. P. J. McKearney, May 27, 1913.

Not only are Cuticura Soap and Ointment most valuable in the treatment of eczemas and other disfiguring eruptions of skin and scalp, but no other emollients do so much for pimples, blackheads, red, rough skins, itching, scaly scalps, dandruff, dry, thin and falling hair, chapped hands and shapeless nails, nor do it so economically. Sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, write post-card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. D, Boston, U.S.A.

FALSE TEETH WHICH BUTTON ARE THE LATEST

LONDON, July 31.—False teeth buttoned in the mouth were discussed at the National Dentist Association sessions. The buttons are like clasps in the back of a woman's dress. The wise dentist, it is said, will always leave a few tooth roots or stumps in his patient's mouth. A capping is cemented to each root. A small ball is soldered to the capping. The denture being supplied with a clasp, the clasp will snap firmly over the ball. Each clasp will withstand a pull of seven pounds. They work just like those trouser buttons that coat button holes. The little ball is made of gold or platinum.

Frequently there are four buttons in a mouth. This means that a pull of twenty-eight pounds is necessary to unbutton the teeth. The wearer will need assistance to get them from his stumps.

But they need not be made so strong for all persons. The buttons in the mouth of a man who smokes a pipe or chews tobacco would be stronger than in the mouth of a woman who does not chew gum. Gum-chewers would need stronger buttons. If the mouth has no stumps, it can be fixed for the buttons just the same.

PALE AND SICKLY BOYS AND GIRLS

Need All the Strength That Good Red Blood Can Give

Youth is the time to lay the foundation for health. Every boy and girl should have plenty of pure, red blood and strong nerves. With thin, impure blood they start life with a handicap too great to win success and happiness. Pure, red blood means healthful growth, strong nerves, a clear brain, and a good digestion. In a word, pure blood is the foundation of health.

The signs of thin, impure blood are many and unmistakable. The pale, irritable boy or girl, who has no appetite or ambition, is always tired out, melancholy, short of breath, and who does not grow, strong, is the victim of anaemia, or bloodlessness—the greatest enemy of youth.

There is just one thing to do for these boys and girls—build up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. You cannot afford to experiment with other remedies, for there must be no guesswork in the treatment of anaemia. Through neglect or wrong treatment anaemia gradually develops into the pernicious form which is practically incurable. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills work directly on the blood, giving it just the elements which it lacks. In this way these Pills build up every organ and nerve in the body, thus developing strong, rugged boys and girls. Miss Anna Loseke, Grand Forks, B.C., says: "I think that before taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was one of the most miserable girls alive. I was hardly ever free from awful headaches, was as pale as a ghost, and could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. Now since taking the Pills the headaches have gone, my appetite is good and I am equal to almost any occupation, and you must be sure I will always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A PROMINENT LAWYER of this City took out a straight Life Policy of $1000.00, at age 28 in May, 1893, paying therefor an annual premium of $19.65. This he paid for 20 years, when the accumulated profits reduced the premium permanently to $10.25, subject to further yearly reduction. Thus he paid only $10.25 the twenty-first year. His annual dividend for the next year, in May last, reduced his 22nd premium to $4.30. Had he taken a Non-Par Policy he would have had to pay $17.80 annually, as long as he lived.

Local Man Is Appointed

Mr. E. P. Clarkson Chosen as the Canadian Manager For Dodge Brothers

Mr. E. P. Clarkson, well known in business and motoring circles throughout Canada, has been appointed Toronto District Representative for Dodge Brothers, Detroit, who are to make and market a motor car in the fall. Mr. Clarkson's appointment means that he will have charge of Dodge Bros.' sales throughout the Dominion of Canada, dating from August 1st, 1914.

At one time secretary and manager of the Sandringham Motor Works, Ltd., Mr. Clarkson later became connected with the Canadian General Electric Company, Ltd., first as Assistant Superintendent of Construction, then as Superintendent of Construction and later as manager and Sales Engineer of the Northern District. Leaving the employ of the electric company, he was for several years Chief Engineer and Managing Director of the Consolidated Motors, Ltd., of which concern he eventually became President. The Consolidated Motors, Ltd., established a national reputation as Canadaian distributors of several well-known motor cars, and Mr. Clarkson gained a wide acquaintance with motor car dealers throughout the Dominion while with that company. Mr. Clarkson has recently been Consulting Engineer for the Lundy Shovel and Tool Company, Ltd., of Peterborough and comes to Dodge Brothers from that company.

Dodge Brothers have been large manufacturers of motor car parts since the earliest days of the industry. In fact, it is said that their output of parts has been the largest in the country. Their works comprise twelve buildings with an aggregate of 18 1-3 acres of floor space.

Nothing definite about the proposed car is known, except that it will be moderate in price. Dodge Brothers are expert mechanics, keen business men, and the concern is backed by millions of dollars. It is generally conceded that the car will offer an exceptinal value.

In spite of the fact that no facts about price or specifications have been given out it is known that nearly 3,000 dealers have already applied for selling rights.

EXTENSION AUTHORISED

At a meeting of the Public Utilities Commissioner held yesterday afternoon a letter was read from the Peterborough Lock Company complaining that the present 1 1-2 inch pipe was inadequate for their service, and requesting a new 2 inch service. The matter was referred to the Engineer to report upon.

The following extension of mains were considered:

Barnardo Avenue to Cavour Street. Cost, $306.—Request laid over.

Smith street, easterly from present main. Cost, $540.70.—Granted.

Monaghan Road to 572 Romaine Street. Cost, $1,981.70, including hydrant, etc.

Mr. Matthews thought this matter sufficiantly important to warrant a visit to the vicinity by the Commission. A visit was therefore arranged.

The temporary appointment of Messrs. Henderson and McDonald, made by Mr. House, the engineer, the former at $70 and the latter at $40 a month, was confirmed.

Mr. Matthews reported that Mr. House had asked him if the relation between himself and Mr. Dobbin, the Superintendent of the Waterworks could be clearly defined, and that he (Mr. House) had suggested that all requisitions for materials should pass through his hands. The Commission instructed the two men to devise some system of stores, in order that Mr. House might be cognizant of every detail of the Department. It was clearly supposed that no friction could be allowed.

London Season Just Closed Showed Society Quite Mad

A London novelist, Philip Gibbs, writing of the social season, just closed, says:

"It has been a season of sensation. Never within living memory has the town been so given up to gaiety. Never in that time have its entertainments been so deliberately artificious in luxury and liberty. Never has the programme of the season been so filled with a thousand and one events, demanding the presence of society, or at least that section of it which has no duty but that of pleasure.

"It was the women who set the pace. At the very beginning of the season it was obvious that they were out for sensation, for audacity, for laughing defiance at old conventions, for a splendid time at all costs.

"Liberty first of all in dress and figure has been the order of the day issued by the modistes and is revealed in a startling way by the complete abandonment of petticoats and by the daylight saving bill, so to speak, as regards the upper portion of the costume, which has become as decollete as the evening dress of our respectable grandmothers.

"Yet, this was only the beginning of a new reign of liberty for women's limbs and women's tastes. They were not satisfied with such audacities, which are now the merest commonplace. They desired to appear in fancy dress show.

"How far were they really prepared to go? The opportunity was given society in such balls as those which took place in the Albert Hall and at the Savoy for dear charity's sake. Well, they went pretty far, and even strong men had to retire early to recover from the shock of seeing all those Futurist and Vorticist ladies, who made one's eyeballs ache with the garish colours of their wigs, the bizarre designs of their bifurcated garments, and the macabre effect of their whitened faces and jewelled bodies.

"For dear charity's sake strange things are done in these costumed balls. In earlier history fashionable women have been known to sell their kisses at bazaars. There is the well known story of King Edward who paid a guinea and asked for a spare cup instead of the one which had been touched by the lips of the stall holder; but for the first time in social England pretty women put up themselves for auction and raffled their own beauty.

"Other startling innovations besieged the town before the season of spring cleaned itself. The night clubs opened their doors down many side turnings and enrolled members as fast as taxicabs could put them down. It was discovered that there was a great lack of amusement and refreshment for really respectable people—nice people—after midnight.

"It is true that they had begun the day early and that they had been to Apache lunches and tango teas and mixine dinners and after theatre suppers, but really it was too ridiculous to suppose that, in a season of sensations, full grown men and women should return to rest when Big Ben boomed twelve. So there were cabarets of the highest class provided them with an all night license."

Break In 18 Inch Main

A joint in the waterworks eighteen-inch main, which was laid last year, blew out this morning a short distance north of Auburn. The city will not experience any inconvenience, however, for water will be fed through the other pipe, and it is expected that the break will be repaired by to-morrow morning.

HAVE PRETTY HAIR

Soft, Fluffy, Abundant—Use Parisian Sage. It Stops Falling Hair and Itching Scalp

If your hair is not as soft and beautiful, or as fresh and full as that of some friend, do not despair—do as she does—give it daily attention. Beautiful hair is largely the matter of a little care. If it is too thin, make it grow. If it is too dry and brittle, soften it up—lubricate it. If you have dandruff it is because the scalp is too dry and flakes off. Freshen up the scalp and dandruff will go.

Parisian Sage, sold in fifty cent bottles at drug and toilet counters, is just what you need—it softens the scalp, nourishes the hair roots, immakes the hair wavy, lustrous and abundant.

Parisian Sage quickly stops itching head; cleanses the hair of dust and excessive oil; takes away the dryness and brittleness, makes it seem twice as abundant, and beautifies it until it is soft and lustrous.

You cannot be disappointed in Parisian Sage. Always sold by the Warne Drug Company on money back. If not satisfied plan. Look for the trade mark—"The Girl with the Auburn Hair." It's on very package—accept nothing else.

DANCE AT CHEMONG

The dance at Chemong Park on Thursday night was another of the enjoyable affairs which the Park people are providing. To-night there will be another dance in the pavilion, the proceeds of which go toward the regatta fund. The big aquatic event is scheduled for Aug. 18 and not July, as stated a few days ago. The executive committee is working hard to make the Chemong Regatta as successful as any of the water events held in this district.

THE FUTURE OF THE TRANSCONTINENTAL

Before the Laurier Government went out of office it was a favourite prognostication of the Conservative Press and politicians that, in view of the unexpectedly heavy capital outlay on the Eastern Division, the Grand Trunk Pacific Company would probably repudiate its agreement to pay three per cent. per annum on the cost of construction for the privilege of operating that division as part of the Transcontinental Railway. In order to make probability a certainly the Dominion Government appointed a Commission, composed of a lawyer and a railway engineer, to inquire into the character and cost of the work, apparently in the hope, if not for the purpose, of geting the Grand Trunk authorities to act on their sinister suggestion. The lawyer was Mr Lynch-Staunton, and the engineer was Mr. Gutelius, the one a partisan of the Government and the other an employee. A costly, elaborate, and useless report was the outcome, and no one who ever looked into it was surprised that it fell utterly flat.

Of late the old attitude of hostility toward the National Transcontinental Railway has been completely dropped by both the Press and the politicians who not merely take for granted that the agreement will be implemented, but express some sense of pride in the greatness of the undertaking and the high character of the work. This is as it should be, of course, but one is tempted to ask why this great project had to fight against not merely physical difficulties, but also partisan pique and puerile jealousy.

When Mr. Frank Cochrane took over the Department of Railways and Canals he found himself deprived of all chance of initiating any great undertaking. He took up and carried on the Hudson Bay Railway and the new Welland Canal without any material alteration in the plans, and it would have been better for his reputation if he had done the same thing with the Transcontinental Railway. I was a somewhat ingenious way of rewarding the hack services of Mr. Lynch-Saunton—immeasurably less objectionable than making him Attorney-General of the Province would be—but it was a small piece of business, from any motive, to try to discredit an important public work and put a great corporation in a false position.—The Globe.

MYSTIC POTIONS TO SWAY LOVE NOW IN JAIL

NEW YORK July 31 — Weird incantations and matic potions that are reported to have driven away undesirable husbands or sweethearts as easily as they have attracted objects of affection, broken up homes and performed other high jinks, were revealed as the stock in trade of Mrs. Filomena Costa recently, in the Second Criminal court of Jersey City. She was held for the Grand Jury in $500 bail on the charge of obtaining money by selling love powders and telling fortunes.

Mrs. Costa, a middle-aged widow, acknowledged the charge was well founded and seemed surprised that she should have been arrested. According to complaints received by Captian John Cody, of the City Hall police station, she has wielded a strange power over superstitious persons, who sought police protection, but refused tomake formal complaint for fear she might cast a spell upon them. It is said she has amassed a snug forteune.

Miss Margaret Masso, who obtained the evidence for Captain Cody upon which Mrs. Costa was arrested, told Judge Charles F.X. O'Brien that she had obtained three love powders. One powder, she said, Mrs. Costa assured her would make a strange man love the woman who sprinkled it on his coat tail. The second put into a drink would drive away a bad husband or unwelcome admirer, and the third sprinkled in food would rekindle a flickering love into never-dying flames.

Mrs. Costa had delivered the powders to Miss Masso and was putting on the finishing touches in the way of incantations before an altar in her home, No. 129 Fremont street, Jersey City, when the representative of Captain Cody gave a signal that brought Patrolman Introcasso on the scene. The batteries of Mrs. Costa's occult power were immediately focused upon the minion of the law.

"I cast a spell upon you that will make your wife cease loving you," she shrieked on bended knees as she stretched her arms toward the astonished policeman.

At the station house Mrs. Costa protested at her arrest, insisting that she was within her rights. She did not seem disturbed when held for the Grand Jury.

PREPARING FOR PANAMA CANAL

British Columbia Is Making Many Improvements at Victoria, Vancouver and Elsewhere.

Writing to The Monetary Times as to what is being done in British Columbia to prepare for Panama Canal trade, Mr. G. Wynn Wilson, of the Colonial Investment Company, Vancouver, says:

"In Vancouver, the waterfront is owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway, so that they will bulk largely in improvements. Well, the Canadian Pacific Railway are just completing one pier that will accommodate five vessels. It has a double-decked freight shed connected above the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks with the business portion of Vancouver. They are filling in with rock their present trans-Pacific pier and are to considerably lengthen this, in addition to constructing a similar pier in the near future. Their two million dollar station, now almost completed, was built largely with a view to increased traffic following the opening of the Panama Canal, as was their Vancouver hotel, the largest in Canada.

"Both the Great Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific have recently completed big piers for deep sea vessels. The Dominion government have under construction a pier that will cost about two million dollars, including the site. They are to build this year on the same site, a large grain elevator. Across the harbour in North Vancouver, an English company has broken ground for the construction of one of the biggest dry docks on this coast, and a shipbuilding plant. A twelve hundred foot concrete pier in North Vancouver has also been recently completed.

"In Victoria, the Dominion government are constructing a dry dock that is to cost two and a half millions and in Prince Rupert the Grand Trunk Pacific are preparing actively for increased business.

"The Dominion government have been working on the Fraser River, removing the bar, for almost a year. They have now a minimum depth of 25 feet for over 20 miles up the river and a depth of 40 feet is to be provided before the end of this year. New Westminster has a harbour scheme to cost six millions, and the first half million dollar unit is nearing completion. That city owns several miles of water frontage, and their plan provides for wharves along its whole length. At Port Mann, the Canadian Northern Railway freight terminus across the river from New Westminster, plans are prepared for over a mile of wharves, of which the first 1,000 feet section has been completed."

A New Beau And The Rules Of The Road

Had the lofty crown of his 1914 model straw hat been extended three or four feet skyward it would have formed a perfect cone. Around its base was a whisp of black ribbon. His complete attire breathed the atmosphere of a smart haberdasher, showing excellent team work with a tailor who was not an extremist. The beau was almost twenty, the girlie—June, he probably called her when she was not within hearing—perhaps eighteen. She was decidedly worth a second glance, and then some; he was there all the way, and he knew it. On their way home the other night he gave an exhibition of a youth's punctilious performance in keeping with the social code that was really sublime. That boy is a stickler on conventional customs. Not once did he deviate from the somewhat accepted street regulation that the young man who is not a boob or humpkin walks on the outside of the sidewalk. This boy was not that species of boob, anyway. When he met the little maiden on the east side of George street he had a rain coat dangling from an arm. Oblivious of the crowd, they began to pick their way up George street. He took her umbrella and her left arm. At Hunter street they turned west on the south side. He unhooked his privileged right, swung rather gracefully to the outside of the sidewalk, draped the raincoat over the slighted right, and hung the umbrella on it. Then with his left arm he completed the link of affection. In front of the Oriental they did not notice the married couple who apparently saluted them as they passed. The husband had a chubby boy of three n his arms, the mother four or five feet ahead, was behind a go-cart with a tiny occupant.

At Aylmer street the youthful pair turned north, on the east side of the street. The rain coat and umbrella flanked, arm unhooked, outside of walk was regained and they went blithely on. At the south side of McDonnel street the stage was reset, and once more at Stewart. The boy was a hero, and if among his pals he termed her Jane with a proprietary tone, he endeavoured to prove to the maiden by his acts that she was deserving of the most rigid adherence to the rules of the road. At Stewart they turned north and were soon out of sight.

Another voice might have been heard to remark further out McDonnel, "Don't you feel the familiarity of privilege after that?"

IN TRAINING FOR RESPONSIBILITIES OF A HOUSEHOLD

In the Washington Irving High School of New York City the girl's prospective condition in life is considered from the moment of her entrance until graduation day. It is assumed that every girl will marry and become the mother of a family, and the school undertakes to give all its pupils such a training in home management as will enable them to take the serious responsibilities of life and acquit themselves as members of society. It is deemed important that the coming mothers of the race should know how to dress and undress babies, and this detail, instead of being left to chance, becomes a definite subject in the curriculum, taught with scientific precision. In the same way various other matters that cannot be taught from textbooks, but constitute important and useful branches of knowledge in the broad science of everyday living, have been admitted to the courses of instruction, until the school work has been differentiated from that conducted by most institutions of its class.

There was much wisdom in the remark of a distinguished visitor to the Chicago World's Fair, concerning a $500 workingman's cottage exhibited there: "Yes, it is a wonderful exhibit of a $500 home; but it would take a $5,000 wife to run it." The Washington Irving School maintains a model flat,—not a cottage, since the average New York family cannot live in a cottage,— and it proceeds to instruct its girl pupils in the care and management of this flat, as well as in the purchasing of food and household supplies, and in all that goes to qualify a New York City girl to become "a $5,000 wife," fully equipped to preside over a home.

THE ANTI-LIQUOR CAMPAIGN AS THE GERMANS SEE IT

In Germany the movement touches all classes from the Kaiser on the throne to the poorest Socialist on the back streets of Berlin. Absolute suppression is the demand. "We cannot discuss moderation with any man," says Dr. Matthael, one of the staff physicians in the German army.

As the result of several years of agitation, the Bundesrath, the Federal Council of the Empire, is now considering a bill against the issuing of any more liquor licenses in Germany, regardless of whether there is real demand for them or not. This measure is aimed primarily at Berlin, where, during recent years, there has been great increase in drunkenness and attendant immorality. The bill compels municipalities to refuse licenses in all cases in which the need for them is not clearly established and "to all persons who cannot demonstrate their respectability."

There are more than 13,000 breweries in Germany, and the per capita consumption of beer in Germany is larger than the per capita consumption of all liquors in the United States. In 1912 the German Imperial Statistical Office published complete data respecting the effect of alcohol on the efficiency and health of industrial workers. Beginning with his twenty-fourth year, the drinker's attacks of sickness were 2.6 times as frequent as those of the healthy man, and the disparity increased year after year, while the same was true of the duration of sickness. Other such statistics showing the liability to accident and disease have been published and spread broadcast throughout Germany. The national assurance societies have entered into a campaign against the use of alcohol. In the spring of last year the first congress for the bringing up of children in total abstinence principles,—thereafter to be held annually—let in Berlin. It was largely attended by women.

HENRY TAYLOR STRUCK BY C.P.R. EXPRESS

Injured Man Was Brought to Peterborough on 12.10 a.m. Train and is in Nicholls' Hospital

WAS BADLY HURT

The C. P. R. Toronto train, due here at 12.10 this morning, brought in one Henry Taylor who had been seriously injured at Agincourt.

It appears that the unfortunate man was walking along the track, when he was knocked down by the oncoming passenger train. A surgeon of Marmora, who happened to be on the train, attended him, and found that he was suffering from a broken leg and injuries to the head. Belleghem's ambulance met the injured man at the Station and took him to Nicholls Hospital, where he was further attended by Dr. Carmichael.

He was reported this morning as being still unconscious and nothing can be ascertained from him, apart from his name.

Plans for New Public Building

The following telegram received by J. H. Burnham, M.P., from A. Z. Chief Architect informs me the plans and specifications will be ready for advertising by end of next week."

ENTENTE AND ALLIANCE

The balance of power in Europe has been maintained to the present crisis by the Triple Alliance (Germany, Austria and Italy), which was formed at the close of the Franco-Prussian war in 1870, and the Triple Entente (Russia, France and Great Britain.)

The Alliance is more or less of a fixed agreement, whereas the Entente (the French word for "understanding") is not so rigid, but largely what the English word expresses.

France has had more or less of an agreement with Russia for many years. During the reign of King Edward a very friendly feeling grew up between Britain and France, largely as the result of distrust of Germany. This has resulted in Britain forming the third party in the friendship between Russia and France.

Britain also stands in the relation of an ally to Japan in regard to India and the Far East. Britain, too, has a military alliance with Portugal.

Says the City Fathers Are Killing Market

Smith, July 31, 1914.

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Sir,—As a constant reader of your valuable paper, I have read with interest what has appeared in regard to the new market by-laws. Now, in regard to the tagging of baskets, of course it is done to keep the farmers and their wives and daughters honest, and if it is, I maintain that those who go to buy have as much right to wear a tag as those who go to sell, for I think it can be easily proved that there is at least as large a percentage of the farmers and their wives honest as there are of the city people We hear of city women stealing butter without paying for it, and doing other such tricks, and when a business man will turn over his goods to the farmer at a profit of three hundred or more per cent, which can be easily proved, it don't seem to me to be very honest.

Then in regard to the weighing of fowl, we all know the farmer don't usually trouble to get his scales inspected regularly, and he may feel quite sure they are correct, but if they happen to vary an ounce, as they are liable to do, he or she is up in the Police Court. Then, again, the market scales may not be correct, for I don't think they are infallible any more than the farmers.

Now, we have been selling fowl and other produce on that market for over thirty years, and while that law remains in force we are done with it, for I would take considerable less than have to appear in the Police Court, as some ladies have done already. Now, in closing, I would strongly advise those who have fowl to sell to take them some other place, and keep away from the Police Court, I think the City Fathers are killing the market, and let the farmers assist them in their work.

FARMER

IN REGARDS TO S. S. QUESTION

Editor, Examiner: Sir, I notice in to-night's paper, page 10, in the Sunday school lesson questions, the dreadful misleading, infidelish, unbelieving question put to the minds and souls of the people and children: Question, No. 2—Have there been other clairvoyants besides Jesus? Putting the only begotten Son of God, our only Saviour, without the shedding of His blood there could be no remission of sins—classifying Him with fortune tellers, the low filthy spiritualism and mind reading that is playing the devil with the people of to-day. My business called me into a palmist and fortune teller's room or office one day. She practiced phrenology and clairvoyant fortune telling: all things revealed, so the clairvoyant's motto on the wall said.

So you class the Triune God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit with them, and the Evil One of to-day, compare Him with the Prince of the Power of the Air, and those who gave themselves up to such an evil power.

Poison the minds of the people with such questions and infidelity!

I am a believer in God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit, and His power to save us from sin, and such poisonous sin as clairvoyance, fortune telling, and the telephone slocom, spiritualism, we are getting nowadays.—Matt. I, 21. Has a clairvoyant fortune teller power to pardon sin and do the work of the Son of God?

Away with this unbelieving, misleading trash and fiction, trashy love business the people are getting nowadays in moving pictures shows and theatres, etc. A BELIEVER.

Locomotor Ataxia, Heart Trouble and Nervous Spells Yielded to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It would be easy to tell you how Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures locomotor ataxia and derangements of heart and nerves, but it may be more satisfactory to you to read this letter.

Mrs. Thos. Allan, R.F.D. 8, Sombra, Ont., writes:—"Five years ago I suffered a complete breakdown, and frequently had palpitation of the heart. Since that illness I have had dizzy spells, had no power over my limbs (locomotor ataxia) and could not walk straight. At night I would have severe nervous spells, with heart palpitation, and would shake as though I had the ague. I felt improvement after using the first box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after continuing the treatment can now walk, eat and sleep well, have no nervous spells and do not require heart medicine. I have told several of my neighbours of the splendid results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

NOTICE MUST BE GIVEN OF THE INDIGENTS

Finance Committee Claims That the Agreement With St. Joseph's Hospital Has Not Been Carried Out to the Letter

RESOLUTION PASSED

At the Finance Committee meeting last night the question of indigent patients was once more under discussion. It was pointed out that the superintendent of St. Joseph's Hospital was not abiding by the agreement made between the Council and Rev. Father McColl, wherein the city should be notified of every indigent patient received for treatment. The Council desires to keep an exact account of all such persons paid for out of the city's purse, and the following resolution was passed for the purpose of emphasizing the necessity of the close co-operation of the hospital with the city authorities.

Moved by Ald. Green, seconded by Mayor Buller, that the Clerk be instructed to write the Superintendent of St. Joseph's Hospital and point out that they are not complying with the arrangements made by Rev. Father McColl requiring an order from the Relief Officer when patients were admitted to be charged to the city, and apart from that arrangement the city should receive notice when the patients are admitted and in accordance with the law and with the arrangements made a notice with the account claimed should be given to the city as soon as such patient is discharged; and further that in an account for $877.00 there are charges for patients regarding whom the city did not receive notice of admission to the hospital and that the city did not receive notice of their discharge in a statement of the amount of the claim when they were discharged; and also that the attention of the Superintendent of the Nicholls Hospital be called to the requirement for accounts to be given to the city as soon as any patient, admitted on the order of the Relief Officer, is discharged.

Representatives of the Peterborough Horticultural Society will be in attendance. A splendid programme has been arranged, both from business and pleasure standpoints.

SOUL LIKE A DRIED PRUNE.

And Half Ounce Brain Under No. 7 Hat Has Average Tangoist.

NEW YORK, July 31—"Anyone with a proper equipment of limbs can dance the tango, provided his legs are nimble. It doesn't require much practice and absolutely no intelligence. The average tango dancer has a half-ounce brain concealed under a No. 7 hat. If it's a woman dancer, no brain at all is necessary. All she wants is something with trousers on to grip her around the waist and lead her through the contortions. I think the soul of a tango dancer must look like a dried prune." Such was the denunciation hurled forth here at tangoists by Bob Jones, the long-haired and vociferous evangelist, popularly known as the "Billy Sunday of the South," who has been conducting a whirlwind campaign here.

SERVIANS HOLD PASS.

Progress of Austrians Towards Nish Is Slow.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—An Exchange Telegraph Co.'s despatch from Nish, Servia, via Salonika, says that up till Friday night the Austrian invaders at Semendria had not succeeded in forcing the pass held by the Servian troops, whose possession would give them access to the Morava river valley, and thus open up a direct road to Nish.

Another despatch from Nish to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says desperate fighting continues along the River Drina. Both Austrians and Servians have sustained heavy losses.

The Austrian divisions after fighting fiercely all day failed to force the defile leading to Plevlie and Priepolie.

Bridge Blown Up.

BERLIN, Aug. 1. — Official confirmation of the reported blowing up by Russian troops of the railroad bridge between Granica, Russian Poland, and Szczakowa, in Galicia, on the railroad from Warsaw to Vienna, was received here last night.

Servians Driven Back.

VIENNA, Aug. 1.—Austrian frontier guards yesterday repelled a strong attack by Servians near Klotievats, on the Bosnian frontier, without sustaining loss. The Servians lost one officer and 21 men.

Pursued Royal Yacht.

ATHENS, Greece, Aug. 1. — The Montenegrin royal yacht Deglara was almost captured yesterday by the Austrian fleet blockading Antavari. The yacht was approaching the port, but when she sighted the blockading fleet turned and fled. She was pursued by Austrian destroyers, but arrived safely at Corfu.

NEW CREAMERY.

COBOURG, Aug. 1.—Mr. George Thompson, of the Thompson-Macdonald Company, is promoting a new industry here for the manufacture of drain tile. The project is to form a syndicate to purchase a tile drain machine. It is claimed this will be of much benefit to farmers in the district and to manufacture the tile in Cobourg.

PLENTY WOULD GO

But Canada Lacks Equipment For Large Contingent.

AUSTRIANS TO BE HELD

They Will Not Be Permitted to Leave Canada If a General War Breaks Out—Cabinet Meeting Will Be Held In Ottawa To-day to Discuss Developments and Make Plans to Aid Britain.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—While waiting for the final word regarding the appalling war in Europe, which now seems past prevention, the feeling in the capital is very tense.

The Prime Minister returned this morning and Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes is expected to-day. A Cabinet meeting has been called and the latest developments will there be discussed and any steps that should be taken by Canada in the way of action or preparation.

If Canada is called on to send men to aid the Imperial forces, the only trouble will be in getting properly qualified officers and sufficient equipment for the men who would be ready to go. It is believed from the numerous offers that have come in that fully 100,000 men could be sent over. At present, however, it is said, that barely more than 20,000 could be effectively equipped satisfactorily. There are plenty of rifles and ammunition, but not enough of other equipment.

The first troops that would be called out would be from the permanent force. The various units of the Royal Canadian Regiment, Royal Canadian Engineers and Royal Canadian Artillery at Halifax, Quebec, Toronto and Winnipeg, number about 5,000 men. They are ready to leave at any time. All leave of absence has been cancelled and arrangements are being made to promptly mobilize a considerable portion of the troops.

In the event of war the naval service department will have control of all wireless stations.

Col. the Hon. Sam Hughes will go to Quebec Sunday or Monday to look after the defence preparations there.

It is reported here that the Duke of Connaught will return to Ottawa at once if Britain is drawn into the war, in order to aid in the mobilization of Canadian troops. His long and distinguished military experience would be of great value.

The War Office yesterday cabled the Canadian Government to know how much wheat Canada would be able to send to Britain this year. The Russian wheat crop cannot be depended on by the old country this year if the war goes on.

Sir Robert Is Reticent.

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—"I consider the situation so grave and serious that I deem it my duty to hasten back to the capital immediately," was the brief and significant statement of the Prime Minister, Sir Robert Borden, last night.

The Premier reached Toronto early in the evening, and proceeded to Ottawa on the night train. He came at once from the Muskoka Lakes, where he was holidaying.

Sir Robert was exceedingly reticent regarding the immediate proposals of the Canadian Government and concerning its communications with the Imperial Government. So far as any official statement was concerned the Premier intimated that he was not yet in a position to even indicate what steps might be taken. Any decision reached would be based upon information awaiting him at Ottawa.

Austrians Must Stay.

OTTAWA, Aug. 1.—When war is declared the Canadian Government will keep a close watch on Austrians and Servians in Canada. The Servians are a negligible quantity, but Austrians number about 50,000 males. Many of these are reservists. They will not be interfered with if they remain quiet, but if they attempt to go home to join their army and fight against Great Britain and her allies, they would be promptly stopped. They must stay in Canada.

On Guard In Cape Breton.

HALIFAX, N.S., Aug. 1.—A detail of 125 men of the permanent force left yesterday morning for Canso, to protect the Hazel Hill cable station, and a detail of 150 men were despatched to Cape Breton to guard the cable station and collieries. There are about 2,000 Austrian miners in Cape Breton.

In the scheme of defence for the Halifax fortresses the city artillery regiment mans the main torpedo batteries in several of the smaller forts, while the heavy guns in the outforts are manned by the regulars.

Rainbow Trip Cancelled.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 1.—Sir Robert Borden, Premier, issued an order yesterday to Commander Hose of the cruiser Rainbow, now lying in Esquimalt harbor, to cancel the Behring Sea trip for the present and remain in readiness for duty in the vicinity of Victoria and Vancouver.

Officer of Artillery.

MONTREAL, Aug. 1.—Col. J. J. Creelman, commanding the Sixth Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, has telegraphed the Minister of Militia offering the services of his brigade for service outside of Canada in defence of the Empire.

Death of Mrs. James Owen.

COBOURG, Aug. 1.—Mrs. James Owens, 59, of Meyersburg, met with a fatal accident at her home. The night was warm and she was retiring on a couch. Upon arising to go to her room she by mistake opened the cellar door and fell down the steps, fracturing her skull and breaking an arm. Death ensued almost immediately. Her husband and three sons, Joseph of Warkworth, and Dennis and James of Seymour, and two daughters, Mrs. James Batterton and Mrs. Charles Boyer, of Cobourg, survive her.

BRITONS ARE READY

They Are Grimly Determined to See Fight to the End.

NO JINGOISM IS DISPLAYED

English People In Face of Gigantic Struggle Are the Calmest Nation In Europe—Nation Has Suddenly Regained Sober and Serious In Face of Crisis—State of Affairs Is a Big Issue.

LONDON, Aug. 1. — Facing the most perilous epoch in their history since they shivered before the spectre of a Napoleonic invasion, the English people are the calmest nation of Europe. Yesterday they felt that the decision whether Great Britain was to be drawn into a general European war was hanging in the balance. To-day they believe it is a probability rather than a possibility.

There is no mistaking the fact that, with the exception of a minority of peace advocates, whose voice is hardly heard and seems to carry little weight, the nation's mind is reconciled to war.

There have been no "demonstrations," no flag-waving, no music hall patriotism, but there is apparent among all classes a sober and grim determination, if the Government declares that the nation's interests and obligations require her to take up arms side by side with Russia and France, to see the business through to the bitter end.

The belief of the average man is that the existence of the whole of Europe as an armed camp, servetts and jealousy, could have but one culmination, and if the hour for a general settlement has struck there will be no flinching.

The change that has swept over the temper of the country within a week is marvellous. A week ago the people were wrapped up in prize fights, the Goodwood races, the Cowes regatta and vacations on the continent.

To-day they are asking only, can the British fleet play its part in protecting the island from isolation, which means, in the first instance, can it destroy the German Emperor's navy? They are concerned also as to whether the food supplies can be maintained, and to what extent private fortunes will be impaired by the financial upheaval of the war.

The military situation stands where it did last night. The mobilization of the naval forces has been completed, and the home fleet of war footing except for the enrolling part of the Territorials. The machinery for their mobilization requires only a word to be set in motion.

The request of the War Office that the English newspapers refrain from publishing army and navy movements has met with a patriotic response. The London evening papers publish news concerning almost all the armies of Europe, except that of Great Britain and regarding the whereabouts of the British fleet and the preparations of the British army they say nothing. There is a popular belief that the fleet is in the neighborhood of Flushing, in the North Sea, but the truth is known only to the members of the Government.

Dover and Sheerness are virtually on a war basis and protective booms are ready to be drawn around at a moment's notice. These and other harbors have been mined. The Calais and Ostend steamers are likely to be transferred to Folkestone from Dover.

The momentous announcement was made by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons yesterday that Russia had proclaimed the general mobilization of her army and fleet, and in consequence martial law had been proclaimed in Germany and a general mobilization in Germany would follow.

Premier Asquith's statement was as follows:

"We have just heard, not from St. Petersburg, but from Germany, that Russia has proclaimed the general mobilization of her army and her fleet, and that, in consequence of this, martial law is to be proclaimed in Germany.

"We understand this to mean that mobilization will follow in Germany if the Russian mobilization is general and is proceeded with.

"In these circumstances I prefer not to answer any further questions till Monday."

Active Preparations at Hong Kong.

HONG KONG, China, Aug. 1.—Most active preparations are going on here in view of eventualities.

The Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Asia has been chartered by the Government and guns are being mounted on board.

At the dockyards work is proceeding night and day and double guards have been put on duty.

All the troops are confined to barracks and leave has been stopped.

The British battleship Triumph yesterday took on her war stores and is prepared for action.

All the boundaries of the city are being protected.

Final Efforts In Progress.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—France and Great Britain are making a final effort to find a way out compatible with the dignity and interests of both Russia and Austria. This is why Premier Asquith postponed making a further declaration in the British Parliament yesterday.

Married on Saturday.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Aug. 1.—George H. Wagner and Miss Eileen Williams, both of Waterdown, were married on the steamer St. Lawrence during a searchlight ramble among the islands at the annual outing of the Brotherhood of the Congregational Church of Waterdown. Rev. J. H. Lamon officiated. This is said to be the first marriage to have occurred on any steamer among the islands.

GERMAN FLEET FOUND

Ships Discovered Near Denmark and Shadowed.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 1.—Preparations for the mobilization of the Danish army were completed yesterday. A declaration of neutrality is expected to-day.

Both German and British warships were observed yesterday in Danish waters. The German torpedo-boat destroyers steamed close to the fortress at Middlefrund, a few miles from Copenhagen. The warships retired only after being commanded to do so by the commandant of the fortress, who threatened a recourse to force if they did not leave.

A big German naval fleet was reported yesterday off the south of Holland.

A German squadron, cruising off Langeland, in the Great Belt, is stopping all vessels to investigate their nationality and the destination of their cargoes. German torpedo boats have been observed near Gledeser and in the Cattegat, and German warships are patrolling between Sweden and Jutland.

A big Russian squadron has been seen outside the Danish island of Bornholm, in the Baltic.

Denmark has called out all persons liable for active service, particularly for the protection of the coast. Parliament, which has not been sitting, has been summoned to meet to-night.

Cable and telegraphic communication between Denmark and Germany has been suspended by Germany without notice to the Danish authorities. Telegraphic communication to many places in Germany has also been suspended.

PETES ONCE MORE FALL BEFORE SOUTHPAW DOUGHERTY HELD THEM TO FOUR HITS

Hams Turned the Tables on Homesters Yesterday Winning 5 to 1—Local Talent Led Until the Seventh But Hams Cracked in Last Three Innings

BELTING HIT HARD

Old Mr. Southpaw Jinx bobbed up at Riverside Park yesterday, and the Petes were beaten 5 to 1 by the Hams. The latter gents did not look able to beat a team from the Old Soldiers' Home on Thursday, but they came back strong yesterday and with a left-hander on the mound, they trimmed the homesters nicely. Patsy Dougherty was the part-sider who turned the trick and although he was wild, passing seven men, he was practically unhittable with passengers on the bags, and four safe cracks was all he allowed the Petes.

Opposed to the crooked-arm Hibernian was Knut Belting, and the Swedish boy was far from being a mystery, allowing eleven base knocks, although he got by in good style for six innings, blanking the Hams until the seventh. A couple of errors in that session gave the Whitemen run No. 1, and No. 2 came clean in the eighth on an pass, a sacrifice and white's corking single. To rub it in the Hams uncorked three more in the ninth, getting the first two on clean hard hitting, and the last on a couple of misplays.

The visitors gave a much better exhibition than on the day before, while the Petes were not as accurate as usual. On top of that they could not hit Dougherty, and that is the story of the battle. The Hams pounded Belting for more than enough earned runs to give them the decision.

One feature of the game was Baldwin throwing out Miller at first base on what was apparently a sure single to the outfield. Mully clipped one on a line to right field and Baldwin getting the ball on the first hop whipped it to Ivers getting the corpulent catcher by two feet. He was the most surprised man in the League.

First Innings.

Hamilton — Cunningham fanned. Corns singled through short. Pendry scratched another on a high bounder to Belting. Ivers grounded to Belting, the runners advancing. White walked, filling the bases. McGroarty forced White at second, Fox to King. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount walked. Welsh sacrificed, Fisher to Cunningham. Dolan grounded to Ivers, Blount going to third. Rooney grounded to McGroarty. No runs, hits or errors.

Second Innings.

Hamilton — Baldwin bounced to Belting. Fisher doubled to left. Dougherty hit to Fox who got him at First. Cunningham lined at Fox. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—Byrne walked. King sacrificed, Dougherty to Cunningham. Fox singled through short, scoring Byrne. Miller flied to Corns. Belting walked. Blount grounded to Dougherty. One run, one hit, no errors.

Third Innings.

Hamilton—Corns grounded to King. Pendry was out on a roller to Belting. Ivers singled to left. Ivers was out stealing, Miller to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Welsh flied to Corns. Dolan singled over second. Rooney flied to White. Byrne forced Dolan, McGroarty to Cunningham. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Fourth Innings.

Hamilton—White drove one to Blount. McGroarty lifted to Dolan. Baldwin singled to right, and was out stealing, Miller to King. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough—King walked. Fox struck out trying to sacrifice. Miller was out on a roller to Ivers. Belting fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Fifth Innings.

Hamilton—Fisher beat out a high bounder to Fox. Dougherty fanned. Cunningham hit into a fast double, King to Fox to Dolan. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount flied to Baldwin. Welsh walked. Dolan lifted to Baldwin. Welsh was out stealing, Fisher to Cunningham. No runs, hits or errors.

Sixth Innings.

Hamilton—Corns was out on a smash to King. Pendry bounced to Byrne. Ivers flied to Blount. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterborough — Rooney grounded to Ivers, a nice play by the first-baseman. Byrne flied to Baldwin. King was passed and was out stealing, Fisher to Cunningham. No runs, hits or errors.

Seventh Innings.

Hamilton—White was safe on Fox's fumble. McGroarty sacrificed, Belting to Dolan. Baldwin hit to Fox who pegged to Byrne, getting White between bases. He finally got back to third when King's throw hit him on the head. Fisher rolled to Dolan, who got White at the plate. Dougherty singled to right, scoring Baldwin. Cunningham fanned. One run, one hit, two errors.

Peterborough—Fox fanned. Miller hit a clean one to right field and was thrown out at first base by Baldwin. Belting struck out. No runs, his or errors.

Eighth Innings.

Hamilton—Corns flied to Welsh. Pendry walked. Ivers was out on a bounder to Belting. White singled to centre, scoring Pendry and, taking second on the throw to the plate. McGroarty walked. Baldwin flied to Blount. One run, one hit, no errors.

Peterborough — Blount was out, McGroarty to Ivers. Welsh went to second when White dropped his fly and McGroarty missed the return. Dolan singled to right and Welsh was out a mile at the plate when he tried to score. Dolan stole third. Rooney fanned. No runs, one hit, two errors.

Ninth Innings.

Hamilton—Fisher singled to left. Dougherty sacrificed, Miller to Dolan. Cunningham doubled over third scoring Fisher. Corns flied to Rooney. Pendry singled to centre, scoring Cunningham. Pendry stole second, going to third on Miller's bad throw. Ivers hit to Fox and was safe when Dolan lost the toss which was low. Ivers stole second. White fanned. Three runs, three hits, two errors.

Peterborough—Byrne walked. King was safe on one past McGroarty. Fox flied to Fox. Miller flied to Baldwin. Kelly batted for Belting and fanned. No runs, one hit, no errors.

RICHIE SAYS HIS FIGHT WAS JOKE BATTLE

Ex-Champion Ritchie, who has just returned home, characterizes his contest with Welsh, when he lost his title, as being more or less a joke. He hints that he should not have been given worse than a draw, and that Referee Corri would not have been straining a point if he declared him the winner. He says: "Welsh is a master of all the tricks of the ring. He pinioned my arms in the clinches in such a way as to make it appear that I was holding. He seldom did any leading, waiting for me to come so he could counter and get away. His sole idea seemed to be to stay there for twenty rounds. He did that and nothing more. If he had outpointed me decisively or marked me up or knocked me down I wouldn't have any kick coming. But he didn't. Why, four days before the bout I got a cut over my right eye. It hadn't healed when I boxed Welsh, so I put a piece of adhesive plaster over the wound. I put another over the other eye to keep him from knowing which sore spot to pepper. If I had been mussed up any that plaster would not have lasted two rounds. It was there when the twenty rounds ended." Ritchie also states that: "At the final bell I fully expected Corri to raise my hand, signifying that I had won. Instead he didn't make any sign of a decision, but turned his back and walked across the ring. I followed him over and asked him if I had won. In the meantime several hundred Welshmen were doing the Roman mob stuff for their favourite. Corri and Welsh had won and I was too stunned to reply. That story of a return match being fixed up in advance was all wrong. I wouldn't tip myself up that way because I didn't give him a chance to beat me. I am going to draw my money for the bout from Stakeholder Gibson right away. Then I shall go back to California, and rest up for a time. I have no plans for the future, but you may be sure I shall not give up boxing."

WONDERFUL PITCHING BY RAY CALDWELL

Setting a pace that has left even the great Walter Johnson trailing in his wake, Ray Caldwell, leading pitcher on Frank Chance's staff, is no wormgard in compiling one of the greatest pitching records that either major league has shown in many an eventful season. Early last season Chance made the prediction that Caldwell would be one of the greatest pitchers of the year. He failed to live up to that prediction because of a lame arm, but this season he is more than fulfilling the prophecies of his leader. Enumeration of his achievements in the box since the beginning of the present sason is one notable performance after another, his record for effectiveness being the best in either major league.

Pitching for the weakest batting aggregation in the major leagues, Caldwell's record of victories to date is surpassed by only two boxmen in the big circuits —Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson. Johnson has lost more games than Caldwell, while Matty has not lost as many. A record of sixteen victories against seven defeats is a notable one with a league leading club, not to mention the Yankees, who have won only about two-fifths of their games. Caldwell is within two victories of the marks reached by the Giant veteran, and the Washington phenom, and, judging from the form he has been showing it would not be surprising if Caldwell passed both of them before the season is much older.

The record of games won and lost tells in only a meagre way of what Caldwell has done for the Yankees this season. In the first place he has accounted for almost half of the victories credited to the Chancemen. With a club batting .240 or better behind him it is only reasonable to suppose that he would now be on the sunny side of twenty victories, a mark that few pitchers excel in a full season.

In brief, here are a few of the notable records of the Yanks' slim flinger this season:

Has Finished Every Game.

He has finished every game he started, not being taken out of the box for any reason all season. Where he relieved another pitcher he remained in the game until it was over.

He was not scored upon for twenty-nine consecutive innings — the first twenty-nine innings he pitched this season.

He scored shut-out victories over five American League clubs—the Athletics, Red Sox, Senators, Naps and White Sox.

In five other full games he held the opposing club to a single run, six times he allowed only two runs and twice he was reached for three runs. Twice he allowed four runs and once he allowed five. No team has passed this mark in scoring against him.

He is now compiling a run of victories that numbers five. During these five games only four runs have been score against him.

Since the season opened he has pitched 120 innings, a fraction over 22 full games. The opposing clubs have scored forty runs against him, averaging a fraction less than two runs per game. This includes earned as well as unearned runs.

Jack Johnson Framed Every Fight Since He Became Champion And Is Done As a Pugilist Says Fullerton

(By Hugh S. Fullerton.)

Jack Johnson is done.

The passing of the big negro who has dominated the boxing world for years is as complete as if he had been knocked out — even more so. The public never again will stand for him, and the promoter who would attempt to stage a battle between Johnson and anyone else would be foolish.

The accusations that are being hurled by Frank Moran and his manager have opened the eyes of the public all over the world to the tactics Johnson has pursued. Further it has hurt the boxing game, which the big cotton-field negro has disgraced for years.

Johnson's career has been one long-continued scandal and the latest merely accepts his lack of character.

The fact that Moran and his manager confess that they signed an agreement to lay down to the negro and then tried to bat him puts them in a category slightly bel w his.

Study Johnson. He was a great fighter. He was starved and ill treated around Chicago during the boxing days, because the white fighters were afraid of him. In those days the big negro was quiet, courteous and seemingly honest.

He came with his hat off to ask favours, was ready to fight anyone for any part of the purse, and the managers and fighers refused him the chance. Sometimes he was hungry and often desperate. He probably could have whipped any heavyweight in the world, and was falling before second raters who had food sufficient for proper nourishment. I felt sorry for him. Several times I begged managers to give him a chance merely out of fair play.

He went to Australia and returned a champion. A perfect, physical animal, he came back in full manhood—and well fed. He came to see me with his hat off, smiling, glad to be home and evidently grateful for past favours. Then a swarm of sharpers, crooks and leeches swarmed upon him; white men worse than he was, catering to his vanity, his pride and his passions—because he was getting big money. Naturally the cotton-field negro "swelled." He commenced to show arrogance. He became detestable in his attitude toward whites, and from those who associated with him it was small wonder.

His fighting career has been marked with black. He "framed" at least two fights on the coast before he became champion and he was mixed in other shady deals.

Johnson wanted the championship. He felt practically certain he could whip Jeffries. The story of that fight at Reno never has been told. It is practically certain that there existed an agreement that Johnson was to lay down to Jeffries. It is certain that such an agreement was understood between certain parties connected with the fighters.

It is almost certain that the programme would have been carried out but for Billy Delaney. Delaney had made Jeffries. He had quarrelled with Jeffries over his marriage, and the old partnership was broken off, and hatred followed. Delaney was out for revenge. He went behind the negro. Two days before the date of the fight it became a certainty that Johnson was not going to lay down. Delaney told me he would not let Johnson quit and that rather than allow him to quit he would handle the case himself.

You remember that at that time Jeffries suddenly became morose, went away into the mountains and sulked. He must have known that if they fought squarely and Johnson tried he would be whipped. Johnson tried. Many think he double-crossed the Jeffries crowd.

Twice since then Johnson has been mixed in miserable fakes in the ring. He faked with Jim Johnson in Paris. Now he tries to "fix" a fight with a second-rater like Moran, who tries to double-cross him.

Isn't it wonderful what the boxing public will stand for? But this final blow is the limit. If they ever let Johnson fight again it will be in the hope that Sam Langford beats him, as he deserves. Nor is it any cinch they won't try to fix that. Truly, it is a lovely game.

Hastings Won From Norwood In Close Game

HASTINGS, July 31.— Hastings took another step nearer the district championship yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Norwood lacrosse team by the score of 8—6. The game was played before a big crowd and was decidedly interesting. The locals led all the way. At quarter time the score was 2—1; at the half 3—2; three-quarters, —3. It was in the third period that the locals got the bulge. Both teams had their regular payers. Norwood showed surprisingly good lacrosse, but the locals had it on them in shooting and corner all-round play. Norwood has still a good chance, and in the game on their home grounds will be expected to put up a strong game. The play to-day was clean all the way. Frank Doyle officiated.

THE PASSING OF LAJOIE

NEW YORK, July 29.—Napoleon Lajoie, the great second baseman of the Cleveland Americans, appears tottering upon the brink of oblivion so far as active service goes. The wonderful Frenchman has been benched by Manager Joe Birmingham, which seems to spell the beginning of the end.

It is only human for Larry to fail to realize that he is through. Reports from the west say he is raising ructions about being side-tracked. The old fellow still carries a punch, and no doubt can hang around Charles Somers' ball lot as long as he can hobble. But his retention now is simply a matter of sentiment.

Those who have seen Cleveland play recently realized that the mighty Frenchman was just about on his last legs. In spite of his spaving and spring tendons he assumed all his accustomed grace, but he couldn't cover a great deal more ground than that upon which he stood. He was painfully slow on the paths too. He migh still fit in handily with a team away up in the race because of his experience. But for the manager of a tailender Lajoie certainly is no prospect. His years of usefulness are behind him.

The passing of Lajoie has its pathetic side. Here is one of the most wonderful players of all time, now serving his eighteenth season, who never figured in a world's series. Mighty as Hans Wagner, the king of second basemen has had no classic windfalls from the game. In Cleveland Larry has been connected with some wonderful aggregations, teams which on paper figured to run away from the American League field. But none of them ever lasted to October's finish. No team, with the possible exception of New York, has suffered greater adversity from the uncontrolable breaks of the game.

Lajoie's apparent end is made more bitter from the fact that his present manager, Joe Birmingham, served under him when the king in his prime marshaled the Cleveland forces. The poor showing of the Forest City club this season has awakened resentment in the breast of Larry. He was forced to resign from the management after accomplishing better results than Birmingham has shown. Lajoie thinks now that he should have received a better opportunity to display his ability at leadership.

WELL KNOWN CONDUCTOR DEAD

The many friends in the City and vicinity of Mr. A. D. Stanton, late Conductor of the Belleville-Peterborough run of the G. T. R., will regret to hear of his death which occurred in the elevator shaft at the Union Station, Toronto, yesterday.

He was taken to Grace Hospital, where it was found that he was suffering from a broken leg and internal injuries, dying shortly afterwards. How he came by his death is a mystery, but it is well known that the elevator has not been running smoothly of late.

Ex-Conductor Stanton was well known in this district and was the first Conductor on the Belleville-Peterborough run. He was 60 years of age.

SOCIALIST IS KILLED.

French Leader Jaures Is Assassinated in Paris.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Jean Leon Jaures, the Socialist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, was assassinated yesterday.

M. Jaures was sitting in a cafe when a young man entered and fired several shots at him. Two of the bullets took effect in the head of the Socialist leader and he expired in a few minutes.

Jean Leon Jaures, the murdered leader of the French Socialists, was born in Castres, France, in 1858. He was elected member of the Chamber of Deputies in 1885, and has remained a member for Paris since that date. He was editor of La Petite Republican, and author of many books. Social science and economics were his chief studies. He was professor of philosophy at Alte and Toulouse Universities. A Socialist in politics, he was opposed to the reactionary policy of former Premier Briand and equally hostile to the putlar-revolutionary tactics of Gustav Herve, and the materialistic conceptions of Paul Lafargue.

Although a profound scholar and the most sincere advocate of the French workingmen's cause, strange to say the "syndicalists revolutionaire" fostered a hatred for him because of his attitude towards Parliamentary government and many attempts had previously been made to murder him.

He was chosen to lead the French Socialists at the International Socialistic Congress, which convenes in Vienna next week. He advocated world's peace, industrial co-operation, complete free education and public ownership of industries.

THOMAS SANDERS.

Mr. Alfred Sanders, North Monaghan, has received a wire from Seattle announcing the death of his brother, Thomas Sanders, at that City, on Sunday, July 26th, at the age of about 57 years. Mr. Sanders was a former resident of Douro, where he went to reside when he came to Canada with his parents from Staffordshire, England, in 1878. After six years' residence in Douro Mr. Sanders went west to Seattle, where he has since resided, and has grown and flourished with the city, which has increased a hundred fold in population since Mr. Sanders lived there. PARLEYS RESUMED

Russia and Austria Are in Direct Touch Again.

GERMANY IS STILL HOSTILE

Most Ominous Feature of Present Situation In Europe Is Fact That Germany Has Declared Martial Law and Is Probably Mobilizing Her Forces — Britain and France Hard at Work.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—In the desperate situation there are only two factors to-day giving the faintest hope of averting a general European war: First Russia and Austria are engaged again in direct negotiations. Second, both Great Britain and France are using their utmost endeavors in favor of peace.

On the other hand, Russia has ordered a general mobilization, and Germany has declared a state of siege, which is undoubtedly a prelude to, if it does not cover, mobilization.

France has not yet mobilized, but at Cabinet Councils which sat until late at night, decrees were issued establishing a moratorium (general suspension of business), and taking other action which could only be determined upon on the eve of war. Unofficially, the French army is being virtually mobilized.

A very circumstantial, though as yet unconfirmed, report published in Rome says that Germany is about to demand from both Russia and France the immediate cessation of mobilization. [illegible] hour (1 [illegible]

The German Ambassador has notified the French Government of his early departure.

Great Britain is practically, though not officially, mobilized, and the smaller European states, as a precaution, have ordered the mobilization of their armies — Belgium, Holland and Switzerland—to protect their territory from being used as a highway for the belligerents — Norway, Sweden and Denmark—to guard themselves on general principles.

Italy makes no announcement, and although a rumor credits her with the decision not to participate in the struggle, there is little doubt that she is making ready by mobilization.

Communication across Europe has been cut off, and there is a universal application of the censorship, with the result that it is impossible to obtain any accurate knowledge of what military operations are going on in Servia. All code telegrams are refused. In short, all the European nations are becoming isolated from each other by railway and telephone.

Official announcement of the resumption of the "conversation" at St. Petersburg and Vienna, came at the moment when pessimism had taken entire possession of the whole of Europe, and the hope that it might lead to a peaceable solution was grasped with desperation, but the news was offset later in the day by the proclamation of martial law in Germany, which was regarded as a preliminary to the mobilization of the German forces for war.

Ultimatum Sent?

LONDON, Aug. 1.—A despatch to The Daily Telegraph from Rome says a rumor was in circulation in Rome last night to the effect that Germany had sent an ultimatum to both Russia and France.

There is no confirmation of this rumor, and the rumor published by the Exchange Telegraph Company, but it is significant that the official agency at Rome, while repudiating responsibility for circulating these rumors, does not specifically deny them.

Dutch Army Mobilized.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 1. — Queen Wilhelmina of Holland yesterday afternoon issued an urgent decree ordering the general mobilization of the Dutch army.

Demonstration at Barcelona.

BARCELONA, Spain, Aug. 1.—Pro-Servian demonstrations in favor of Servia were organized here yesterday, but were dispersed by the police.

Belgium Guards Frontier.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 1.—Cavalry detachments have been sent to the eastern and southern frontiers. The National Bank has had coined 20,000,000 francs in gold.

Australian postal officials are planning to establish at busy street corners in cities combinations of letter boxes, telephone cabinets and stamp selling machines.

An electric light of small candle-power, mounted on a sewing machine to throw its rays on the work, will be more useful than a more powerful light some distance away.

OUR SERIAL STORY PAGE

"DARKNESS AND DAWN"

By Geo. Allan England

Now, vast and unknown factors of the struggle broadened rapidly before his mental vision, if this thing were really what it looked to be.

Keenly he peered at the bit of flint in his palm. There it lay, real enough, an almost perfect specimen of the flaker's art, showing distinctly where the wood had been applied to the core to peel off the many successive layers.

It could not have been above three and a half inches long, by one and a quarter wide, at its broadest part. The haft, where it had been hollowed to hold the lashings, was well marked.

A diminutive object and a skilfully-formed one. At any other time or place, the engineer would have considered the finding a good fortune; but now—!

"Yet after all," he said aloud, as if to convince himself, "it's only a bit of stone! What can it prove?"

His subconsciousness seemed to make answer: "So, too, the sign that Robinson Crusoe found on the beach was only a human footmark. Do not deceive yourself!"

In deep thought the engineer stood there a moment or two. Then, "Bah!" cried he. "What does it matter, anyhow? Let it come—whatever it is! If I hadn't just happened to find this, I'd have been none the wiser." And he dropped the bit of flint into the bag along with the other things.

Again he picked up his sledge, and, now more cautiously, once more started forward.

"All I can do," he thought, "is just to go right ahead as though this hadn't happened at all. If trouble comes, it comes, that's all. I guess I can meet it. Always have got away with it, so far. We'll see. What's on the cards has got to be played to a finish, and the best hand wins!"

He retraced his way to the spring, where he carefully rinsed and filled the Cosmos bottle for Beatrice. Then back to the Metropolitan he came, donned his bearskin, which he fastened with a wire nail, and started the long climb. His sledge he carefully hid on the second floor, in an office at the left of the stairway.

"Don't think much of this hammer, after all," said he. "What I need is an axe. Perhaps this afternoon I can have another go at that hardware place and find one.

"If the handle's gone, I can haft it with green wood. With a good axe and these two revolvers—till I find some rifles—I guess we're safe enough, spear-heads or not!"

About him he glanced at the ever-present moulder and decay. This office, he could easily see, had been both spacious and luxurious, but now it offered a sorry spectacle. In the dust over by a window something glittered dully.

Stern found it was a fragment of a bevelled mirror, which had probably hung there and, when the frame rotted, had dropped. He brushed it off and looked eagerly into it.

A cry of amazement burst from him.

"Do I look like that?" he shouted. "Well, I won't for long!"

He propped the glass up on the steel beam of the window-opening, and got the scissors out of the bag. Ten minutes later, the face of Allan Stern bore some resemblance to its original self. True enough, his hair remained a bit jagged, especially in the back, his brows were somewhat uneven, and the point to which his beard was trimmed was far from perfect.

But none the less his wild savagery had given place to a certain aspect of civilization that made the white bearskin ober his shoulders look doubly strange.

Stern, however, was well pleased. He smiled in saeisfaction.

"What will she think, and say?" he wondered, as he once more took up the bag and started on the long, exhausting climb.

Sweating profusely, badly "blown"—for he had not taken mich time to rest on the way—the engineer at last reached his offices in the tower.

Before entering, he called the girl's name.

"Beatrice! Oh, Beatrice! Are you awake, and visible?"

"All right, come in!" she answered cheerfully, and came to meet him in the doorway. Out to him she stretched her hand, in welcome; and the smile she gave him set sis heart pounding.

He had to laugh at her astonishment and naive delight over his changed appearance; but all the time his eyes were eagerly devouring her beauty.

For now, freshly-awakened, full of new life and vigour after a sound night's sleep, the girl was magnificent.

The morning light disclosed new glints of colour in her wondrous hair, as it lay broad and silken on the tiger-skin. This she had secured at the throat and waist with bits of metal taken from the wreckage of the filing-cabinet.

Stern promised himself that ere long he would find her a profusion of gold pins and chains, in some of the Fifth Avenue shops, to serve her purposes till she could fashion real clothing.

As she gave him her hand, the Bengal skin fell back from her round, warm, cream-white arm.

At sight of it, at vision of that massy crown of hair and of those grey, penetrant, questioning eyes, the man's spent breath quickened.

He turned his own eyes quickly away lest she should read his thought, and began speaking—of what? He hardly knew. Anything, till he could master himself.

But through it all he knew that in his whole life, till now self-centred, analytical, cold, he never had felt such real, spontaneous happiness.

The touch of her fingers, soft and warm, dispelled his every anxiety. The thought that he was working, now, for her, serving her, striving to preserve and keep her, thrilled him with joy.

And as some foregleam of the future came to him, his fears dropped from him like those outworn rags he had discarded in the forest.

"Well, so we're both up and at it, again," he exclaimed, commonplacely enough, his voice a bit uncertain. Stern had walked narow girders six hundred feet sheer up; he had worked in caissons under tide-water, with the air-pumps driving full tilt to keep death out.

He had swung in a bosun's chair down the face of the Yosemite Canyon at Cathedral Spires. But never had he felt emotions such as now. And greatly he mravelled.

"I've had luck," he continued. "See here, and here?"

He showed her his treasures, all the contents of the bag, except the spear-point. Then, giping her the Cosmos bottle, he bade her drink. Gratefully she did so, while he explained to her the finding of the spring.

Her face aglow with eagerness tnd brave entsusiasm, she listened. But when he told her about the bathing-pool, an envious expression came to her.

"It's not fair," she protested, "for you to monopolize that. If you'll show me the place—and just stay around in the woods, to see that nothing hurts me—"

"You'll take a dip, too?"

Eagerly she nodded, her eyes beaming.

"I'm just dying for one!" she exclaimed. "Think! I have not had a bath now, for x years!"

"I'm at your service," declared the engineer. And for a moment a little silence came between them, a silence so profound that they could even hear the faint, far cheepings of the mud-swallows in the tower stair above.

At the back of Stern's brain still lurked a haunting fear of the wood, of what the assegai-point might portend, but he dispelled it.

"Well, come along down," bade he. "It's getting late, already. But first, we must take just one more look, by this fresh morning light, from the platform up thove, there?"

She assented readily. Together, talking of their first urgent needs, of their plants for this new day, and for this wonderful, strange life that now confronted them, they climbed the stairs again. Once more they issued out on to the weed-grown platform of red tiles.

There they stood a moment looking out with wonder over that vast still, marvellous prospect of life-in-death. Suddenly the engineer spoke.

"Tell me," said he, "where did you get that line of verse you quoted last night. The one about this vast city-heart all lying still, you know?"

"That? Why, that was from Wordsworth's Sonnet on London Bridge, of course," she smiled at him. "You remember it now, don't you?"

"No-o," he disclaimed dubiously. "I—that is, I never was much on poetry, you understand. It wasn't exactly in my line. But never mind. How did it go? I'd like to hear, tremendously."

"I don't just recall the whole poem," she answered thoughtfully. "But I know part of it ran:

'—This city now doth like a garment wear
The beauty of the morning. Silent, bare,
Ships, towers, domes, theatres and temples lie
Open unto the fields and to the sky
All bright and glittering in the smokeless air.'"

A moment she paused to think. The sun, lancing its long and level rays across the water and the vast dead city, irradiated her face.

Instinctively, as she looked abroad over that wonderful panorama, she raised both bare arms; and clad in the tiger skin alone, stood for a little space like some Parsee priestess, sun worshipping, on her tower of silence.

Stern looked at her, amazed.

Was this, could this indeed be the girl he had employed, in the old days—the other days of routine and of tedium, of orders and of specifications and dry-as-dust dictation? As though from a strange spell he aroused himself.

"The poem?" exclaimed he. "What next?"

"Oh, that? I'd almost forgotten about that; I was dreaming. It goes this way, I think:

'Never did the sun more beautifully steep
In his first splendor valley, rock or hill,
Ne'er saw I, never felt a calm so deep;
The river glideth at his own sweet will.
Dear God! the very houses seem asleep,
And all this mighty heart is standing still!—'"

She finished the tremendous classic almost in a whisper.

They both stood silent a moment, gazing out together on that strange, inexplicable fulfilment of the poet's vision.

Up to them, through the crystal morning air, rose a faint, small sound of waters, from the brooklet in the forest. The nesting birds, below, were busy "in song and solace"; and through the golden sky above a swallow slanted on sharp wing toward some unseed, leafy goal.

Far out upon the river, faint specks of white wheeled and hovered—a flock of swooping gulls, snowy and beautiful and free. Their pinions flashed, spiralled, and sank to rest on the wide waters.

Stern breathed a sigh. His right arm shipped abou thes inuous, furrobed body of the girl.

"Come, now!" said he, with returning practicality. "Bath for you, breakfast for both of us—then we must buckle down to work. Come!"

(To be continued.)

The Earth's Interior.

That the interior of the earth is intensely hot is proved by the increase in temperature observed in deep mines and in even deeper borings. It is proved also by the emission of lava, which is nothing more than molten rock, from the craters of volcanoes. But the scientists, who maintain that the earth's interior is not fluid but of the consistency of steel, are probably correct just the same. Matter, when under great pressure, may be rigid even at enormously high temperature. The interior rocks of the earth may be heated to several thousand degrees and still be solid. When pushed up to the surface by volcanic action and relieved from pressure these solid, though superheated, rocks would become immediately liquefied. The practical deep well borers, who find that their drills are softened by the heat of the lower strata, have not got the laugh on the theoretic savants.—Philadelphia Record.

HARVEST BEGINS.

Farmers in Southern Alberta Start Cutting Grain.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 1.—One of the earliest harvests in the history of the west is now under way in southern Alberta. From Pincher Creek, Cardston, Nanton, Claresholm, Vulcan and Gleichen come reports to say that cutting has commenced, and that by the middle of next week the whole of southern Alberta will be in the hands of the harvesters.

Barley has been the principal grain to be harvested this week. Much wheat and oats will be in stook by this time next week. The crop has ripened very rapidly during the past ten days as the result of continued warm weather, and in consequence of such progress the tendency has been towards a lighter yield. In certain of the southern districts there has been no rain for nine weeks. Northeast of here, towards Stettler, the crop has matured very quickly, and considerable barley has been cut.

Lightning Strikes Barn.

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 1.—During a thunderstorm lightning struck a large barn on the farm of Robert McCannon of Glen Small, in the Township of Edwardsburg. Fire immediately started and the building, with a portion of the season's crop, together with two head of cattle and farming implements, were destroyed. The barn was one of the finest in the section.

Renewed Vigor In Old Age

This Letter Brings a Message of Cheer to the Aged—Results of Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

New, rich blood is what is most needed in the declining years to keep up energy and vitality. That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a wonderful help in maintaining good health and prolonging life is attested by the writer of this letter.

Mr. Stephen J. Leard, North Tryon, P.E.I., writes:—"At seventy-five years of age my heart gave out and became very irregular and weak in action and would palpitate. My nerves also became weak, and I could do nothing but lie in bed in a languishing condition, losing strength and weight. In that condition I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and am cured. Had I not obtained this treatment I would now be in the box with the roof over my nose. At eighty-one I have an energy which means go, and I am writing this letter so that old people like myself may prolong their hearth and strength by using this great medicine." 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. NOTHING BUT WAR IS LEFT FOR ENGLAND

Most People No Longer Doubt That Break With Germany Will Come Soon

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Aug. 3.—Enormous crowds were massed around the Houses of Parliament this afternoon. There was extreme tenseness in the air. There was no longer any doubt with most people that England would break with Germany, and place the blame on the Kaiser. Premier Asquith was expected to recite in his address the various efforts that had been made by King George for peace, and declare that Germany had invaded France and violated Belgium without justification, and announce that under the circumstances there was nothing left for England but war.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 3--Russian Troops have crossed into Germany at several points on the border, and Cossacks have raided the German Customs House. Russians drove the Germans back from Eydtkuhnen and a Column of artillery, with infantry supports, now holds that port.

Flies Fly Nearly Mile.

In 1906 three hundred marked flies were liberated at the Monsall Hospital, Manchester, England, and five were recovered at distances varying from thirty to 190 yards. In 1910 a series of experiments was undertaken under the auspices of the local Government board at Postwick, near Norwich. Several hundred chalk-powdered flies were liberated at a dump and were re-captured at distances exceeding 300 yards. Many of the flies traveled from 800 to 1,000 yards, which would bring them to the village, while the most strenuous of them went nearly a mile.

A brother officer exclaimed, as he stood over the supposed corpse, "Poor 'Glick' is dead." At that moment the power of speech returned to the count. "No, I'm not," he exclaimed, weakly. Old Civil Service Examination.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in one of her books gave an amusing example of the style of examination then in vogue in the British civil service. When Wright, afterwards before the advent of the competitive system. The young candidate was ushered into the room of the old chief clerk of the department, and this ordeal followed:

"Sit down, sir," roared in voice of thunder. Then after a painful pause: "Now, sir, attention. I shall examine you in arithmetic."

"Shall I not have pen and paper?"

"No, sir," thundered out the tyrant voice. "Attention! How much are two and two?"

Paralyzed by the voice and sudden question, the youth stared and then gasped out quite seriously:

"Four, sir."

"Quite right, sir," roared out the examiner, slapping him on the back. "You'll do, sir."

But the question surely should have been, "How many bees beans make five?"

Kent and Burr.

James Kent, famous for his "Commentaries on American Law," was a great admirer of Alexander Hamilton, and when the great Federalist was killed by Aaron Burr in a duel he became the implacable enemy of the latter. One day long afterward when in New York the judge saw Burr on the opposite side of Nassau street. He went across the street as fast as his years would permit and, brandishing his cane in Burr's face, shouted:

"You're a scoundrel, sir, a scoundrel, a scoundrel!"

Burr proved equal to the emergency. He raised his hat and bowed to the ground and then said in his calmest professional tone, "The opinions of the learned chancellor are always entitled to the highest consideration."

GREAT NEED FOR CHRIST'S KINGDOM

Bible Says World Needs Strong Monarchy.

THE RULE OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

Earth the One Rebellious Province of the Divine Empire — Not Ready For Its Own Control—Selfishness and Discontent About to Bring a World-wide Crash — Different Gospels Offered to Mankind—"The Hope Set Before Us in the Gospel" of Christ. Not Anarchy—Not Socialism — Not the Gospel of Discontent—The Desire of All Peoples Shall Come.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its insertion.]

August 2—The Photo - Drama of Creation continues to draw large crowds wherever it is presented. Many have voluntarily expressed their satisfaction at having their faith in the Bible as the Word of God restored by the Dramatic and sensible explanation of Scriptures hitherto misunderstood by them.

To-day Pastor Russell's text was, "And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all peoples shall come."—Haggai 2:7.

The Pastor began with the declaration that the only proper contentment is that which is combined with godliness and which sees from the standpoint of Scripture the Divine Power able to correct the difficulties which assail mankind. Thus instructed, the godly believer is able to appropriate the Divine promises of providential care, and so can be content with conditions which are not satisfactory.

On the other hand, he declared, those who either do not know of the Power Divine, or have lost their faith in Divine Wisdom, chafe more and more under present conditions. The more discontented they become, the greater is their tendency toward ungodliness, doubt of the Divine Love, Wisdom and Power. Self-dependence is a poor substitute; and as disappointments come, those inclined to combativeness find anger, malice, hatred, envy and strife surging through their minds. Then they become rabid Socialists, and are in a fair way to become eventually rabid anarchists.

Again, the speaker continued, we have those who term themselves Christian Socialists. These well-meaning souls perceive the situation of their brethren and say, "Yes, the world should be transformed socially. Its riches should not flow, as at present, into certain favored channels, but should be scattered everywhere for the general refreshment and comfort of mankind as a whole." This class philosophize on what God surely would, and surely would not, approve amongst men, and then declare that all Christians should at once set about to secure to the world of mankind a just division of God's bounties.

The love and zeal of this class for right principles we should admire and commend, the Pastor said. But we cannot commend their course, their hopes, their preaching, by which they seek to obtain the ends desired. Recognising the principles of Divine Justice, they seek to apply these, forgetful that they have not the Divine wisdom necessary to a proper application.

Next was shown that this class seem to forget also that human justice has been the same for several thousand years past, and that Divine Wisdom has not yet seen fit to establish Divine Justice amongst men. If they think that this is neglect on the part of the Almighty which they are wise enough to rectify, their thought is evidently an erroneous one. If, on the contrary, they believe that the time for the establishment of justice has now come, they should be able to find a Divine revelation to this effect and point it out to us—one practically authorising them to take their stand for Socialism, and explaining that the due time for the prosperity of justice has now come, and telling how they shall proceed and what will be the outcome.

The Pastor then discussed the world from the Bible standpoint. According to the Word of God, the world is not properly ready for its own control under any form of government. It is a rebellious province in the Divine Empire—one in which sin, selfishness and death constitute the ruling elements. The Bible declares that what the world needs is a monarchy — a strong, centralised government, in which the masses must not be allowed to have a voice at all, because in their fallen condition they do not know what is for their own highest good.

Furthermore, the Bible tells us that present institutions, under the power of selfishness driving the wealthy in one direction and the masses in the opposite direction, are about to bring a universal crash—anarchy. This and atheistic Socialism and Christian Socialism, and in a larger sense general selfishness and discontent, are urging on the two great combatants, both of whom will fall in the struggle, never to rise again. However, according to Scripture, they will be succeeded by the Kingdom of God's dear Son.

That strong Government, to [illegible] before every knee must bow and every tongue confess, to the glory of God, is the Kingdom that the world needs. Its rule of righteousness alone will bring to mankind the joy and peace and blessing which all crave, but which none of us are wise enough to know how to bring about—not even our Socialist friends. The part of faith and of wisdom is to look unto the Lord, from whom cometh our help. Nor should we look to Him to approve our methods, but rather to be informed respecting His methods and to co-operate to the extent of our abilities.

The Pastor next considered the views held by many who favor what is known as Christian Socialism. He read an extract from an old number of the "Christian Socialist," in which a Rev. Dr. Eliot White is reported to have said as follows:

"Let us answer, Hasten the day when Labor, united, shall shake off its chains! Our part as Christians is to help men out of every bondage! We are not perturbed that Socialism, in its eagerness to rid Labor of material bonds, has not yet realised the weight of bonds spiritual. That realization will come in good time, and Christianity must be ready to show the workers of the world how to be rid of all these fetters of the soul which material emancipation will but render more apparent. But for Christianity, as too often now, to profess desire to free men from spiritual bondage, while repudiating any call or need to strike fearless blows at their material prison bars, is to lay itself open to justifiable charges of hypocrisy. This must yield to braver counsels, though the striving be unto blood against the sin of slavery which still defiles modern industrialism.

"With widest meaning, then—inclusive of all that the most ardent and uncompromising Socialist lover of liberty has demanded, and embracing besides all that the Christian means when he proclaims the story of spiritual freedom, Christianity must now take up the challenge and cry with world-wide voice and a mighty thunder — 'Amen! even so, unite, ye workers; you have but your chains to lose, and you have a world to gain!'"

It was then pointed out that the writer of this extract and all who sympathise with his views should be willing to concede that if now is the proper time to get labor out of "the slavery of modern industrialism," then surely God is much interested in that release, more so than any others could possibly be, yea, and more so. If, then, this great Christian minister and others have received some special commission authorizing them to preach a new addition to the old Gospel, they should produce the proofs of such authorization. Until we see these we must doubt their existence.

Next the Pastor showed that, on the contrary, the Scriptures declare that there is but one Hope set before us in the Gospel, even as there "is but one Lord, one Faith and one Baptism." No one will ever succeed in making the world happy by preaching the Gospel of Discontent. Labor to-day is a hundredfold better fed, better clothed and better housed than in the days of our forefathers and, it is safe to say, a hundredfold more discontented. And the author of the above extract, with doubtless the very best intentions, is really doing harm by his gospel of Socialism; for he has neglected to consult the Word of God on this important subject.

Our Lord, it was pointed out, was surrounded by conditions of sickness, sorrow, poverty, etc., so that He could properly declare, "The poor ye have with you always." The Apostles were similarly situated. Yet have we any evidence whatever that any of these attempted to "break the chains of the slavery of Labor?" Assuredly not!

Many instances were cited from the life of Jesus, as recorded in the Gospels, to demonstrate that He did not set an example for these well-meaning but mistaken Christians. While the Master went about doing good and healing many sick folk, He by no means healed all the sick or comforted all that mourned. His favors were specialised; for instance, take the case of the impotent man at the Pool of Bethesda. The record is that "there were multitudes of impotent folk there." But only one was miraculously healed by our Lord.

Again, many widows were bereft of their sons; but only the widow of Nain had her son restored to her by the all-powerful word of our Redeemer. Our Lord came into the world, not to heal the sick, but to die for the race of Adam. The great work, the important work, of healing all the sick—the mentally, morally and physically sick — and of awakening all the dead, He left until the establishment of His Kingdom.

It was then pointed out that Christians likewise may do good to all men as they have opportunity, but that they must likewise wait for God's time and manner for the general healing of the world's sorrows and woes. When the prayer which our Master taught His disciples to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven," shall have had fulfilment, then all the blessing, all the helpfulness, necessary to the full recovery of our race will be brought into operation. Meantime, it is not possible for any man or for any set of men, Christians or otherwise, either to improve upon God's great Plan of the Ages or to hasten that Plan.

Frequently reference is made to the fact that at its beginning the early Church established a communistic society. The Pastor demonstrated that this was not a worldly organisation nor was it made by those who recognised worldly principles, but that it was merely a social arrangement whereby the Church at Jerusalem sought to deal with its members as one family. The project was not successful; it did not persist; it did not have Apostolic commendation to other ecclesias. The conclusion, therefore, is that the arrangement was Divinely permitted in order to show the Lord's people throughout this Gospel Age the impracticability of such an arrangement at the present time.

Christian Socialists would probably tell us, said the Pastor, that Socialists are crying out that they do not find Heavenly hopes satisfactory; that they desire earthly hopes, riches and comforts, and intend to have these; and that what the people desire is what the pulpit must supply. They add the intimation that unless the people get what they wish, the influence of religion will wane and ministers will become bach numbers, whom no one will care to hear, much less to heed. His reply was that this is all very true. But the difficulty, he claimed, is that the Gospel Message is not properly presented to the people. The Message which our Lord and His Apostles taught is a consistent one; whereas the message from the majority of pulpits to-day is inconsistent.

The people are told, by both Catholics and Protestants, that there is a Heaven for the saintly who, before dying, shall become firmly established in the graces of the Holy Spirit; but that with the masses it is different. These are told by Catholics that after death centuries of torment await them in Purgatory, and by Protestants that they will have an eternity of torment without hope of release. Then both Catholics and Protestants unite in telling the poor world that such an arrangement is the provision of a just and lovely God, for which they should be deeply thankful; and additionally, that the troubles of this present life are partial penances for sin.

Then the Pastor turned from the false conceptions of the Dark Ages to the Gospel presented by our Lord and His Apostles. The Truth is so much more reasonable, so much more just, loving and wise, he declared, that whoever hears it experiences a satisfaction which error can never produce. He declared that the Scriptures clearly teach that ours is a convict race, condemned to death because of Father Adam's disobedience; for as his children we have inherited a share in his death sentence — not in an eternal torment sentence. He reminded his audience that the Bible tells that Satan, who misled our first parents by misrepresenting God and and His Word, has continued to misrepresent the Creator to mankind; and that it is the Adversary who is responsible for the "doctrines of devils" (1 Timothy 4:1) respecting the torture of the dead, who, the Scriptures declare, "know not anything."—Ecclesiastes 9:5.

The speaker then pointed out that the Scriptures tell us that God, seeing that many of our race, dying because of Adam's disobedience, would gladly return to fellowship with their Creator and be recovered from sin and death conditions, has made a provision for them. Our Lord Jesus by His death has purchased the lives and liberties of Adam and his entire race.

It was next shown why the Messianic Kingdom was not set up immediately after our Lord's ascension. Scriptures were cited to demonstrate that before the Kingdom is established amongst men the Kingdom class must first be found — the Little Flock, to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom, as Jesus declared. This class is to be composed of the saintly few who form positive characters for righteousness by faithfully following in the footsteps of their Redeemer. The Kingdom will not be established until this class is completed—very soon, the speaker believes.

In conclusion, the Pastor called attention to the prophecy which declares that the desire of all peoples shall come, and expressed his belief that all the world would desire the coming of the glorious Messianic Kingdom if they only knew about it. All ministers of God should hold up before the people the glorious Gospel of Christ. This will bring joy and peace to all hearts, notwithstanding the incidental trials, difficulties and weaknesses of this present time of distress. Socialism, he believes, stirs up the minds of men to dissatisfaction, worry, fear, strife and is leading them on into the great time of anarchistic trouble. The Gospel Message, on the contrary, is helpful, comforting, sustaining.

So then, the work of Christian ministers, as Divinely appointed, is to let the world alone to be dealt with in God's due time, and to comfort, sustain and instruct merely those whom they find to have the hearing ear of faith. These are to know the Truth, and the Truth will make them free from error and superstition, and also bring them to the place of full consecration to God—sanctification. Such are in the inferred re-

FLYWHEELS IN WARFARE.

As Projectiles They Would Mow Down Everything in Their Way.

A big flywheel spinning rapidly received a much greater danger than that of merely exploding. The explosion of a flywheel is due to centrifugal force and causes pieces of the wheel to fly off at a tangent in the plane of the wheel, but in practically every direction in this plane. But consider for a moment what would happen if a flywheel were to become loose from its bearings and stay whole.

The great velocity of rotation would be changed to velocity of translation, and the wheel would travel with lightning swiftness along the floor in the direction of rotation. It would act like a locomotive wheel going at tremendous speed. Of course, if it were to drop in a puddle of oil it would not go far, but simply slip like an engine wheel on an oiled track. But with no oil to check its course the results would be awful to contemplate.

Suppose that the wheel was forty feet in circumference and was rotating at 1,500 revolutions a minute. A point on the wheel would then be traveling 72,000 feet a minute, or about 800 miles an hour. This is as fast as a cannon ball and, of course, the wheel would act in a similar manner to a cannon ball—it would be a mighty projectile that would go through almost anything. It is this danger which keeps the size and speed of flywheels down in practice, especially aboard ship.

It is possible that projectiles will yet be made on this principle for certain purposes. Think what an army could do at short range if it was equipped with hundreds of big flywheels that could be released. They would travel along the ground at great speed and would simply mow down everything in their way. The only drawback to the use of flywheels in this way is the resistance of the ground, and that would not hold for a distance as short as half a mile.

While an ordinary projectile hits in one spot only, the flywheel would cover an area as wide as the wheel and as long as the path over which it traveled. Therefore it is hardly possible that any wheel would become spent without doing great damage. It could be pretty accurately aimed and, on account of its gyroscopic effect, would travel in practically a straight line. Its gyroscopic effect would not, however, keep it from going up or down a hill, but would prevent it from deviating from its path otherwise.

Defense against such a projectile would be hard to get.—New York American.

Pretty Useful Shoes.

It would be difficult to realize what the Frieslapdes would do without his klompen or wooden shoes, for they have a hundred uses. With them he bails out his boat, corrects his children and scoops up a drink of water wherever he may be. He places in them his worms for fishing, uses them as missiles in a free fight, measures dry goods with them and a hundred other things. The klompen are cheap. They cost about fifteen pence a pair, man's size, and Dutchmen's feet are not Cinderella-like by any means.—Wide World Magazine.

An Awful Disaster!

Mr. Harold Hilton, the well known English golfer, tells a story of a Scotch caddie who always wore a "deerstalker" cap with the flap tied tightly down over his ears.

One day somebody noticed that the flaps were up, and he naturally asked the reason for the change.

"I hinna had them doon since ma accident," replied the caddie.

"Accident!" exclaimed the golfer; "what accident? I haven't heard about it."

"Ah, well," the caddie explained, "ye see, a gentleman offered me a drink oot o' his whusky-flask, an' I didna hear him."

Heavy Damage By Insects.

That damage to the extent of fifty million dollars is done to Canadian crops every year by insects is stated in a bulletin of the Conservation Commission. Birds and parasites are the natural enemies of these destructive insects, as many as 5,000 being found in the stomachs of a single bird.

Old Time Gas Charges.

The price of gas in the early part of the last century is shown by a schedule of charges issued by the Liverpool Gaslight company in the year 1817. Instead of so much per cubic foot being levied, each individual burner was charged for, and the price varied according to the hour at which the light was to be extinguished. Thus for using one No. 1 Argand burner up till 8 p. m. £3 per annum had to be paid. For the right to keep it alight until 9 £3 18s. was the figure, while those roistering blades who sat up till 10, 11 or 12 had to disburse £4 10s., £5 12s. and £6 8s. respectively. Imagine the gas bill at a house where ten or twelve burners are flaring away until the small hours if such a method of taxation were in force nowadays!—Liverpool Post.

A DREAM AND A LETTER.

Maybe Merely a Coincidence, Maybe a Spirit Message.

The following story of a dream was told to a correspondent by an acquaintance who is about as stolid and unimaginative a man as one could meet:

He had a friend of whom he had lost sight of for some time. This friend committed suicide and one night, soon after he had done so, the unimaginative man dreamed that he was walking along a street after dusk when the ghost of the dead man appeared to him and requested him to follow it. He did so, and it led him to a house, the door of which was open, and then up some stairs to a room where there was a table on which lay a number of books, all of which were lying open.

The dead man had been a great reader and therefore there was nothing unusual in the appearance of a great many books in his room. The ghost turned to the unimaginative man and begged him to turn over a page of each book so that it might continue to read. He did so, and he remembers that the last became petulant when he turned over two pages in mistake. When all the pages were turned the last appeared to be happy.

The dreamer awoke and told his wife about it. When he went down to breakfast he found a letter lying on the table bearing the postmark of a town of which he had no knowledge other than its name. He had never been there, nor, so far as he was aware, had the dead man, nor had he any friends or relatives in the town. The only relative of the dead man of whom he had any knowledge lived in another city.

When he opened the envelope he found inside it a small photograph of the dead man, showing his bust only. There was not any letter inclosed with it, nor anything to denote by whom it had been sent, and to this day he does not know from whom he received it.—Manchester Guardian.

A Remarkable Sequence.

A strange fatality seems to be connected with the office of the Mayor of Ultenhage in South Africa. Fourteen gentlemen have occupied that position, and thirteen are dead. No ex-mayor save one has lived for more than a year or so after vacating the civic chair, and the extraordinary thing is that twelve of the fourteen died on a Saturday and were buried on a Sunday. The late Mr. Ward passed away at Eea Point recently, on a Friday, and was therefore the only exception in this respect. But he, too, was the thirteenth out of the fourteen to be interred in Ultenhage on a Sunday.

This curious fatality rather got on the nerve of the late Mr. T. W. Mills, M.L.A., while Mayor of Ultenhage, and it was his custom to close his game of bridge at midnight on Saturday with the pious remark: "Well, thank God there's another Saturday safely over." He eventually retired from the council, entered Parliament, contracted heart disease, died on a Saturday, and was buried on a Sunday.—Oudtshoorn Courant.

Monkey Plays Billiards.

Among the holiday attractions at the Anglo-American Exposition at Shepherd's Bush will be a monkey, which, among other attainments, can play billiards.

"Yacob Straus," as the monkey has been named, is an orangoutang, the only one ever trained to appear in public, other noted monkey performers having been chimpanzees. The animal goes through a performance on horizontal bars, cycles, smokes a cigarette, and concludes by drinking a Manhattan cocktail.

Skin Trouble On The Scalp

Skin Dried and Cracked and Hair Fell Out—Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Eczema is annoying and distressing at any time, but doubly so when it gets into the scalp and causes the hair to fall out. Here is a grateful letter from a lady who was cured by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mrs. Hector Currie, Tobermory, Ont., writes:—"I was cured of a disagreeable skin disease of the scalp by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. The trouble started with itching and pain in the scalp, the skin would get dry and crack, and at times would bleed, and the hair would fall out. I tried three doctors without benefit, and suffered for three years. Reading in the almanac about Dr. Chase's Ointment, I began its use, and am now completely cured. The hair has grown again, and I am as well as I ever was. You are at liberty to use this letter, for I am glad to recommend so excellent a treatment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment has no rival as a cure for itching skin disease.

THE STORY OF RICHARD DOUBLEDICK

By CHARLES DICKENS

CHARLES DICKENS

MARY STEWART CUTTING

Twenty-four famous authors were asked recently to name the best short story in the English language. Mary Stewart Cutting named "The Story of Richard Doubledick," by Charles Dickens, as her selection for this high honor in the world of fiction.

PART II.

OVER and over again the sun rose and set upon the crowded city; over and over again the moonlight nights were quiet on the plains of Waterloo; and all that time was a blank to what had been Richard Doubledick.

Slowly laboring at last through a long, heavy dream of confused time and place, presenting faint glimpses of army surgeons whom he knew and of faces that had been familiar to his youth—dearest and kindest among them Mary Marshall's, with a solicitude upon it more like reality than anything he could discern—Lieutenant Richard Doubledick came back to life—to the beautiful life of a calm autumn evening sunset, to the peaceful life of a fresh, quiet room with a large window standing open, a balcony beyond in which were moving leaves and sweet smelling flowers; beyond, again, the clear sky, with the sun full in his sight, pouring its golden radiance on his bed.

It was so tranquil and so lovely that he thought he had passed into another world. And he said in a faint voice, "Taunton, are you near me?"

A face bent over him—not his, his mother's.

"I came to nurse you. We have nursed you many weeks. You were moved here long ago. Do you remember nothing?"

"Nothing."

The lady kissed his cheek and held his hand, soothing him.

"Where is the regiment? What has happened? Let me call you mother. What has happened, mother?"

"A great victory, dear. The war is over, and the regiment was the bravest in the field."

His eyes kindled, his lips trembled, he sobbed, and the tears ran down his face. He was very weak—too weak to move his hand.

"Was it dark just now?" he asked presently.

"No."

"It was only dark to me? Something passed away, like a black shadow. But as it went and the sun—oh, the blessed sun, how beautiful it is!—touched my face, I thought I saw a light white cloud pass out at the door. Was there nothing that went out?"

She shook her head, and in a little while he fell asleep, she still holding his hand and soothing him.

From that time he recovered—slowly, for he had been desperately wounded in the head and had been shot in the body, but making some little advance every day.

One day he awoke out of a sleep refreshed and asked her to read to him. But the curtain of the bed, softening the light, which she always drew back when he awoke that she might see him from her table at the bedside where she sat at work, was held undrawn, and a woman's voice spoke, which was not hers.

"Can you bear to see a stranger?" it said softly. "Will you like to see a stranger?"

"Stranger!" he repeated. The voice awoke old memories before the days of Private Richard Doubledick.

"A stranger now, but not a stranger once," it said in tones that thrilled him. "Richard, dear Richard, lost through so many years, my name"—

He cried out her name, "Mary!" and she held him in her arms, and his head lay on her bosom.

"I am not breaking a rash vow, Richard. These are not Mary Marshall's lips that speak. I have another name."

She was married.

"I have another name, Richard. Did you ever hear it?"

"Never!"

He looked into her face, so pensively beautiful, and wondered at the smile upon it through her tears.

"Think again, Richard. Are you sure you never heard my altered name?"

"Never!"

"Don't move your head to look at me, dear Richard. Let it lie here while I tell my story. I loved a generous, noble man, loved him with my whole heart; loved him for years and years, loved him faithfully, devotedly, loved him with no hope of return, loved him, knowing nothing of his highest qualities—not even knowing that he was alive. He was a brave soldier. He was honored and beloved by thousands of thousands, when the mother of his dear friend found me and showed me that in all his triumphs he had never forgotten me. He was wounded in a great battle. He was brought, dying, here into Brussels. I came to watch and tend him, as I would have joyfully gone, with such a purpose to the dreariest ends of the earth. When he knew no one else he knew me. When he suffered most he bore his sufferings barely murmuring, content to rest his head where yours rests now. When he lay at the point of death he married me that he might call me wife before he died. And the name, my dear love, that I took on that forgotten night"—

"I know it now!" he sobbed. "The shadowy remembrance strengthens. It is come back. I thank heaven that my mind is quite restored! My Mary, kiss me. Let this weary head to rest, or I shall die of gratitude. His parting words were fulfilled. I see home again!"

Well! They were happy. It was a long recovery, but they were happy through it all. The snow had melted on the ground and the birds were singing in the leafless thickets of the early spring when those three were first able to ride out together and when people flocked about the open carriage to cheer and congratulate Captain Richard Doubledick.

But even then it became necessary for the captain, instead of returning to England, to complete his recovery in the climate of southern France. They found a spot upon the Rhone, within a ride of the old town of Avignon and within view of its broken bridge, which was all they could desire. They lived there together six months, then returned to England. Mrs. Taunton, growing old after three years—though not so old as that her bright, dark eyes were dimmed—and remembering that her strength had been benefited by the change, resolved to go back for a year to those parts. So she went with a faithful servant, who had often carried her son in his arms, and she was to be rejoined and escorted home at the year's end by Captain Richard Doubledick.

She wrote regularly to her children (as she called them now), and they to her. She went to the neighborhood of Aix, and there, in their own chateau near the farmer's house she rented she grew into intimacy with a family belonging to that part of France. The intimacy began in her often meeting among the vineyards a pretty child, a girl with a most compassionate heart, who was never tired of listening to the solitary English lady's stories of her poor son and the cruel wars. The family were as gentle as the child, and at length she came to know them so well that she accepted their invitation to pass the last month of her residence abroad under their roof. All this intelligence she wrote home, piecemeal as it came about, from time to time, and at last inclosed a polite note from the head of the chateau soliciting, on the occasion of his approaching mission to that neighborhood, the honor of the company of cet homme si justement celebre, M. le Capitaine Richard Doubledick.

Captain Doubledick, now a hardy handsome man in the full vigor of life, broader across the chest and shoulders than he had ever been before, dispatched a courteous reply and followed it in person. Traveling through all that extent of country after three years of peace, he blessed the better days on which the world had fallen. The corn was golden, not drenched in unnatural red; was bound in sheaves for food, not trodden underfoot by men in mortal fight. The smoke rose up from peaceful hearths, not blazing ruins. In a softened spirit he reached the old chateau near Aix upon a deep blue evening.

It was a large chateau of the genuine old ghostly kind, with round towers and extinguishers and a high leaden roof and more windows than Aladdin's palace. The lattice blinds were all thrown open after the heat of the day, and there were glimpses of rambling walls and corridors within. Then there were immense outbuildings fallen into partial decay, masses of dark trees, terrace gardens, balustrades, tanks of water too weak to play and too dirty to work, statues, weeds and thickets of iron railing that seemed to have overgrown themselves like the shrubberies and to have branched out in all manner of wild shapes. The entrance doors stood open, and the captain walked in.

He walked into a lofty stone hall, refreshingly cool and gloomy after the glare of the southern day's travel. Extending along the four sides of this hall was a gallery leading to suits of rooms, and it was lighted from the top. Still no bell was to be seen.

"Faith," said the captain halting, ashamed of the clanking of his boots, "this is a ghostly beginning!"

He started back and felt his face turn white. In the gallery looking down at him stood the French officer—the officer whose picture he had carried in his mind so long and so far. Compared with the remembered original at last—in every lineament how like it was!

He moved and disappeared, and Captain Richard Doubledick heard his steps coming quickly down into the hall. He entered through an archway. There was a bright, sudden look upon his face, much such a look as it had worn in that fatal moment at Badajos.

M. le Capitaine Richard Doubledick? Enchanted to receive him! A thousand apologies! The servants were all out in the air. There was a little fete among them in the garden. In effect it was the fete day of my daughter, the little cherished and protected of Mme. Taunton.

He was so gracious and so frank that M. le Capitaine Richard Doubledick could not withhold his hand. "It is the hand of a brave Englishman," said the French officer, retaining it while he spoke. "I could respect a brave Englishman even as my foe, how much more as my friend! I also am a soldier."

"He has not remembered me as I have remembered him. He did not take such note of my face that day as I took of his," thought Captain Richard Doubledick. "How shall I tell him?"

The French officer conducted his guest into a garden and presented him to the wife, an engaging and beautiful woman, sitting with Mrs. Taunton in a whimsical old fashioned pavilion. His daughter, her fair young face beaming with joy, came running to embrace him, and there was a boy baby to tumble down among the orange trees on the broad steps in making for his father's legs. A multitude of children visitors were dancing to sprightly music, and all the servants and peasants about the chateau were dancing too. It was a scene of innocent happiness that might have been invented for the climax of the scenes of peace which had soothed the captain's journey.

He looked on, greatly troubled in his mind, until a resounding bell rang, and the French officer begged to show him his rooms. They went upstairs into the gallery from which the officer had looked down, and M. le Capitaine Richard Doubledick was cordially welcomed to a grand outer chamber and a smaller one within, all clocks and draperies and hearths and brazen dogs and tiles and cool devices and elegance and vastness.

"You were at Waterloo?" said the French officer.

"I was," said Captain Richard Doubledick. "And at Badajos."

Left alone with the sound of his own stern voice in his ears, he sat down to consider, What shall I do and how shall I tell him? At that time unhappily many deplorable duels had been fought between English and French officers arising out of the recent war, and these duels and how to avoid this officer's hospitality were the uppermost thought in Captain Richard Doubledick's mind.

He was thinking and letting the time run out in which he should have dressed for dinner when Mrs. Taunton spoke to him outside the door asking if he could give her the letter he had brought from Mary. "His mother, above all," the captain thought. "How shall I tell her?"

"You will form a friendship with your host, I hope," said Mrs. Taunton, whom he hurriedly admitted, "that will last for life. He is so true hearted and so generous, Richard, that you can hardly fail to esteem one another. If he had been spared"—she kissed, not without tears, the locket in which she wore his hair—"he would have appreciated him with his own magnanimity and would have been truly happy that the evil days were past which made such a man his enemy."

She left the room, and the captain walked first to one window, whence he could see the dancing in the garden, then to another window, whence he could see the smiling prospect and the peaceful vineyards.
